Police are in ambulances with Chaulk

NEWTON — Police Chief William Quinn this week found himself defending the use of police officers in Chaulk Ambulance rescue vehicles.

Chaulk, a private firm based in Framingham, took over the emergency service from the Fire Department on Monday morning. In an effort to assure that Chaulk personnel are familiar with city streets, Quinn has decided to put one police officer in two rescue vehicles from 8 a.m. to midnight.

In a meeting of the Board of Aldermen's Public Safety Committee, several aldermen argued that Chaulk should pay the salaries of officers riding in the ambulances.

Quinn, who is responsible for monitoring Chaulk ambulances, argued that the officers are not only acquainting Chaulk employees with city streets, but also "patroling the city." He also stressed that Chaulk did not request the use of police personnel.

Quinn made the decision to put the officers in the ambulances after a suggestion by one of his officers.

Ald. Mark White, a mayoral candidate who led the fight to retain the fire service, said that Chaulk should pay for the men who are being taken out of the department's fleet of class five ambulance cruisers.

White, who noted aldermen predicted that the Chaulk service will cost the city additional monies, said he was "not pleased" by the decision to put officers in the ambulances.

He protested, "You are telling me that these people don't know the streets! Chaulk came in here and said it wouldn't cost us a dime." White also requested that Quinn provide aldermen with detailed reports on the response times of Chaulk which are being "closely monitored" by the Police Department.

Quinn countered: "Give them a chance. We are monitoring it because we are worried about those people out there."

"We are going to make this work," added a determined Quinn. "There are some people out there who would like to see this fail. I don't, because one failure will hurt a citizen."

"Give us a chance to get it off the ground," he pleaded.

Quinn reported there were "no problems" on the first day of emergency service by Chaulk. However, he added that the new ambulances which Chaulk promised have not arrived. Quinn

Locally, the race is on

NEWTON – And then there were 53.

What started as a city election potentially involving more than 70 candidates, wound up a field of 53 candidates in all last week when Newton residents considering running for office took their nomination papers to City Hall for certification.

There will be seven preliminary, or run-off, elections in a variety of races in September if all papers are certified by the Election Commission. Candidates had until 5 p.m. Tuesday to withdraw their names.

The premiere race in September will be the three-way duel among contenders for mayor for the two spots on the November ballot.

Running in the preliminary are incumbent Mayor Theodore Mann, Ward 7 Alderman-at-large Mark White and newcomer Bruce Marquis of Waban.

The two with the most votes in September will meet head-on in November.

In School Committee races, it's either a preliminary or no contest at all.

Contested School Committee races are in Wards 1 and 2. In Ward 1, the candidates are Jonathan Brant, 33 Maple Lane; David Wilbourn, 6 Surrey Rd.; and Leonard Gentile, 20 Emerald St.

The Ward 1 seat was held by Committeeman Howard Spergel, who announced in the spring he was moving out of the city and would not be a candidate for reelection.

In Ward 2, incumbent Kathy Jones is challenged by perennial candidate Kenneth Hartford, 30 Clarendon St., and Allan Ciccone of 105 Fair Oaks Ave., former head of the local police union.

School Committee incumbents Nancy Mann (Ward 3), Susan Silbey (Ward 4), Ann Berwick (Ward 6) and Robert Ricles (Ward 8) will be reelected without opposition.

Newcomers Marcia Mitchell of Ward 5 and James Mnookin of Ward 7 will also be elected without opposition.

Some local political observers see the loss of fiscal autonomy by the schools as the reason for the complete lack of interest in School Committee races this year.

In the past, the School Committee was the focus of legendary battles for control of the city's schools. A group of conservatives rose up one year and ousted the liberal majority on the School Committee, and two years later well-organized liberals got the School Committee back in their corner.

Firing of officer reviewed by committee

NEWTON — Police Chief William Quinn met with members of the aldermanic Public Safety Committee behind closed doors this week to answer questions on the firing of Officer Harold Hollie.

Quinn was quizzed by committee members on the firing of Hollie for about an hour. However City Solicitor Dan Funk, along with Quinn, threatened to leave the meeting unless Hollie was barred from the executive session.

Hollie was allowed to attend the executive session after aldermen insisted that "legal strategy" would not be discussed with Hollie present.

Hollie, a black officer who filed discrimination charges against the department in February, was fired for insubordination on April 30 after a three-day administrative hearing. Hollie is appealing the dismissal before the state Civil Service Commission. Several aldermen believe Hollie was unfairly dismissed.

Under state law, aldermen can discuss several items, such as legal strategy and the character of city employees, behind closed doors.

"I am really annoyed," remarked Funk when several aldermen urged that Hollie be allowed to attend the session. "We came here in good faith and thought that this would be a true executive session. If Mr. Hollie is here or his attorney (is here), I can assure you we will leave in a second."

Funk charged that the aldermen were "perpetrating a ruse on the city itself" by allowing Hollie to attend the session.

"If you can't live up to a true executive session, we may as well leave now," snapped Funk as he shook his head in disgust.

He explained: "I feel insulted now and I dare say the chief does too. The city's interests area at stake here; in addition to Mr. Hollie's."

Mofenson to battle for condos

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Former state representative David Mofenson has been hired to council CHR General Inc., the firm converting Chestnut Hill Gardens into condominiums, in its battle to block the enactment of a city ordinance which would protect renters from short-term notice conversion.

CHR General is already being represented by the Boston law firm of Ropes and Gray.

Mofenson, who lost out in his bid for a seat in Congress to Barney Frank last fall, is the first cousin of State Rep. David Cohen. Cohen along with Ald. Ethel Sheehan are co-sponsors of the ordinance.

CHR General, a subsidiary of the Connecticut Bank and Trust, presented a revamped marketing plan to tenants on July 16 after deciding to go through with the conversion. Chestnut Hill Gardens Associates (CHGA), the firm which had begun marketing the building as condominiums, withdrew as contract purchasers of the complex on July 10.

Despite the new plan, tenants of the 422-unit complex as well as their allies on the Board of Aldermen have said they will continue to push the ordinance. Tenants, with the aid of State Sen. Jack Backman, are also fighting the original developers in the courtroom.

The force behind the tenants' uproar is their claim that they were promised by developers that the complex would remain as rental property for at least 14 years.

However, Peter Shapiro, vice president of Connecticut Bank and Trust has requested that aldermen allow their plan to run its course before they vote on the ordinance. The bank has sent each alderman a packet outlining the new marketing plan.

"What we're trying to do is attain a fair a amount of time to allow our program to unfold," said Shapiro. "Then the economics would permit us the program we're offering." He mentioned that a month's time, until Labor Day, as a reasonable cut off day.

"If the ordinance passes as currently proposed, we might not be able to offer the same program we're offering," continued Shapiro. He noted that the bank "might not be able to offer" lifetime tenancy for the 15 units it has set aside as one example.

Ossinger suit against city is thrown out

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

BOSTON — Middlesex Superior Court Judge Paul Connolly this week rejected a motion by city attorneys to dismiss a $1.1 million lawsuit brought against Mayor Theodore Mann by his former secretary, Diana Ossinger.

Connolly, however, did accept the motion by City Solicitor Daniel Funk and Asst. City Solicitor Kathleen Torres to dismiss the suit against the city.

Ossinger was acquitted of stealing more than $24,000 from Mann last October by a Middlesex County jury. Ossinger worked as Mann's confidential secretary for nearly eight years until she was fired after a police investigation in February 1980.

Ossinger was charged with cashing 58 of the mayor's paychecks over a 44-month period beginning in 1976 by cashing them at the Newton Treasurer's Office.

Responding to Connolly's split decision on the two motions to dismiss the lawsuit, Funk said: "I have mixed feelings. I am pleased that the city was knocked out ... I was a little surprised that the mayor was not knocked out."

He added: "I am confident that Mrs. Ossinger will not be able to make a case against the mayor as it proceeds either on the facts or the law."

Ossinger was initially found guilty of charges by a Newton District Court Judge. Since the innocent veridict, Ossinger has been attempting to regain her former position and backpay and benefits. Boston Attorneys

Pay raise for mayor

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON - On the recommendation of Chairman Edward Richmond, the aldermanic Finance Committee has voted to raise the salary of the office of mayor to $48,240 by Jan. 1, 1985.

The raise, which would be at a rate of 6.5 percent per year effective Jan. 1, 1982, was proposed by Richmond as a "cost-of-living increase."

The suggested pay boost comes despite a 4 to 2 vote by the Citizens Committee on Mayoral and Aldermanic Pay not to raise the salary of the office of mayor. However, because the seven-member committee did not get a five member vote on the prevailing side, it did not voice a recommendation.

The Finance Committee went along with the advisory group recommendation that aldermanic pay be increased $400 bringing the salary to $2,200 per year.

Both committee recommendations will now go before the Legislation and Rules Committee Wednesday night and then to the full board on Aug 10.

David Wilbourn, School Committee

NEWTON — David S. Wilbourn' 47, of 6 Surrey Rd., Newton, has announced his candidacy for the Ward 1 School Committee seat being vacated by Howard Spergel.

"I am a candidate this year because the decisions to be made will shape the quality of public education in Newton for years to come," Wilbourn said. "The financial pressures will be severe - possibly worse in the second year of 2 ½ than in the first."

"Major issues will include pupil/teacher ratios, programs in art, music, and physical education, special needs programs, and the balance between cost and variety of courses in the secondary schools.

David Wilbourn

"Calling attention to deep cuts in books, supplies, maintenance, and development in this year's budget, he said "We simply must provide for these items in the long run, or education will deteriorate."

Wilbourn stressed the need to work cooperatively with the Board of Aldermen, and to build a new constituency for the schools. "I would feel it my obligation as a School Committee member not only to get our money's worth, but to present our budget clearly to the aldermen and the people of Newton."

A native of Providence, R.I.' Wilbourn graduated with honors from MIT. He served as a company commander in the U.S. Army' and was president of a small chemical firm in New York before returning to MIT as a Sloan Fellow in 1969-70. Since 1970 he has been chairman of the board of Keltron Corp., an electronics manufacturing company in Waltham.

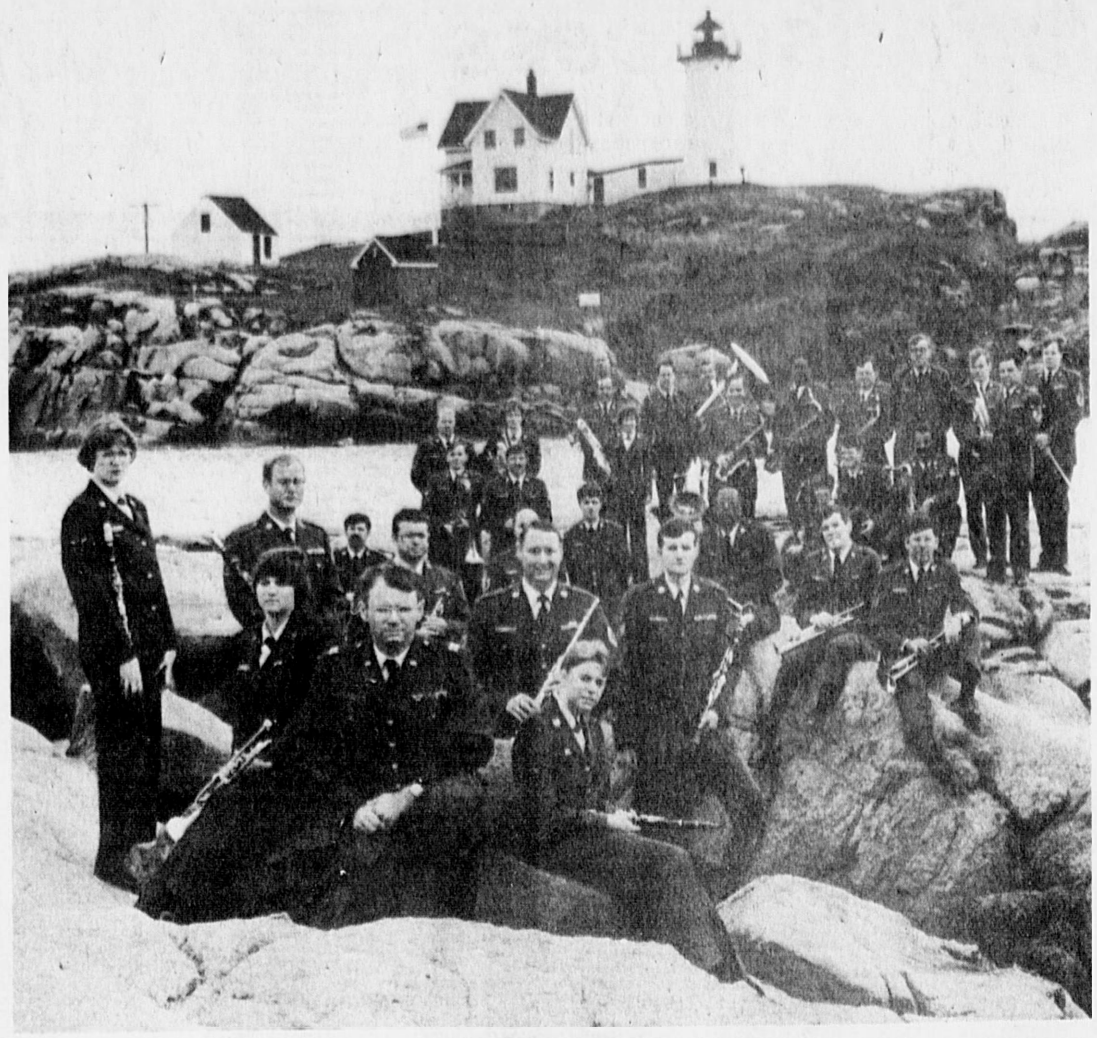

His wife, Joyce, is a nurse, and currently a student at Andover Newton Theological School. David and Joyce Wilbourn have been on the executive board of the Cabot PTA since 1977, holding a variety of offices, including co-presidents this past year. They have lived in Newton 12 years' and have two children ' Melissa' 12, and Erick, 9.

Questioned about school consolidation, Wilbourn pointed out that declining enrollment at the elementary level will bottom-out during the next two or three years.

"The next School Committee will probably set the structure of the Newton school system for the rest of this century," he said. "What may prove to be the final round of school consolidation will be on next year's agenda. It is vitally important to take the long range view' and I would insist on examining all feasible options."

Asked about the junior high schools in the wake of closing Weeks this year and Warren in 1983' he said, "I see the change to two-year junior highs as an opportunity to focus attention on the unique needs of children beginning adolescence." Wilbourn commented that his daughter starts seventh grade this fall.

He added "I am very disturbed by the perception of disparity among the junior high schools, as expressed at the recent meeting of the West Side Educational Association. We need diversity - not disparity - in our schools. I am especially concerned that educational standards be kept high enough so that parents who can afford private schools continue to choose public education in Newton."

Band plays on

The Air Force Band of New England will give a free concert Sunday, Aug. 9, at 7 p.m. on Newton Centre green in Newton Centre Square. The band will offer contemporary music, highlighted by selections from the classic band repertoire. If it rains, the concert will be in the Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington Park, Newtonville, at 7:30 p.m.

Ward 1 alderman quits

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ward 1 alderman-at-large Robert Gaynor, who has served on the Board of Aldermen for the last 10 years is not seeking reelection.

Gaynor, a Boston attorney, said he stepped down in order to devote more time to his law practice and family.

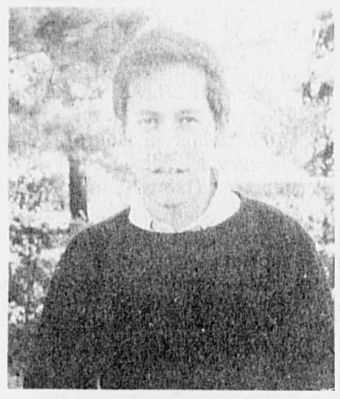

"I've served for 10 years on the aldermanic board and its been very challenging and at the same time its been somewhat frustrating," Gaynor said. "In this decade, my private law practice has grown to a large extent...I have not been able to devote the time and effort to my practice or my family that I would liked to have done."

A severe critic of revaluation in recent years, Gaynor also took the opportunity to criticize a recent law suit challenging the Department of Revenue.

The state Supreme Judicial Court last week unanimously rejected an appeal by attorneys for the city and ordered the city to comply with a Revenue Department decision that could force an additional $11 million cut from the municipal budget.

"We spent $25,000 for a senseless, useless case to try to increase assets in the city." Gaynor charged that the city's Law Department "gave poor advice to the administration and the mayor."

Gaynor, a former tax examiner for the state Department of Revenue and chairman of the Board of Aldermen's subcommittee on Revaluation, warned aldermen at the time not to vote for $25,000 for legal fees to battle the state agency.

Robert Gaynor

Gaynor criticized the Assessing Department and predicted disaster for the accelerated revaluation which is scheduled to be completed at the end of January.

"I still see the Assessing Department in chaos in this period of revaluation," he continued. "I still maintain there will be as many people unsatisfied with this revaluation as there were with Cole, Layer and Trumble." After the Cole, Layer and Trumble in 1975, Newton residents stormed City Hall. He added, "After revaluation, it's going to be like the attack on Masada..."

Gaynor said he is not dropping out of politics altogether and will consider a run for elected office in the "near future." Gaynor said he would consider running for mayor, governor's council or some other statewide office.

A graduate of American University's Washington College of Law, Gaynor explained: "My decision should not be interpreted as a lack of concern for the city I love or its people who have blessed me five times with the mantle of leadership."

Gaynor, who noted that he worked hard to maintain "an independent voice," also viewed his decision not to seek reelection philosophically. "I think Thoreau summed it up best when he spoke of leaving Walden Pond: 'I did not wish to take a cabin passage, but rather to go before the mast and on the deck of the world, for there I could best see the moonlight and the mountains. I do not wish to go below.'"

Crognale alderman candidate

NEWTONVILLE — Gabriel Crognale,27, of 38 Lothrop St., Newtonville, has announced his candidacy for Ward Alderman in Ward 1.

A graduate of Northeastern University, where he majored in Civil Engineering, he is presently employed as an environmental engineer by the Massachusetts Division of Water Pollution Control.

"The major issues facing Ward 1 as I see it," said Crognale, "are the Newton Place development which could have far-reaching effects in the area...inadequate traffic signals and/or the lack of them near Purity Supreme, Our Lady's Church and Adams Street...the future expansion of the Multi-Service Center and the Human Services Department...which should direct itself towards bilingualism."

He added, "the problems adressed in Ward 1 involve not so much getting new laws passed which tend to overburden lawmakers, but rather the attacking of problems in a newer, direct approach."

Crognale continued, "To give you an example: If we have a traffic problem due to the lack of signals, I would aim my energy directly to the Traffic Department, and then to the State DPW; if we have a language problem in Human Services, I would act as an interpreter, since I speak fluent Italian, until someone were hired for the position."

Crognale added, "I am an engineer, and I would attempt to solve problems confronting me in a logical, step-by-step process, and attempt to avoid any 'red tape' obstacles. In this close-knit area, actions are important, not the 'yeah-yeah-sure-sure' so common in politics."

Crognale has lived in Newton for the past 15 years, having graduated from Our Lady's High in 1971 with honors. He received the Frank T. Copp Memorial Scholarship for scholastic achievement.

Prior to working for the Commonwealth, he was employed with Universal Engineering Corp., the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Newton can send estimated tax bills

BOSTON — The Massachusetts Legislature has passed a bill which will allow the City of Newton to issue estimated property-tax bills for the first payment due in the fall.

Sponsored jointly by Sen. Jack H. Backman' Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci' Rep. David B. Cohen and Rep. Susan D. Schur, all of Newton, this measure became necessary due to the impact of Proposition 2 ½ on Newton's property tax revaluation program' which will not be completed until early 1982.

Without this legislation' Newton would have only two options. Either the city could wait for the revaluation program to be completed and certified by the Commissioner of Revenue before issuing tax bills' or it could issue tax bills based on existing certified valuations. The first alternative would require Newton to borrow funds at a cost of between $300,000 and $500,000 to pay city obligations. The second alternative would result in a revenue loss of $22 million to Newton and force the city to dismantle essential programs and services. This legislation will allow Newton to conduct its business in an orderly fashion.

Any difference between the estimated tax payment and the actual tax due (calculated after new values are certified) will be reconciled on the second tax bill which will be payable on May 1, 1982.

Mann opens headquarters

NEWTON CENTRE — The Committee to Reelect Theodore D. Mann Mayor of Newton has opened its information and campaign headquarters at 825 Beacon St.' Newton Centre. The office, located on the second floor of the building at the corner of Centre and Beacon Streets, will be open daily with visitors and inquiries welcome.

Telephone lines are 964-0480, 0481, and 0482.

NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY OF UNCOMPENSATED MEDICAL SERVICES

The Newton-Wellesley Hospital will budget $44,360 as their annual compliance level of uncompensated medical services during fiscal year October 1, 1981 to September 30, 1982.

The Newton-Wellesley Hospital will provide uncompensated medical services pursuant to the requirements of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Public Health Service Agency, effective October 1, 1981.

All services of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital will be provided without charge to all persons unable to pay who first request such service, until the above stated annual compliance level has been met.

Formula for success

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — When actress Linda Kelsey did an advertisement for a Nestle company product 4 1/2 years ago, she says she was unaware of what she has now witnessed firsthand, "the nightmare" of malnourished and dying Third World babies fed with infant formula.

At Newton Corner's Eliot Church last week, Kelsey joined with Father Robert Drinan, former Massachusetts congressman, in lamenting the recent U.S. vote against adopting an international code for the marketing of infant formulas.

This May 21, the U.S. was the only nation in the World Health Organization (WHO) to vote against the code. The vote was 118-1.

On the heels of the vote, both the Senate and the House voted overwhelmingly to condemn the Reagan administration's vote. The House resolution cited studies which contended that use of the formula under unsanitary conditions accounts for up to one million infants each year in underdeveloped countries.

Problems with the use of formulas in lieu of breastfeeding have also been documented in this country as well.

The event at the church was held to benefit INFACT, the Infant Formula Action Coalition, a national organization, and $10 contributions were requested at the door.

The organization's Boston coordinator, Lois Happe, told the audience of over 300 sympathizers that the evening of wine and hors d'oeuvres was meant "to be a party to celebrate our partial victory with the WHO code."

Kelsey, who plays Billie on the Lou Grant show, said a friend, with an infant of her own, jolted her into an awareness of the infant formula problem in the Third World, a market in which Nestle, a Swiss-based company, is a leader.

Kelsey, whose petite frame, fair complexion, strawberry-blond hair and warm green eyes bespeak a quiet nature, proved to be as gutsy in real life as she is as a reporter on the Lou Grant show. She contacted Nestle immediately, and, although admitting that they had the contractual right to use the commercial for two years, told the company that she was going to donate all of the residuals to INFACT.

"I told them, 'Every time you pay me, I'm going to donate the money to the Nestle boycott cause,'" Kelsey said in an interview.

"So they took it off the air," she quipped, eyes flashing.

Kelsey recently toured several southeast Asian countries with her husband, Glenn Strand, who was also at the benefit. Kelsey discussed slides, taken by her husband, of their encounters.

Describing the marketers of formulas and their products as "entrenched" in the countries she toured, Kelsey said, "In fact, when we visited the Phillipines, we were asked when we walked in the door which infant formula company we represented."

Kelsey said she met one Bangladesh family of 13, considered wealthy because, by combining their incomes, they make the equivalent of $34 dollars each month, who are planning to stop breastfeeding their newborn and begin bottlefeeding. Disregarding unsanitary water conditions, Kelsey said it costs approximately $29 dollars a month to feed one baby properly.

"So you see, her family must go hungry in order to buy this tin (of formula)," Kelsey added.

She said displays of formula were always the "most prevalent display in the market" with pictures of beautiful, chubby babies.

"These mothers are convinced this is something very modern and very good for their babies," Kelsey continued.

Drinan, calling the high rate of infant mortality a form of holocaust and decimination, sharply critized the Reagan adminstration's vote on the WHO code. "Don't they care about children?" he exclaimed.

"The U.S. could have at least abstained. Three other nations did, perhaps at our urging," Drinan added.

Referring to world hunger and starvation as a problem which has concerned him all of his life, Drinan recalled the dreams of the Kennedy administration in the 1960's to accomplish two things – to put a man on the moon and to end world hunger. He added that Henry Kissinger also said in 1974 that within a decade, no child would go to bed hungry.

"More children go to bed hungry today than in 1974," he charged.

"We used to say 'We are our brother's keeper' because we are our brother's brother," Drinan continued. "But, I want to say 'We are our sister's keeper' because we are our sister's sister."

In an interview, Drinan discounted the free trade constitutional issue behind the adminstration's vote. "So he (Reagan) is saying that free enterprise is supposed to go against the entire WHO?" Drinan said. "It's just so absurd, so barbarous."

Several members of the audience also found the vote against the WHO code appalling.

"I don't think trade is nearly as important as people's lives," Dee Handspicker, a Newton Highlands resident who first became familiar with the issue at a church conference two years ago, stressed. "I think it was politically absolutely stupid and immoral."

A man who was in Costa Rica at the time of the vote said his Costa Rican friends were "incredulous" as to the motivations behind the U.S. action.

Another woman said that "as a mother, a church member and a human being," she was opposed to the exposure of mothers in these countries to a product which they cannot afford or use properly.

Bob Hohler, a Boston resident who serves as director of development for Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, said, "We think it is the classic case of inappropriate development."

"We see day after day, year after year, the effect of this kind of inappropriate technology on Third World nations," Hohler added.

Speaking for INFACT, Happe urged the audience to continue the boycott of Nestle products (which include along with familiar chocolate products certain brands of wines, cheeses, and cosmetics) as long as the company continues to promote bottlefeeding in countries where poverty and unsanitary conditions often result in death or illness as a result of the improper use of infant formulas.

Three U.S. firms who sell the formula to developing countries are Abbott Laboritories, American Home Products and Bristol-Myers.

Added state aid for Newton

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The bottom line on the additional aid the city will receive from the state during fiscal year 1982 is $1.2 million said Deputy Mayor James Hickey Monday.

Lobbying is now underway among local city departments for the monies. (The sum of $610,000 has already been appropriated by aldermen for the repair of five municipal roofs.)

Hickey noted that although the city received $2.3 in additional state aid, Newton was assessed an additional $1.1 from fiscal year 1981 for increased MBTA, MDC and county costs.

The "Cherry sheet" -- estimates – named for the color of the paper they are printed on, were released Friday afternoon. Included in the $1.9 billion Governor Edward J. King certified in state aid for cities and towns was $243.1 million in new direct aid.

The city received $12.6 million in local aid this year compared to $10.3 million a year ago.

Appearing before the Finance Committee Monday night, Hickey told aldermen it is the administration's intention to put these monies toward capital improvements that "would otherwise be deferred."

He noted that the mayor's first two priorities – roof repairs and energy retrofit – have already been acted upon.

Hickey said a $300,000 request for the installation of smoke detectors in school buildings had received strong recommendations from the school committee, the building commissioner and the fire chief.

Aldermen also heard lobbying from Fire Chief Edward Reilly for a new radio system and James Coogan, representative of the police department, for a new dispatch system.

Reilly told committee members that a "much needed" new radio system would cost about $296,000.

The system, which Reilly called "at best highly inefficient," is over 50 years old and "is subject to frequent breakdowns." This in turn has left the department "at times with no radio communications between Fire Alarm and mobile radios on the apparatus," according to Reilly.

Coogan, who noted it would cost $207,000 to make improvements on the police communications setup, said Police Chief William Quinn believed the inadequateness of the current system had "reached a critical stage."

"Newton has the worst communications sytem inside Route 128," said Coogan. He added that the department had delayed improving the system for the past 10 years on the premise that the building itself would be improved.

The system would include a closed circuit television system which would be used as a security measure when detaining a suspect.

"We're only asking for the barest, minimal improvement," added Coogan, who said the television system had become a normal standard of operations in neighboring communities.

Alderman Paul Coletti, however, questioned why the monies could not be used to reduce the tax rate between $20 and $30 per household.

"I have heard the mayor say all along if he had the opportunity he would give the taxpayer a break," said Coletti.

He also asked why the money had to be spent at this moment in time. "We shouldn't be buying long-term assets under one particular year's taxes," said Coletti. "This money has been traditionally been used to off-set the tax rate."

Bold initiatives, impressive wins

Shades of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. It was the eye-to-eye living room link provided by television, not the radio fireside chat of the New Deal mastermind. Ronald Reagan again was using the medium so well suited to his talents.

His smashing tax cut triumph demonstrated what has been evident since FDR pioneered the social revolution in the 1930's. At any level of government, an elected official with the capability of going over the heads of legislators to the public can carry the day.

Lyndon Johnson did it in selling his Great Society, but the cards were already stacked by the liberal tide running within his own party. Reagan had to reach deeply into Democratic ranks in the House to achieve his goals.

The President's string of victories is impressive. He is coupling charm with an extraordinarily adroit awareness of how to bend his program objectives to compromise that will gain bipartisan backing.

Just over six months into his term, he has created the atmosphere in which change and hope may move a stagnant economy in the right direction. Great problems exist, even the threat of a new recessionary trend, so we can applaud the bold initiative meeting them head on.

A King minus

Except for the Concord-Acton Democrat, Chester Atkins, architect of the Senate's budget package, no one frenetic really gained much in the struggle still not fully resolved. A question being asked on Beacon Hill dealt with whether Gov. King was the big loser to an extent his chances could be damaged.

His predecessor, Michael Dukakis, became vulnerable because of a lack of credibility and insensitivity to problems demanding solutions. It could well be that Ed King is being caught in the same bind, notably because he failed to get the signal being transmitted by Proposition 2 ½ from the day of passage.

Implicit in the referendum was a desire by voters for reduced state spending to generate more local aid as property tax revenue cut into municipal services. King had walked around the proposition initially, embraced it as the will of the people and then gave it only token acknowledgment in hsa first budget. It provided for minimal improvement in local aid, $37 million rather than the $250-300 million sought by the communities, and did little to chop away at the topheavy state bureaucracy.

Twice more the governor was to offer revised budgets, the last of which boosted the local aid figure over the $200 million mark, but short of what was agreed upon by the Senate-House compromise. Lawmakers didn't cover themselves with glory in the wheeling and dealing that led up to consensus, but it is King who is the marked man.

A resourceful King could rebound if the economy rebounds and the Commonwealth's fiscal condition is healthy in 1982. For now, however, it is a minus situation.

My Turn

A royal interlude

By Jon Greenspan

She didn't kiss me, so I'll never know if I'm a frog, or for that matter, a prince.

Oh sure, I watched the highlights of the royal wedding, caught up in the hoopla and the pageantry of one of the century's greatest theatrical and romantic performances. But several months earlier, on a rather balmy night in Bermuda, I had my own brush with royalty.

But it was just that, a touch, a handshake and an apologetic, "it would be impossible."

I was at the French Connection, a rather chic, fashionable discotheque for foreigners in the city of Hamilton. It was just before midnight when I noticed her: A blond haired, fair faced woman wearing a silk blouse and dark slacks sitting alone; absorbed by the rich red cushions behind her.

I kept an inconspicuous close eye on her and assumed after about fifteen minutes she was alone.

"Excuse-me, may I join you?" I asked. She picked her head up as if surprised by the question and lit up with a majestical smile.

Before she could answer, I asked if she was alone.

"No," she smiled softly as I sat myself down to her right.

We began with the mundane -a matter-of-fact questions- such as where are you from, how long have you been here, so on and so forth.

But the chat took on another dimension. I became infatuated with the woman as if entangled in her cascading layers of story book hair which gently flowed across the back of her shoulders.

I fixed my eyes on hers and began to envision us together barefoot along the surf. She was from Luxembourg and was traveling for the duration of the summer. Her next stop was New York and my mind busily began preparing a drive to the Big Apple for the following weekend.

The conversation became a bit lopsided as I rambled along about my past, my family and my rather abstract plans for the future. She had listened to all I had to say and still wanted to hear more.

Already, in a moment of weakness, I told her she was "charming."

After twenty minutes or so, two men appeared at the table and bowed politely. "Princess are you alright," one asked. She whispered "yes," and as quickly as the men had appeared, they disappeared.

One of them I figured was a rather jealous boyfriend but I ignored the interruption.

We continued to talk. School? She had never attended school. She told me she had been tutored all her life. Her father was paying for her current travels. After Bermuda it was a tour of the states.

My curiosity began mounting. No longer was the term "princess" so out of context.

It had boiled over. "Who are you anyway,?" I asked inquisitively. "The Princess of Luxembourg?"

She shied away, surprised and somewhat annoyed that her secret had been spoiled. "Yes, why my father is the crowned prince," she informed me.

We continued to speak although my side of the conversation seemed rather peasant-like compared to her past.

"Excuse-me princess. You're father would like you in by one. Could you finish up please," said one of the men.

"Are those you're bodyguards?" I inquired.

"Yes, but don't they look rather small," she said as if her guards were inadequate. "But I have heard that they are quite good."

She picked up her Lite Beer and downed what remained.

"Are you busy tomorrow...could we possibly get together," I asked hurriedly.

"I'm afraid my schedule is booked," she replied apologetically.

The princess slowly arose from the table as the two men drifted back toward the two of us. My eyes watched her get up and rather awkwardly I joined her as if to try and say something princely.

She held out her hand and I gently grabbed it. "I will now look at the states in a different light," she said as one of the men slipped a pleaded tweed jacket over her shoulders.

Before I could pepper her with questions about the next day, her bodyguards had whisked her away out the door.

Again I stood alone. There was no glass slipper at my feet, not even a phone number scribbled on a piece of paper.

Princess Marie Astrid of Luxembourg, one of the women Prince Charles courted before his marraige to the princess of Wales, had just cast her spell over me, leaving me in a daze.

Perhaps I'll write her and inform her that I need a place to stay on my next backpacking trip of the continent. I'm sure she'll remember me. I was the one who cracked, "Sure I know Luxembourg, all my friends land there because of the cheap fares."

Living without registries

By Andy Dabilis

BOSTON (UPI) — How many times do you go to the Registry of Motor Vehicles? Once every two years? Once every four years? Once in a while? Once?

Some legislators who aren't overly fond of the way the registry runs want you to think about that.

Rep. Bruce Wetherbee, D-Pepperell, perhaps the worst enemy the agency has, wants to let you get your license and register your car in town offices.

He says people could get along without so many registry offices. And apparently a lot more legislators are beginning to agree.

The state had 34 offices until Friday when six were closed. The Legislature cut $1.8 million from the registry's budget, and the agency has to absorb $2.3 million in pay increases, resulting in 450 layoffs.

Now, says Wetherbee, the agency that fought for survival may not even know who its employees are — or how many it really has.

Registry officials met last week with some legislators and members of the House Ways and Means Committee to talk about those layoffs.

Rep. Nicholas Buglione, D-Methuen, cochairman of the Public Service Committee was unhappy to hear the registry say it has 140 more employees than is listed on their payroll.

"Their explanation is they keep moving them around," he said.

Other people at the meeting said there were fears the registry may have no show employees or untouchables protected by not being on the official payroll.

And in the House, where the registry used to have a lot of friends, an order was adopted last week to study the agency.

"People are upset," he says, and Buglione agrees. "A lot of the people who've defended the registry are angry."

Secretary of Public Safety George Luciano has perpetuated the enmity. Buglione says an agreement was almost reached last week to keep all the branch offices open, despite the 150 layoffs, but that Luciano wouldn't go along.

Luciano, meanwhile, put out a statement that he and Gov. Edward J. King, would "explore every possibility in an attempt to reinstate the registry operations in the areas affected."

Wetherbee thinks people who've been treated rudely at registry offices — which a lot of people think is every time they go there and meet with scowls, snarls and nasty looks — shouldn't fight to keep them open.

He's starting an initiative petition drive to let voters decide whether to abolish the agency altogether and let licensing and registration be done in every city and town. Then, he says, there would be 351 branch offices.

Even legislators fighting to keep their branch offices open admit some should probably be closed, and do not strenuously defend the operations.

The inconvenience, after all, is not so great when you only have to go there once a year. Or every two years. Or every four years. Or never.

For Independent bid

King keeps door open

By Loring Swaim, state columnist

King

Guzzi

Gov. King's press secretary Gerald Morris brands as "a far-fetched rumor" the suggestion the Chief Executive will run for re-election as an Independent — but he doesn't close the door on the idea.

"The Governor has always been — and remains — a Democrat," Morris asserts, leaving unanswered the important question of what he might do in the future. "He stands at the forefront of the 'new' Democratic party — the party for more jobs, fewer taxes, less government regulation, the party less willing to respond to special interest groups."

Is Gov. King aiming to redefine the Democratic party, to equate the conservative views above with the "new" Democrat? Indeed, the phrases sound as if they could have flowed from the mouth of Pres. Reagan. But Morris insists that to suggest King is philosophically a Republican is just "way off base."

Nowhere does Morris specifically rule out the prospect that King is studying the possibility of running as an Independent, either in the primary which will be crowded or in the general election which will not. "A lot can happen in the 17 months left before the Democratic primary," he states enigmatically, prompting more questions than answers.

Guzzi is missed

Sources in Gov. King's office say privately that since the departure last fall of Chief Secretary Paul Guzzi, there has been little or no coordination of staff activities around the Governor. Guzzi kept a firm hand on the flow of events while he was in charge. He kept staff informed and on their toes smoothing the way for the Governor's impact. When he left to work for the Board of Regents as interim acting chancellor and then was hired by one of those Regents, Dr. An Wang, head of Wang Laboratories, that coordination around the Governor has virtually ceased. Staff meetings are infrequent, the anticipation of upcoming events is hit or miss, briefings for the Governor to look down the road for major problems are less than exemplary, say the sources.

When the chain of command is unclear, subordinates, unsure of whom to report to, tend to find their own lines of communication. And in that atmosphere, few people are willing to risk their position by telling the boss where he's wrong.

Review of vetoes

It is amusing that the House of Representatives has been quick to ask the Supreme Judicial Court (as it did last week) for a ruling on whether the Chief Executive has the constitutional authority to veto portions of outside sections of the budget — but is silent about asking whether it (the House) has the authority to enact outside sections in the first place. The House reportedly acted as it did to raise the issue first and on its own terms, before any group of taxpayers or special interests could raise more general questions.

It now appears Gov. King may ask the court to include a review of the outside-section process as well as his powers to veto such addends.

Didn't make it

The legislature pulled the rug out from one of Gov. King's most adroit political programs, the highly effective "Make it in Massachusetts" advertising phenomenon. The Senate took the lead in zero-funding "Make it" in such a fashion that the Governor could not veto the cut. The Chief Executive is constitutionally prohibited from adding funds to any budget item; he can only delete or reduce funds.

But it turns out that there's slightly less to cut from the ad campaign. About three weeks ago someone broke into the quarters of the campaign and stole 36 dozen "Make it in Massachusetts" t-shirts plus a couple of boxes of pewter medallions bearing the insignia of the Commonwealth.

The stolen merchandise was valuable; the t-shirt sells for $6 or $7 apiece. How the hot stuff will be fenced remains to be seen.

Private sources may be found to pick up the tab for the "Make it in Massachusetts" campaign which implies so much for the leadership of the Governor.

Clever GOP survey

The Republican National Committee is cleverly tapping the desire of ordinary Americans to see their government reduced and their taxes lowered.

A GOP fundraising letter is being circulated which is disguised as a means of participating in a national demonstration of support for Reagan policies of economic stimulants and tax cuts.

Attached to the customary contribution form is a self-serving survey form that asks questions to evoke predictable answers. Sample: "Do you favor the deregulation of the price of natural gas in order to increase domestic energy production? Yes — No — Undecided."

Sent initially to a selected list, the returns from the appeal are to be used to send it more broadly. As for the questionnaire, Reagan writes, "I need (your) opinions to demonstrate broad-based grass roots support for my programs."

MBTA parking

To the Editor:

As a 13 year resident of the City of Newton, I am frustrated and appalled by the situation that I must face every day going to work. I work for a stock broker in downtown Boston, and, therefore, I take the MBTA express bus from Newton Corner every morning.

However, I live a substantial distance from Newton Corner which makes it inconvenient for me to walk to the bus, and necessitates my driving to the bus in the morning. But there is no place for me to park!

As large subsidisers of the MBTA, I would think that the City of Newton would want to encourage use of the MBTA, to save both energy and money. I would also think that adequate parking would be provided to its users.

The situation is, however, as follows: street parking on streets such as Richardson St. and Washington St. is limited to one hour; meter parking on Washington St.' Centre St., and Galen St. is also limited to one hour; parking in the Pearl St. lot is limited to three hours; and the library parking lot is barely large enough for the library users and its personnel.

I am writing to you to make you aware of this situation. I hope it can be alleviated so that the residents of Newton may more effectively use the services provided by the MBTA. Thank you very much.

Help appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Department of Mental Health, I want to thank the many citizens who generously volunteered their help during the recent job action.

While these volunteers were sympathetic to the plight of the workers, they recognized the importance of maintaining clinical care.

With their help, the Department of Mental Health was able to continue to provide care for thousands of patients and clients. It is heartening to know that there are so many people who are willing to help in a time of crisis.

The efforts of the National Guard were outstanding; they were literally the saviors of the facilities. Their work in the kitchens, the laundries and even in direct-care roles was invaluable.

As I traveled to the department's facilities, I was also struck by the heroic efforts of our staff (direct-care staff, administrative and managerial) who often worked more than 16-hour shifts to ensure that clients were fed, clothed and supplied with clean linen.

Unfortunately, I am unable to thank everyone personally, but I am grateful to all. Those who helped deserve not only my thanks but also the thanks of every citizen in the Commonwealth.

Commissioner

It isn't murder

To the Editor:

Abortion isn't murder. Since 1973, it has been perfectly legal. Before 1973' it wasn't murder, it was the crime of abortion. Calling abortion murder is the only way the anti-abortionists can get it outlawed again.

Abortion first became an issue almost 2,000 years ago when moralists and early Christian celibates began fuming against the sexual permissiveness of the day. Since that time, the legality of abortion has seesawed back and forth from being outlawed to being embraced by the Catholic Church.

Abortion is as old as conception. Whether a legal and safe procedure or a dangerous and illegal one, women have sought it in all places and times to rid themselves of unwanted pregnancy.

Women will continue to seek abortion even if the anti-abortionists attain the dubious achievement of making abortion a crime again. Because much of the cause of unwanted pregnancy is fear of sex and sexual ignorance, surrounding abortion with more fear and terror will only increase people's fears and ignorance of sex, and punish women for making mistakes in love. Sex is harder to get and harder to enjoy when surrounded by repressiveness, and people will seek more relief from drinking and and more people will turn to homosexuality to escape drug abuse' the restrictions placed on heterosexuality.

I sincerely doubt any benefits will accrue to society by outlawing abortion. Repressing abortion rights is an act of self-righteous hostility, and like most hostile acts, has sharply undesirable results.

If you believe with all your heart that abortion is murder, then by all means don't have one. Nobody's forcing you to have an abortion. If you think abortion is such an awful sin that it should be outlawed and equal to murder, I think society would be a lot better off if you minded your own business.

Whether abortion is murder or not is irrelevant. Women will continue to seek abortion even if they have to risk their lives. The choice is between keeping abortion a safe and legal procedure and between outlawing abortion, thereby making it a very unsafe and dangerous procedure. If abortion is outlawed, the anti-abortionists will have succeeded in making illegal abortion the Number One cause of maternal death and mutilation.

Centre station filthy

To the Editor:

As a daily commuter on the "T" from Newton Centre to Park Street, I have viewed with increasing disgust the filth around the Newton Centre station of the MBTA. There are cigarette filters, wrapping papers, cans, and all matter of dirty and messy items to say nothing of the pigeon droppings!

Is it not in someone's interest or jurisdiction to see that the station is periodically cleaned even with all the budget problems and 2 ½ and all the rest?

Somehow I don't think it should fall on private citizens like myself to traipse down there on Saturday or Sunday with broom and trash bag in hand to make it more acceptable' what with the taxes we pay to live in the Garden City and to ride on the Green Line.

I hope I am not the only person calling your attention to this.

Ward 8 candidacy

To the Editor:

The performance of the ward alderman from Ward 8 has been something of a disappointment since his election. It was for this reason that I decided to take out papers to run against him when I moved into Ward 8. I felt that while I was a newcomer to the ward, I was well informed on the issues before the Board of Aldermen.

Happily' another well-qualified candidate appeared. Marcy Richmond is already running hard to unseat the incumbent ward aldermen. Her experience, both as a member of the Massachusetts Bar and legislative assistant, make her an excellent alternative to the current ward aldermen.

Inasmuch as Marcy appears to have worked hard to challenge the incumbent, I have decided to step aside to allow for a one-on-one contest in the fall.

I heartily endorse Marcy Richmond in her bid to become Ward 8's new alderman. I urge those voters who signed my nomination papers to give their support to Ms. Richmond.

When the bells toll

To the Editor:

We hope that members of this community will want to commemorate the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki that occurred on Aug. 6 and 9, 1945. The United States became the first and only country to cause massive human destruction by using nuclear weapons.

Throughout history death has been a part of war. ' Millions died in World War II and most Americans agree that we were right to participate.

However, today the USA and USSR have over 50'000 nuclear warheads ready to use, capable of inflicting many thousand times the devastation of Hiroshima alone! This does not even speak for the growing nuclear proliferation in other countries.

At 8:15 on the morning of Aug. 6, we urge all local churches' and synagogues to join together as other communities are doing, by tolling their bells.

May we unite in silent thoughts of the memory of the dead and in the warning of the terrible capacity we have to bring destruction and misery upon ourselves.

Retirement

By Marvin Snider

"You're not needed anymore," "You're too old to work," "You're not as productive as you used to be, "It's time you retired."

What does it feel like to hear such statements after you have spent your adult life being competent and productive? If and when this happens, a choice is open to you. You can accept such comments philosophically and stoically and retreat to your rocking chair whether or not that is to your liking. Or, you can choose to decide your own fate.

This point was made in last week's column, and it warrants further elaboration. Much of the material written about aging and retirement has focused on the process of aging and what happens to those people who retire. Not enough attention has been paid to the alteratives that are open to an elderly person.

Age 65 is an arbitrary point at which our society has decided a person's usefulness has come to an end. In reality, as with other characteristics of people, there is a wide variation.

Some people are ready to retire at age 40' while others are never ready. Too many elderly people passively accept society's arbitrary standard about what contribution they are able to make, and therefore, implicitly give support to the belief in their diminishing abilities.

The American Association of Retired Persons has approached this problem in a constructive way. It has found a way to make positive and continuing contributions.

The distinction needs to be made between retirement from a job and retirement from being productive. How fast one's physical and mental capabilities diminish depends to a large extent on how an individual views and takes care of his body and his mind.

Being productive is a crucial ingredient to good physical and mental health at any age. Being productive does not have to mean working eight hours a day. It can mean doing anything you feel is useful for whatever time period you enjoy and are able to manage.

It can mean performing your occupation on a part-time basis. It can mean pursuing a hobby, caring for your garden or home. It can mean helping a neighbor or participating in an organization.

For some people, their sense of competence is tied to their job. This does not have to be the case. Every person has many capabilities of which he may not be aware.

It behooves all of us, at any age' to periodically take inventory of our interests and abilities. With time and experience, our interest' skills and abilities may change.

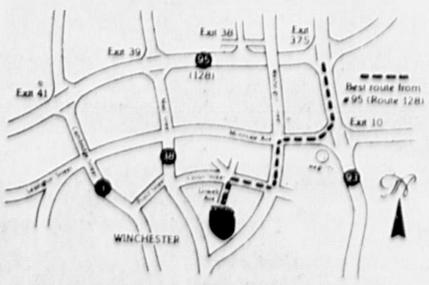

The challenge is to know what they are and to make the most of what we are and who we are at any age. The retirement-age person has the added challenge of having to make a major life transition in a short period of time.

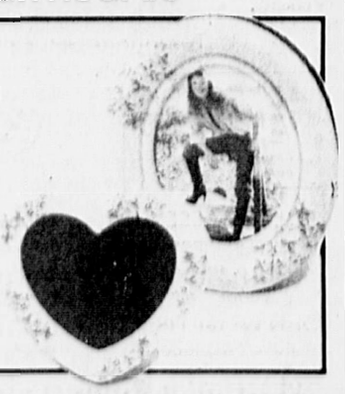

One key element to comfortable retirement is to be productive, to make the most of what you have and not dwell on what you don't have. You can do a lot about where you are going' but nothing about where you have been.

Stop-Shop one of many robberies this week

NEWTON — Two men, one wielding a handgun, robbed the Stop & Shop at 200 Boylston Street of an undetermined amount of cash and escaped shortly before 10:30 a.m. Saturday, police said. No injuries were reported.

The gunman forced an employee to open a safe and scooped up the cash drawers inside, while holding three employees at gunpoint, police said.

The suspect was unable to get into another safe because, in keeping with company policy, the employees did not have a key to it.

The gunman's accomplice waited outside the office and aroused the suspicion of a fourth employee, police said. When he saw her watching him, he approached her, showed her a silver badge and told her to go and wait in the office.

Once she was inside, she was made to face the wall along with the other employees.

The gunman was described as a white male, 40 to 50 years old, 5 feet 10, heavy, with a dark complexion, dark hair and eyeglasses. His accomplice was described as a white male, 45 to 50 years old, 5 feet 10 to 6 feet, thin, with a medium complexion and grey hair.

Police said the two men got away with an undetermined amount of cash and a shopping bag containing redeemable coupons totaling $337. Police believe the two men headed in the direction of Milton's and that a vehicle was used.

Over $30,000 in rare coins, jewelry and other items were stolen from a Larkin Road residence over the weekend.

When a resident returned shortly after midnight Sunday, he found the house ransacked and a kitchen side door window broken with blood stains on the glass and door. However, police said the thieves entered through a first floor window by raising the screen.

Among the items reported missing were a portfolio of rare silver dollars valued at $10,000, approximately 100 movie cassettes valued at $6,000, two stereo systems, and two televisions. Also missing were a man's gold ring with the initials "LAF", a 14 karat yellow gold ring with an emerald cut one karat diamond and diamond baguettes on each side valued at $7,500, an 18 inch gold neck chain valued at $1,200 and a gold ring with a diamond valued at $500.

An employee of the Sidney Hill Country Club, 77 Florence Street, reported a break-in early Monday morning, although all that appears to be missing at this time are cigarettes from a vending machine.

Other reports of housebreaks were on Sunday from California Street and Vine Street. Police said a stolen car with stolen license plates was discovered at the Vine Street address when they investigated an alarm. Police also found the rear door unlocked and the house ransacked.

According to police, there was one report of an attempted housebreak on Harvard Street Thursday and of a break-in on Belmont Street last Wednesday afternoon between 4:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Cyclist dies in crash

NEWTON — Police are trying to learn the identity of a young man who died early Tuesday morning in surgery following a fatal motorcycle crash in Newton.

Shortly after midnight, Newton police officer David Dues saw a man operating a dirt trail type motorcycle without a registration plate and started to pursue the operator. The cyclist accelerated to a point where Dues could no longer see him and Dues alerted police headquarters. A short while later he came upon the scene of an accident where a female operator of a car was stopped and the body of a cyclist was on the street.

According to the woman, the motorcycle came around a corner, hit her car, and then hit a tree.

The man was taken first to Faulkner Hospital and then to Brigham and Womens Hospital where he died at 4:35 a.m. while in surgery.

The man is described as a black male, male in his early 20's with a medium length afro haircut, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 175 pounds, wearing a black helmet with a face shield, a navy barricuda jacket, dark green chino pants, white socks, and white sneakers. He was operating a green Kawasaki motorcycle, model 400.

Anyone having knowledge of the above person should call the Newton Police Department.

Firefighters battle blazes

NEWTON — Firefighters battled fires at four different locations in Newton on Friday and were kept busy from the early morning until shortly before midnight.

The first call at 3:45 a.m., was to the Centenary Methodist Church at 234 Central Street in Auburndale. Engines 2,4,5, and 6, ladders 1 and 3, and Assistant Fire Chief William Dwyer were on the scene at 3:45 a.m. and found fire showing fromclassrooms of the 2 ½ story wooden frame wing of the church.

Minutes later, a working fire was underway and Chief Edward Reilly was called to the scene.

According to fire officials, the cause of the fire is under investigation, although it is believed to have started in two separate locations on the first floor. Officials said the fire originated in a classroom at the rear of the wing of the church and in a first floor classroom opposite the front entrance to the building.

Officials said heavy smoke and water damage was sustained by the entire classroom wing of the church and that there was moderate smoke damage throughout the church building.

Captain Nazzareno Cucchi of Engine 2 received a back injury along with firefighter John Lucas who was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital for cuts on his hand.

At 5:44 a.m. Friday, an overheated vat of a plastic solution is suspected to have caused a fire at the General Connector Corporation, 80 Bridge Street.

Fire officials said the fire originated in the rear of the one-story masonry building which is owned by Chapel Bridge Park Associates and is a manufacturing and office complex.

Firefighter Donald D'Innocenzo was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital after he was splashed in the face with a chemical acid while battling the fire.

While engines 1,3,7 and 9, ladder 1, and Assistant Chief Edward Murphy were on the scene at Bridge Street' a Brookline engine and ladder, under the mutual aid pact, covered the Newton Centre station from around 5 a.m. to 6 a.m.

Fire officials said damage consisted mostly of water damage to the solutions in the other vats in the building. fire,clay

An alert neighbor of a Sherbrooke Road resident heard a smoke detector alarm go off and investigated. Seeing smoke in the home, the neighbor called the Fire Department since the owners were not at home at the time.

Engines 1,3, and 9, ladder 3, and Assistant Chief Edward Murphy arrived at 25 Sherbrooke Road at 2:14 p.m. and found fire in the kitchen. Officials said the cause of the fire was believed to have been food overcooked in the oven.

Damage to the one-story brick and wood home was limited to smoke damage, officials said.

Shortly after 10 p.m. Friday, firefighters were called to 12 Fairfax Street in West Newton by the residents who smelled smoke, but could not find the source of the fire.

Firefighters found the house full of smoke from a fire which had originated in first floor walls of the home' probably as the result of a short circuit in a lighting fixture.

No injuries were reported and officials said the fire was confined to two interior walls with moderate smoke damage throughout the house. Water damage also occured on the first floor.

At approximately 10:30 p.m. on Saturday ' a small fire broke out in the kitchen of a 2 ½ story wooden frame house at 40 Park Avenue. Engines 1'3,and 9' ladders 1,3, and Assistant Chief William Dwyer were dispatched to the scene and the fire was confined to kitchen counter tops and the rubbish container.

Muscle man builds career

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — How does a dedicated, obsessive body builder convert his muscles into an acting career?

Arnold Schwarzenegger, the Austrian strongman who probably could lift the Empire State Building, has parlayed his physique — which might be mistaken for clumps of coconuts — into semi-movie stardom through persistence.

Muscles per se do not translate necessarily into big bucks.

Some people find mountains of boulder-like deltoids, biceps and latissimus dorsi absolutely repulsive. Clots of muscles rippling under the oiled skin of iron pumpers bring to mind the action of a python swallowing a dozen baseballs.

And unless a guy lives at the beach, there's isn't much call for running around in a pair of drawers flexing pectorals, quadriceps and trapezius.

Schwarzenegger, looking like the unsculpted side of Mount Rushmore in a sports jacket and open shirt, filled a booth at the posh Beverly Hills Hotel Polo Lounge, an intimidating sight to men, an object of interest to women.

He is finishing his must important movie performance to date, the title role in "Conan," Dino DeLaurentiis' new super epic, with billing over James Earl Jones and Max Van Sydow.

Persistence and determination helped Schwarzenegger overcome a strong Teutonic accent, his massive bulk and, or course, his name, to shine in four other films — "The Villain," "Pumping Iron," "The Jayne Mansfield Story" and "Stay Hungry."

Lou Ferrigno, the not-so-jolly green giant of the defunct "The Incredible Hulk" series, is the only other body builder of consequence who has managed to successfully pursue an acting career.

"I'll tell you why there are so few body builders in acting," said Schwarzenegger, who gives the impression of being unaccustomed to having people question his word.

"It's the same reason why so few top professional athletes in any sport make good in show business. They all want to start at the top. But they can't.

"Acting has to be studied and learned like any other profession. If an athlete reaches the top in his field and enters acting, he has to start at the bottom all over again.

"You can't allow your ego to get in the way. You have to listen to other people, ask for help and, what's hardest for athletes, having other people tell you what to do and what not to do."

A pair of football players probably present the best example of what Schwarzenegger was talking about.

Merlin Olson, former defensive tackle for the Los Angeles Rams, has slowly built his acting career from a bit part in "Little House On The Prairie" to regular status in the show and featured roles in other films.

Joe Namath, the New York Jets' great quarterback, started out as the star of his own series, "The Waverly Wonders," which crashed and burned quickly. Now Joe is doing stage work and building his acting career slowly.

"I began slowly with a supporting role in 'Stay Hungry,'" Schwarzenegger said. "And I worked my way up, watching TV shows on the sets, looking, listening, learning and taking acting lessons.

DeNucci responds to human services plan

BOSTON — Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D-Newton-Waltham), House chairman of the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee, commented recently on the governor's plan to reorganize human services.

"Many legislators and human services experts have long recognized the need for reorganization," DeNucci said. "To Governor King's credit, he will not be submitting the plan to the legislature for some time, so we will have the opportunity to thoroughly and fairly review the proposal. Human services has grown to barely manageable proportions. With time to review the plan, the human services community and the legislature may be able to reach a consensus and move forward toward reorganization.

"The administration has showed they are acting in a responsible manner by holding off on the filing date. It says a lot for the administration to be willing to cooperate and get the input which I am certain will be forthcoming," said DeNucci. "The Governor's plan is as far reaching and potentially as dynamic as our original state reorganization of nearly a decade ago and I look forward to being a part of this exciting process. "If the plan means that we will cut needless administration without harming direct services, then I believe it should receive every consideration," DeNucci stated.

Commenting on the resignation of Human Services Secretary Charles F. Mahoney and the appointment of William Hogan to replace the outgoing secretary' DeNucci stated, "Secretary Mahoney has served the Commonwealth well, providing us with innovative ideas. Bill Hogan, I am sure' will provide a continuation of the fine leadership provided during the past two and one-half years. Secretary Hogan served as commissioner of correction and as commissioner of welfare. He is certainly one of the most experienced secretaries ever to assume the office and his background in state government during the King administration uniquely qualifies him for this important role. I look forward to working with him in his new position in the same manner that worked with him when he served as commissioner," concluded DeNucci.

King okays changes in county control

BOSTON — Newton Representatives Susan D. Schur and David B. Cohen this week announced Governor King's final approval of a significant change in county budgetary procedure, through an "outside section" of the fiscal year 1982 budget.

The provision removes the Legislature entirely from the process of approving county government spending. Control is instead lodged in county advisory boards comprised totally of selectmen, mayors and other elected officials from the cities and towns within each county.

"The governor's approval of the state budget represents the signing of a declaration of independence for Massachusetts counties," commented Schur, who' along with Rep. Cohen, is a member of the Middlesex County Project, a coalition of legislators working for county government reform. "Until now counties have operated under the control of the State Legislature. This section of the state budget moves the control over their budgets to the local communities who make them up."

Middlesex County Project members point out that each city and town has to pay an assessment for county services with the same property tax dollars which could otherwise go for public education, police protection, or fire protection. They maintain that since cities and towns carry the costs of county government, they should also be able to determine the size of the budget.

"This doesn't mean that cities and towns can go to sleep on the issue of county waste and spending," said Rep. Schur. "The county budget boards created by the new reform will have to start meeting this fall, and the mayors and selectmen should begin to organize now. Getting the Legislature out of the counties may amount to a revolution, but it is up to local elected officials to pick up the ball responsibly. The major opportunity presented by this change is to make county government accountable to those who pay the bill. The advisory boards should seize this opportunity for reform."

Rep. Cohen added, "Cities and towns in places such as Middlesex County can, if they wish to, come close to 'abolishing' their county governments through the use of the new budget authority. The law does not require that money be appropriated for a function or department believed to be unnecessary. The county operations which remain will be those which can demonstrate their value to the city and town officials on the newly constituted county budget board."

The cities and towns will also have the option of using their budgetary powers to make county government serve new and useful regional purposes. "This is a chance to save the taxpayer some money '" said Schur, "but it's also a chance to experiment with redefining needed services and ways of providing them."

Police hunt 2

NEWTON — Police are looking for two men in connection with a string of robberies at three Newton pharmacies and one Watertown pharmacy' including an armed robbery of the Manet Lake Pharmacy Friday afternoon.

Shortly before 3 p.m. on Friday, two white males forced employees of the store at 17 Commonwealth Avenue into a back room and asked for a number of narcotic drugs by name. They forced the employees to lie on the floor, grabbed the drugs and fled.

Composite drawings of the two suspects have led police to believe the two men are responsible for other recent robberies of narcotic drugs from area pharmacies.

The suspects were each described as white males, 5 feet 10, and 145 pounds with medium builds. One was in his 20's with short black hair and the other has sandy hair, police said.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

Most of us recognize that it is important to have a child's teeth checked regularly. Teeth, during childhood years, are particularly subject to decay. However, just as a child's teeth are particularly vulnerable, so is the spine. Consider the strain on the spinal column during birth when a baby is delivered with a necessary pull on the head and neck. Consider as well the spills and tumbles taken by children while learning how to walk or while playing. Minor childhood bumps may cause major adult problems.

Chiropractic treats problems caused by spinal misalignments. We offer quality chiropractic care for the entire family. Start children at a young age with chiropractic treatment and insure proper postural development and straight healthy spines. The family athlete can benefit from regular treatment to minimize sports injuries and to build health. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment including three evenings a week for your convenience.

CHIRO TIP:
It is important for your child to have regular chiropractic checkups.

Firing

Quinn initially refused to appear before the committee to discuss the firing. However, after being threatened with a subpoena, he changed his mind. Quinn has refused to comment on the decision to fire Hollie with the press.

Ald. Richard McGrath argued that Hollie should be allowed to attend the session. "It is up to the aldermen to decide the parameters of this executive session, not the city solicitor," he said.

McGrath added: "Mr Hollie certainly should be present. I'd like to ask him some questions. Since we are dealing with personality and procedure, it is proper for Mr. Hollie to remain."

Board of Aldermen President Matthew Jefferson, who requested the meeting with Quinn, agreed. "I frankly believe the dismissal was unfair," he said. "The only thing I would like to find out is how you arrived at this particular point."

After the meeting, Hollie, who was an eight-year-veteran of the force, said he felt the executive session was "helpful." He added: "It was interesting. It was nothing I didn't expect."

Jefferson, the only black alderman on the 24-member legislative body, said he did not know what further action the committee could take on the Hollie dismissal.

In his complaint with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, Hollie contends he has been harassed and denied a promotion because he is black.

Ossinger

Thomas Troy and Michael Reilly filed the lawsuit against Mann and the city on June 10.

Ossinger's bid for her position took a bizarre twist in June when Funk indicated that the West Newton woman may be using a phony letter in an attempt to win the lawsuit.

Ossinger claims the mayor signed a letter dated Feb. 22, 1972 which guarantees her civil service rights and benefits. Under civil service laws, Ossinger would have been entitled to a hearing before she was dismissed.

Funk released a statement on May 26 denying that Mann ever granted Ossinger civil service rights and benefits. Funk also said that the city has "sufficient evidence to warrant that the signature on the (Feb. 22, 1972) letter (provided by Ossinger) is not the mayor's and the letter was not written in the mayor's office."

Funk has argued that the Ossinger lawsuit has "no basis in fact or law."

Pay raise

If the board chooses not to raise the mayor's salary, under the City Charter, it must remain at its present level, $37,500, for the next four years. The salary of the office was last raised in 1978 from $27,500 to its present level.

Aldermanic salary was also raised in 1978 from $1,200 to its present level of $1,800.

Richmond, who presented five salary proposals ranging from an annual five percent pay hike to a seven percent yearly boost, said he was "shocked that the committee (mayoral and aldermanic pay) would consider that the chief executive of Newton could go eight years in double-digit inflation without a raise in salary."

"I personally feel that eight years without an adjustment is intolerable," said Richmond.

Ald. Robert Tennant said he "completely and totally disagreed with the report." Tennant, a proponent of no pay for aldermen, said "he could not imagine anyone (the mayor) working for eight years without an increase."

On aldermanic pay, Tennant said many of those alderman who testified in front of the citizens committee "exaggerated on amount of time and money they spent on the job."

"This job should be totally considered a civic duty," said Tennant.

Ald. Paul Coletti, who opted for no increase in either mayoral or aldermanic salaries said he went through his own expenses and "could in no way bury $1,800 in expenses."

"The $400 is not justified," Coletti said. "My expenses (estimated at $1,200) still don't surpass my stipend. I just can't see where they would require any additional monies."

"If they believe they should be compensated for a service then we should be discussing the raise in a different context," he added.

Coletti, who said the mayor himself diserves a raise, voted against a pay hike because of the over $110,000 in salaries earned by Mayor Theodore Mann's "support staff."

The executive office currently operates with five assistants to the mayor including two secretaries.

Aldermen voting for the salary increases include: Richmond, Budge and Bauckman.
Aldermen voting against the increases include Tennant and Coletti.
Aldermen absent include Baker, Carmichael, and Dietz.

Candidates

Wards 1, 4, 6 and 8 will have preliminaries in Board of Aldermen contests.

In Ward 1, incumbent alderman Joseph DePasquale is being challenged by two men new to local politics, Gabriel Crognale of 38 Lothrop St., and John McDermott of 7 Washburn St. As this is a race for ward alderman, not alderman-at-large, the contest will appear only on the Ward 1 ballot.

In Ward 6, incumbent alderman Ernest Dietz is being challenged by Harold Levinsky and Theodore Gross.

The ward alderman in Ward 8 is also being challenged by two other candidates. Incumbent Robert Katz will fight to retain his seat with Deborah Rubin-Barnhart of 15 Sycamore St., and Marcy Richmond of 155 Christina St. Katz is completing his first term.

Five people have filed to run for alderman-at-large in Ward 4, a race that will appear citywide on the ballot.

Incumbent aldermen Donald Budge and Richard McGrath are seeking reelection. Challenging them are Robert McMillen, 11 DeForest Rd.; Mark Golden, 37 Grayson Lane; and Lane Sofman, 15 Bonmar Circle.

One of those running will be eliminated in the preliminary.

Ward aldermen running unopposed are: Elaine Gentile (Ward 2), Carol Ann Shea (Ward 4), and R. Lisle Baker (Ward 7).

In Ward 3, the ward alderman, Paul Daley, vacated his spot by moving to Ward 5 where he is running at-large. Candidates in this race are Richard Bullwinkle and Paul Snyder. Bullwinkle was a veteran alderman who gave up his seat four years ago to run for mayor.

In Ward 5, the post being vacated by State Rep. Susan Schur, will go to Michael Malec of 53 Margaret Rd., running unopposed.

Aldermen-at-large running unopposed are: Robert Tennant and Matthew Jefferson (Ward 3), Rodney Barker and Ethel Sheehan (Ward 6) and Wendell Bauckman and Cynthia Creem (Ward 8).

The surprise departure of Ald. Robert Gaynor from the Ward 1 race leaves three candidates vying for two seats. They are incumbent Bruce Carmichael, Glenn Morris of 128 Grasmere St., and Sondra Shick of 21 Fairview St.

In Ward 2, incumbents Terry Morris and Edward Richmond are challenged by perennial candidate Patricia Ciccone, 105 Fair Oaks Ave., a candidate in every election in recent memory.

In Ward 5, incumbents Paul Coletti and James Miller are challenged by Ald. Paul Daley.

In Ward 7, incumbent Domenic Taglienti is seeking reelection. Two other candidates, Verne Vance Jr. and Eve Ross, vie for the seat vacated by Mark White.

said that the ambulances should arrive from Florida in the next two days.

Ald. Richard McGrath said that the move to put officers in the vehicles "vindicates" the arguments of opponents to the Chaulk takeover.

"It goes to highlight the fact that Chaulk is not prepared to come in with the knowledge of the streets," said McGrath. "They can't give medical treatment if they can't find the streets."

McGrath and other aldermen have argued that allowing Chaulk to take over the service is a public safety risk. Mayor Theodore Mann, however, contends that the service provided by Chaulk will be "equal or superior" to the city operated service at a minimum savings of $320,000 to taxpayers.

Chaulk was originally slated to take over the service on July 1. The takeover, however, was delayed by a legal challenge by 12 aldermen to Mann's decision to hire a private firm. Mann denied at least three requests by aldermen to fund the Fire Department service.

Middlesex Superior Court Judge Paul Connolly put an end to the legal challenge by dismissing the complaint brought by aldermen. However, White said he plans to appeal the decision to the state Supreme Judicial Court.

Condos

"If the ordinance makes us hang around for 6-7 years, the economics change," he said. "The plan as proposed can't be any better than we made it."

Sheehan, said however, she "wouldn't delay the ordinance on her own because of all the other conversion activity in the city." She has stressed throughout the lawmaking that the ordinance is not only for those people at Chestnut Hill Gardens.

Despite Sheehan's steadfastness to see the ordinance voted on at the Aug. 10 meeting of the full board, there is a possibility that it may be chartered. A charter allows a board member to delay discussion on an item until the following meeting of the full board.

If the parlimentary rule is enacted, discussion on the item would be postponed until Sept. 8, the board's next meeting. This would in turn allow CHR General the time they have said they need for their program to run its course.

However, Sheehan said she was "very pessimistic" as to whether City Solicitor Daniel Funk would sign the ordinance. The Law Department has maintained that such an ordinance without legislation approved by state lawmakers would be "illegal."

The city ordinance, which was sent to the state legislature, is on hold in the Ways and Means Committee as the House recessed for a six-week vacation Friday.

Under the program offered by CHR General, 75 of the 422 units will be made available as rental housing for at least three years. In addition, a typical unit with discounts can be purchased for $93,380, a savings of more that $29,980 from what the former market price demanded. A person 70-years-of-age or older was entitled to an additional 5 percent discount under the plan offered by CHGA.

The big band sound is back

By JIM NORVELLE
United Press International

High-pitched trumpet tunes soar to the ceilings of America's ballrooms and concert halls, joined by trombones, saxophones and clarinets.

Down front, couples swing hand-in-hand to the boogie-woogie beat bouncing from the piano and drums as the rest of the throng sways in tempo.

It's 1981, not '41. The dancers are in their 20s and 30s, not 50s or 60s. The children of Bill Haley, Elvis Presley and the Beatles are dancing to Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller and Kay Kyser and his Kollege of Musical Knowledge.

Thanks to disco, the young have discovered that dancing cheek-to-cheek can indeed be heavenly and many feel there's no better music to sway to than the big band sound of the '30s and '40s.

Thanks to the late Stan Kenton and his high school stage band clinics, the resurgence may be here to stay.

"There's something infectious about it and the youngsters have not been exposed to it, but when they hear it, they love it," says Ernie Hecksher of the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco, one of the last hotel bastions of the big band.

Hecksher, Wayne Hutchison of the Willard Alexander agency in New York, Charles Bourgeous of the Newport Jazz Festival and others all agree — the big band sound is making another comeback and their bookings reflect it.

"We get more calls for big one-nighters than ever before," said Hecksher, whose hotel operates a house band. "We do one every year for the Seattle Symphony and go to Los Angeles a half dozen times a year. People are just starved for it."

Hutchison said his company takes bookings up to a year ahead of time and some of their acts, especially Count Basie, are scheduled that far ahead.

"It's a resurgence in a sense that the rest of the business is not showing a growth pattern the way we are," said Hutchison. "Rock and roll is not that healthy except for a half-dozen acts."

Bourgeous said "I don't know if it's a resurgence or rather a continuance.

"Sure there are young people. At the Rainbow Room, you'll find a cross-section. Roseland has a big band playing at least every week. They say the average age is 38, so you have some young people."

"I think the trend's been going on for several years," said Sonny Anderson, who books bands for Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif. "I would say the last two or three years it's been fairly obvious in our dance areas."

Everybody has his own pet theory as to why the big band sound is returning, Hutchison said. The two main common denominators were touch dancing generated by disco and Kenton's high school workshops.

When the sound of music shifted in the late 1950s and into the 1960s, non-touching dance steps like the Twist and the Watusi flooded the dance floors.

With the late 1970s came the Hustle and the thump-thump-thump disco sounds of Donna Summer and the Village People that sent people back to coordinated dance steps.

The last time such steps were popular were the early sock-hop '50s and the hey-day of the hi-de-ho — the swinging, big-band '30s and '40s. The music has followed the steps.

"It was something my parents got into," said Alan Stein, 32, the assistant manager of live entertainment for The Old Country, Busch Gardens, theme park near Williamsburg, Va., and a former college music professor. "My parents are wonderful dancers and I'm particularly taken by the style and sound.

"I think dancing is a key (to the resurgence), but it's also tied in to just the rhythm of the music. That type of rhythm is what everybody's coming back for."

Said Hecksher: "People are just starved for it."

Much of the credit goes to Kenton and his workshops, most agreed.

"The clinic in the afternoon lasted less than an hour and usually didn't involve the leader, just the sidemen," said Hutchison. "Then a two-hour clinic at night under the auspices of the band boosters, who used it as a fund-raiser.

"Today, we have 400-to-500 dates a year playing in high schools ... and they are usually very, very successful."

Said Disneyland's Anderson, "Kenton involved a lot of young musicians. The momentum of that started things in high school and college and even junior high schools have some really good stage bands.

"Stan probably did a lot to generate interest ... and the kids said to themselves, 'Hey, this is neat.'"

The young have discovered that dancing cheek-to-cheek can be heavenly and many feel thre's no better music to sway to than the big band sound of the '30s and '40s. Young people "love it," says Ernie Heckscher, pictured leading his band at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco, 8/1, one of the last hotel bastions of the big band.

Plan to preserve the taste of fresh sweet cherries all year

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

The season for many fresh fruits is relatively short. For example, the supply of Northwest fresh sweet cherries is nearing an end. You can continue that special taste of a favored fruit by freezing or drying them to use during the fall and winter.

Freezing cherries whole with stems is quite easy. Have moisture-proof containers with lids or plastic freezer bags at the ready when you begin. Work with a small amount of cherries to allow for quick handling and prompt freezing. Wash cherries in ice water and drain. Spread cherries with stems on a cookie sheet and freeze until firm. Pack into containers, cover, label and return to freezer. Use as garnishes or frozen snacks.

Meanwhile, a frozen sweet cherry topping may be used over hot breads, as a filling for pastries or turnovers or topping for ice cream or custard. Dried sweet cherries make healthful snacks for the family.

FROZEN SWEET CHERRY TOPPING

4 cups prepared,Northwest fresh sweet cherries
4 cups sugar
1+s4cup lemon juice
1 cup water
1 package (1 3+s4ounce) powdered fruit pectin

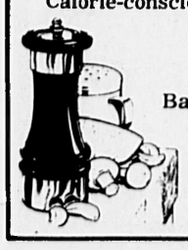

Wash, stem, pit and halve cherries; measure 4 cups. Mix in sugar and lemon juice. Let stand 30 minutes, stir occasionally. Combine water and pectin; bring to boil and boil hard 1 minute. Pour over cherry mixture; stir about 3 minutes. Pour into clean containers; cove r with tight-fitting lids. Let stand at room temperature until cool. Freeze. This kitchen-tested recipe makes approximately 6 half pints. DRYING NORTHWEST FRESH SWEET CHERRIES

Select firm, ripe Northwest fresh sweet cherries. Wash, remove stems and pit if desired. Place cherries, skin side down if in halves, in single layers on dehydrator trays. Dry at a temperature of 140 degrees for a period of up to six hours, being careful not to over-dry cherries. Cherries should be leathery and slightly sticky when properly dried. To store, place in small plastic bags, seal and keep in dark, dry, cool spot until used.

NORTHWEST sweet cherries freeze well for topping or snacks.

It's good for what ails you and makes food flavorful

THE SLIM GOURMET
Calorie-conscious cooking

By Barbara Gibbons

Throughout most of its history, garlic has been as much medicine as food ... peasant penicillin for everything from asthma to zymosis. Its cure-all status continues; reports from foreign journals claim that garlic has been useful in treating atherosclerosis (in Germany), meningitis (in China), anemia (in Australia), arthritis and pneumonia (in Japan), colitis (in Russia), diabetes (in India) and hypertension (in Switzerland).

Not every claim has been substantiated, so you might not want to keep garlic in your medicine chest. But one thing garlic IS a sure-cure for: bland and boring food!

Three grams of garlic — one clove — can alter the character of an entire soup, stew or salad. Yet, its caloric cost is only four calories. What other ingredient provides so much flavor at so low a "price?"

Garlic salt or powder is no substitute for the "real thing." If it's the inconvenience (and smelly fingers) that keeps you from mincing up a little garlic every time you need it, why not make up your own "instant" fresh garlic to keep on hand in your refrigerator, bottled in vinegar? Here's how:

FRESH 'INSTANT'GARLIC
white vinegar

Separate an entire head of garlic into cloves. Peel each clove with a sharp pointed knife. Or, mash each clove with a kitchen mallet and simply pick off the peel. Finely mince the garlic and put it into a jar. Add white vinegar until the garlic is covered. Screw on the lid and store the garlic in the refrigerator. Use as needed. One teaspoon is the equivalent of one medium clove; 4 calories.

FROZEN INSTANT GARLIC — Mash, peel, then mince the garlic and spread it on an aluminum pan or sheet of foil. Freeze uncovered, so granules are separate. When frozen, scrape garlic granules into a small glass jar and store in freezer. Return jar to freezer promptly after removing the amount you need, so garlic doesn't defrost and refreeze in a clump.

Some ways to use garlic:

GARLIC BASTE FOR BROILED FISH — Mash 1 to 2 cloves or teaspoons of fresh minced garlic with 2 tablespoons lime or lemon juice and 1 tablespoon soft butter (or margarine). Spread the mixture over 1 pound of fish steaks or fillets before broiling. Makes four sevings, under 120 calories each (with flounder, sole or cod).

GARLIC HAMBURGERS — Improve the flavor of very lean ground beef by mixing in 1 teaspoon minced fresh garlic per pound. Or try this: Combine 1 or 2 cloves garlic and 1 cup low-fat cottage cheese in blender and process smooth. Toss this mixture with 2 pounds lean ground beef round until thoroughly blended. Then shape the mixture into 8 patties for broiling. The meat will be moist and flavorful. Makes eight servings, 175 calories each.

FARMERS GARLIC BUTTER — Combine 1 clove peeled garlic, 4 ounces butter (or margarine) and 8 ounces fresh farmer cheese (or pot cheese) in blender or food processor using the steel blade. Process smooth. Refrigerate in a covered container. Use as a spread for crisp French or Italian bread. Spread is under 50 calories per tablespoon (less than half the calories of butter!).

GARLIC SALAD DRESSINGS — Simply mash and peel a clove of garlic and drop it into a bottle of any favorite (low-calorie) salad dressing. If you like garlic, and they don't (or vice versa), serve salads "undressed" and put both types of salad dressing on the table. Store dressing in the refrigerator.

Office moocher gets dose of his own medicine

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A word to IN THE HOLE, who asked how to handle "El Cheapo," a cheapskate moocher in her office. (He never contributed toward the daily snacks of coffee and Danish, but he always ate well.)

Years ago, I worked in the bookkeeping department of a local bank. One woman always kept a box of candy on her desk and the rest of us would chip in to pay for it.

Our "El Cheapo" never put in a penny. Even worse, he would grab a handful of candy, eat it and take another handful — cleaning her out.

In a fit of disgust, we decided to teach him a lesson, so one day we filled the candy box with chocolate Ex-Lax. We never had any trouble with him again. — ETHEL IN MELBOURNE, FLA.

DEAR ETHEL: Touche. One might say he cleaned her out, and vice versa!

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letters regarding marriage to a disabled person. They all missed one very important point: All physically handicapped people are not noble, heroic and courageous. Many are, of course, but some are not.

When I married my husband, he walked with a decided limp and had to use a cane because of an industrial accident. He was awarded a disability pension and was on Social Security. His doctor gave him some exercises to improve the use of his leg. (He never did them — too boring.) A vocational rehabilitation service offered a course to retrain him for another job. He flatly refused to consider it.

Instead, he sat home, day in and day out, watching soap operas while I went to work. He did absolutely nothing. He called himself "sick." ("I'm too sick to do this, too sick to do that.") This "sick" man could eat like a horse, and did. He put on weight, making it harder for him to walk.

I finally left him, and I can assure you, it had nothing to do with his leg. Never mind the physical handicap. The important question is, does the person have a character handicap? — FORMER WIFE

DEAR FORMER WIFE: Your point is well taken. There are lazy, selfish, bitter people among the disabled population, just as there are lazy, selfish, bitter people among the able-bodied. One should view a disabled person as a PERSON first. And if he happens to have a disability, he should be regarded as a PERSON with a disability.

DEAR ABBY: My husband passed away three years ago. Since then an old friend of mine who had just lost his wife turned up, and three months later we were married.

He's a fine man and I love him dearly and he loves me, but he has a 13-year-old daughter at home who has him wrapped around her little finger. Abby, I raised two daughters and I've never seen one like this. Whatever "Baby" wants, Baby gets! When a storm comes up, she comes into our bed to cuddle with her father. She's 5-5, weighs 185 pounds and has the mind of an 18-year-old. She's been wearing makeup (and heavy) since she was 10!

Her father thinks she can do no wrong and her wish is his command. I've given up trying to guide her.

I sold my own house and remodeled this one to make a home for this man. I really have tried hard to make this marriage work, but I just can't take any more of this daughter-father stuff. What do you suggest? — DEPRESSED.

DEAR DEPRESSED: The daughter has problems. And if her father doesn't recognize it, he has problems, too. Family counseling is essential in order to make this marriage work. If your husband loves you, he will cooperate. I hope he does, because unless his daughter is straightened out now, she will be his "problem child" all her life.

Local woman directs film

NEWTON — "The Nicest Dirt I Ever Saw," a documentary produced, directed and filmed by former Newtonite Nancy E. Cohen was shown on Channel 57, Springfield' Friday, July 24. The film dealt with the current conditions of small farmers in Massachusetts, their marketing, social and economic problems.

Ms. Cohen and her partner in the production, Peggy Carlson, have presented this challenging film at libraries, garage neetings and pertinent conventions in Massachusetts and Vermont. As a result of the impact this film had on the Pioneer Valley in western Massachusetts, Ms. Cohen, a student at University of Massachusetts at that time, was graduated magna cum laude.

Chairman is named

NEWTON — Robert Keyho, president of the Newton Rotary Club, announced that he has appointed Roy Mennell as chairman for the club's second annual antique auction.

In making the announcement, Keyho said this is a key appointment for the club. Last year under the direction of Mennell the club raised in excess of $4,000.

Three in teen pageant

BOSTON — There are three Newton girls scheduled to compete in the state finals of the 1981 Teenworld Pageant' to be held at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel on Aug. 8 at 7:30 p.m.

They are Kim Leinwand, Maria Mercuri and Ellen P. Breslin.

Miss Leinwand is the daughter of Susan Gerstenfeld of Newton Centre. She is a student at Newton North High School.

Miss Mercuri is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Domenico Mercuri of Auburndale; and Miss Breslin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Breslin of Newton. She is a student at Boston Latin School.

This pageant is the official state finals for the Teenworld Pageant. All contestants are between the ages of 14-18, must have a "B" or better school grade average and are required to participate in the Teenworld Volunteer Service Program.

The winner of the state finals will receive an all-expense paid trip to the national finals in Atlanta, Ga., a $1000 tuition scholarship to the Fashion and Art Institute of Dalls' a $500 cash scholarship and a full scholarship to the John Robert Powers School, among other prizes.

Contestants are judged on scholastic and civic achievements' poise and personality. No swimsuit competition is required. Contestants also choose between a talent competition or writing and presenting a speech on the subject' "My Place in the World."

St. Elizabeth's opens new unit for maternity

BRIGHTON — St. Elizabeth's Hospital has just opened a new Maternity Unit of obstetrical and nursery facilities which' together with its modern labor and delivery service, makes St. Elizabeth's Maternity Department one of the most up to date facilities in the nation.

The sophisticated nurseries can care for high risk infants as well as healthy babies. Two spacious well baby units are divided by a central nursing station to allow flexible staffing and optimum care. A special care nursery is adjacent to a "Suspect Nursery" for infants with possible infections. These nurseries are also joined by a central nursing station.

The Special Care Unit provides the latest in-wall suction and oxygen and allows visual monitoring from the nursing station. The Parent Contact Room has also been enlarged to encourage parents of high risk babies to become acquainted with their infants.

The Nursery Unit has the 24 hour services of an in-house pediatrician and a full time neonatalogist with special training with newborn and high risk infants.

Cardinal Cushing Pavilion 6 has attractive private and semi-private patient rooms, expanded treatment and conference areas and a dining room for parents dinners, as well as a solarium and additional staff offices. The Alternative Birthing Room allows a patient and her support person to share the intimate birth experience.

The union of Obstetrical and Nursery facilities supports the family-centered Maternal and Child Care Program of the department. A nurse assigned to each patient helps her to plan a flexible care schedule for herself and her baby. Support services are offered by a physical therapist, a nutritionist and social worker if needed.

Prenatal classes include one for Spanish speaking patients and another with an Indochinese interpreter, as well as courses in Lamaze breathing and Caesarean section. Group discussions for new parents are available.

Business for Peace group announces first meeting

BOSTON — "Do the Russians Keep Nuclear Agreements? Let the Record Speak" will be the topic of the first regular monthly meeting of Business Persons for Peace, to be held Aug. 10 at the Holiday Inn, Totten Pond Road, Waltham.

The speaker, Thomas Halstead, is director of Physicians for Social Responsibility. Halstead is also former head of public affairs at the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Business Persons for Peace is a new organization formed in eastern Massachusetts to alert and educate business people to the danger of nuclear war. The growing likelihood of an unprecedented disaster raises nuclear war to the number one survival issue in the opinion of some local business people.

Among the first members are Phillip Villers, president of Automatix, Inc.; William Alden, president of Alden Computer Systems, Corp.; and John Kenneth Galbraith, economist.

The organization seeks the support of all business people and those identifying with the interests of business and expects to link up with similar groups forming elsewhere in the country. It welcomes those in the defense industry who understand first-hand the problems of arms development and production, and who grapple with the difficult moral and practical questions involved.

The meeting will begin at 6 p.m. with liquid refreshments. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m., with the speakers and program following at 8 p.m. In addition to Halstead' Jerome Grossman, president of the Council for a Livable World and former president of the Massachusetts Envelope Company, will kick off the organization's new projects. For reservations and additional information, call Cherie Wallett at 253-1578.

"Our professional backgrounds have taught us to compete peacefully with diverse people," says a spokesperson. "We believe that the experience of business people in negotiating their survival and prosperity in a competitive world has relevance to the issue of negotiating the survival and prosperity of the United States and the world."

Library program expands

NEWTON — Virginia A. Tashjian, Director of the Newton Free Library ' recently reported that the expanded Library Volunteer Program now involves more than fifty Newton residents.

Many more have said they will begin their library volunteer work in the fall.

The volunteers' contributions to the library's programs and to maintaining the library's high quality service, are particularly welcome at this time when staffing is at a minimum.

Susan Goldberg of the libraary staff is the Coordinator of Volunteers. She and a group of community representatives have worked with the library staff to set up the program.

Volunteers assist at the circulation desk; help process A-V materials; prepare magazines and paperbacks for the shelves; type; input into the computer; work in the Public Relations Department; sort and shelve books; deliver library materials to "shut-in" patrons, and help in many other ways.

If you wish to volunteer' or want more information call Susan Goldberg at 552-7159.

Day care a warm place for kids

NEWTON — Anthony J. Bibbo, Executive Director of the Newton Community Service Centers Inc. announced this week that registrations for the agencies Day Care Services will continue daily Monday-Friday from 9 to 4.

In commenting on the services which are scheduled to serve youngsters three months old through 5th grade, Mr. Bibbo stated that "the major goal for the program is to provide a warm' flexible, and nurturing environment where children can grow and be happy. It is our goal to meet the social emotional, intellectual and physical needs of each child in accordance with his or her individual needs and abilities." newton...Bibbo...2

The Infant Toddler Program provides a safe, warm, and stimulating environment designed to maximize the growth and development of children between the ages of three and 33 months. "Our primary goal for this program," Bibbo pointed out, "is to support the development in each child of a positive lunch, and snacks are provided daily." The hours are: 8 a.m. - 6 p.m. This program is housed at the Auburndale Congregational Church, 64 Hancock St., Auburndale.

The pre-school Day Care Centers provide a variety of enjoyable curricular activities for children two years, nine months to six years of age. Staffing is at a ratio of one:five. A hot lunch and two nutritious snacks are served daily. The hours are: 7:30 a.m. - 6 p.m. The center will be located at the newly renovated facilities of the NCSC, Inc. at 492 Waltham St., West Newton.

The After School Care Program is an exciting, flexible and recreational program designed for after school hours of children in first through fifth grade. The program includes a wide variety of interesting activities such as music, dance, creative movement, field trips, movies, bowling, crafts, cooking wood-working, drama, etc. Help with school work is always available. The staff ratio is one to seven. Children bring their lunch, which is supplemented with milk, soup, and an afternoon snack. The center is open during all school vacations (most holidays) on a full-time basis from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. The general hours are: Monday, Wednesday, Friday, 3 - 6 p.m. and Tuesday and Thursdays 1 - 6 p.m. This activity is also to be housed at 492 Waltham St., facility as its base.

The Family Day Care is an extension of the Newton Day Care Centers. Family Day Care provides care for children in private homes. Home providers receive supervision and in-service training part time or temporary care may be from the agency. Full-time' arranged. Home providers are licensed by the Office for Children.

Mr. Steve Oaks is the Director of the NCSC Inc. Day Care activities. He will be assisted by Mr. Art Sills as Program Director of the pre School & After School Programs; Ginny Satkunas as program director of the Infant Toddler Center; and Ruth Dane heading Family Day Care.

Morgan Memorial needs volunteers for fashion shows

BOSTON—Women who always dreamed of being fashion models may now have that opportunity, as the Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries seeks volunteers for its "Styles through the Years" fashion show.

Morgan Memorial has been offering this popular show of antique clothes since 1969. Demand for the show is so high from Greater Boston organizations that substitute models are needed to present fashions dating back to 1863, continuing through the Gay Nineties and the Roaring Twenties to the present day.

The following positions are open: Substitute models, who must have good stage presence, ability to wear antique clothing well and wear a minimum of three outfits per show; Narrator, with clear speaking voice, good diction and ability to keep an audience interested for an hour; Pianist, with excellent sight-reading ability and ability to change keys and tempos rapidly)the music used is 1890's and 1920's popular and show tunes); Dressers, to assist models in dressing and changing outfits, helping with hair dressing and accessories. All volunteers must be available for evening shows. A variety of sizes, primarily small sizes' of women's fashions are modeled in the show.

Proceeds from the shows benefit Good Will's human services programs, including workshops' fresh air camp, senior citizens' camp and hot lunch program, and Hayden Goodwill Inn School for Boys in Dorchester, and supporting services.

Anyone interested should call Rosemary Greco, director of volunteer services, Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries, 95 Berkeley St., Boston, at 357-9210, ext. 240 between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

The custodian and the proposition

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON - After nine and one half years as a muncipal employee, Louis DiClemente believes he is being shortchanged.

DiClemente, a victim of Proposition 2½, was let go effective June 30, 1981 when the city eliminated two City Hall custodial positions.

Subsequently, he was immediately hired by the school department as a custodian, but without the benefits and the salary he had earned working for the city over the past decade.

According to Thomas O'Conner, an assistant to School Personnel Director Helen Thomas, DiClemente will also have to take the civil service exam because he "didn't come off the list we normally hire from." Until this time, DiClemente, 39, will remain a "provisional" employee without union benefits.

"When I went to work for the new department, I was told I was just like a new employee off the street," said DiClemente, a life-long Newton resident who in part supports his widowed mother. "I can't live on this kind of money."

According to DiClemente, he was earning $296 a week plus night differential as a city employee. Working for the school department, his pay has been slashed almost $100 a week.

As a result, DiClemente, who has filed a grievance with the city of Newton, and Murdoch Frazer, president of City Hall Associates Local 3092, have said they "will fight this in court if necessary."

Frazer contends the departments are no longer separate entities under Proposition 2½. A provision of the tax-cutting measure forced the School Department to forfeit its fiscal autonomy.

"Scafidi's name is on the bottom of each of those checks," said Frazer. "As union president, I'm going to see that this situation is corrected now and in the future."

However, Thomas P. O'Conner, an assistant to School Personnel Director Helen Thomas, contends otherwise. O'Conner, who did the hiring, insisted last week that the "Newton Public Schools is a separate entity from the City of Newton," and that DiClemente "came to work for us under our conditions."

Neither Meisser or James Hickey, Mayor Theodore Mann's chief executive officer, are clear on how the law applies in this instance.

O'Conner noted it was a school department policy not to accept transfers from other city departments and that "he was not interested in whatever happened before DiClemente's employment with the schools."

Yet the city's policy, highlighted recently by the transfer of two employees from the school department, has been to accept transfers according to Meisser.

The conditions, which has sparked DiClemente to file the grievance, include the loss of over 100 days of accrued sick leave; loss of three weeks vacation leave; the loss of seniority status; and the reduction in pay of close to $100 a week.

The grievance, filed July 7, asks for the restoration of the sick leave, vacation and seniority status and an adjustment in loss in pay retroactive July 1, 1981. The grievance, originally filed with the city, has since been handed over to Leon Kowal, the city's labor lawyer, for advice on where it should be filed.

According to Frazer, in a conversation he had with Personnel Director Edith Meisser, she said the grievance should be filed with the school department. Meisser, however, said she "did not want to discuss" the grievance with the press.

"Dee made the decision that it's a school department issue because they have a separate personnel department," said Frazer.

Meisser, in a brief interview last week said "as far as she knows" the school department still has its own separate authority and proceedings. "I have no power to change that," she continued. "He was offered a job and he accepted. He was terminated by the city, not transferred."

Under state law, Meisser pointed out that a person can be transfered if the appointing authority is willing to accept the person as a transfer. Apparently, the school department is not willing to accept DiClemente as a transfer.

This difference in policy is a major bone of contention with Frazer. "It would be different if we haven't accepted people from the school department," he said.

Prior to the school department hiring, DiClemente was passed over for a custodial job with the Newton Free Library. The two men hired for the posts, both of whom had previous experience with the city, retained their sick time, vacations and only received a small cut in pay.

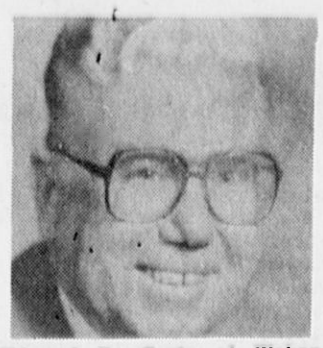

"I didn't realize I would lose all this," said DiClemente. "I would have fought the library more."

According to DiClemente, City Librarian Virginia Tashjian told him that the two men hired, neither of whom had DiClemente's experience, had "better references from City Hall." One of the men, said DiClemente had no custodial experience but was hired for his "supervisory experience."

Meisser, who worked with Mayor Theodore Mann to minimize the personnel cuts mandated by Proposition 2½, said she offered to help DiClemente locate a job in private industry but he chose to go with the school department instead.

"If he wanted to go out and try private industry, I would help him set up appointments," said Meisser, who told DiClemente this at the end of June. "Yet even in industry he wouldn't have started with benefits."

Meisser said DiClemente's name will be retained on a civil service recall list for five years. If a custodial job were to open up, the appointing authority could choose any of the top three people (DiClemente is now first) on the civil service listing.

Edward D. Canty of Waban, senior sales representative for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. has placed more than $2.8 million in personal insurance protection in 1980, ranking him among the top three percent of the company's 13,000 salesepeople in the country.

The exciting times of Sister Joan Frey

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — Sister Joanne Frey has the zest and vitality for her life that many of us probably wish we had in our lives. In fact, her spirited charm gives the impression of a much younger person. Yet Sister Joanne at 62 has lived a long life. It has been exciting too, one that some people only dream of living.

As an international leader for women in religious life, Sister Joanne has traveled throughout the United States, Mexico and South America. Her years have been spent conversing with the hierarchy of the Catholic Church, comforting and advising troubled people and tutoring the daughter of an American president.

Now, after more than three decades as a spiritual leader, Sister Joanne has arrived in Newton and is obviously very happy about it. "I just love the people here," she confesses, with a hint of her native West Virginia accent. "They are so warm and open to me as a woman in this role."

A relative newcomer to the Garden City, Sister Joanne arrived here just last September to join St. Bernard's Parish in West Newton as a pastoral assistant, an important and varied position for a woman in the church. As the first woman there to hold that post, she enthusiastically fulfills many of the same obligations as the priests of the parish, as a spiritual advisor, teacher and community leader.

"In this position, I have every opportunity to serve as fully as a woman can serve in the church today. The priests are very emenable to that.

Sister Joanne is an energetic woman who enjoys walking about Newton and learning the names of the streets and landmarks, as well as meeting people from West Newton and throughout the city. She is as warm as the pale gold and green decor of her rectory office and as cheerful as the speckled green eyes that shine from her expressive face.

Yet behind the lovely features and gentle nature is a strong and hardworking person who has spent many years trying to achieve equality for women in the Catholic church.

"As a result of Vatican II, religious women were asked to renew their lives, to bring them into harmony with the needs of the church. I took that as asking us to integrate our lives more fully more obviously with the world in which we live."

' She takes a breath then raises her hands and eyebrows, as her green eyes intensify. "Religious women took that very seriously."

A former secretary and purchasing agent, Sister Joanne entered the sisterhood at the age of 26. "I was never a religious fanatic' but I always felt close to the church." A sister from the Mission Helpers of the Sacred Heart, which is based in Baltimore, Md., Sister Joanne feels that it was a little unusual for her to have entered religious life, since so few people from her hometown of Clarksburg, West Va., chose that lifestyle. "Only one girl in 25 years had become a nun at the time I was entering."

With two years of business school and a baccalaurate degree in sociology from the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.' Sister Joanne remembers not knowing exactly what she wanted to do as she entered religious life. "I knew that I did not want to become a nurse or teach."

Instead' she found her niche as a liaison between the nuns and the Catholic hierarchy. Traveling for almost 10 years to some 35 religious communities throughout the United States and South America talking with nuns, "Always discerning their level of happiness, to find out whether or not they were happy, sad, fulfilled or whatever. Many are not."

"Most of the time you feel the limits placed on you by the church. This was not previously experienced because of the role women played in the past. We carried out the mission that the men gave us to do and were happy doing that."

She points out in particular the frustration felt by some women because they are not allowed to become priests. Though Sister Joanne did not have a desire to become a priest herself, she has always favored the acceptance of women in that role and worked for nearly a decade towards that goal. "I personally do not feel the calling to the priesthood. But many do."

As one of the focal points in her life, Sister Joanne strived to change the situation. "Through talking with bishops' I tried to change that. I supported it for eight years and worked hard at it."

While some people oppose the idea of women as priests, using the argument that it is based in the scriptures, she responds flatly' "I don't buy that. It was a male-dominated culture then. There is nothing in the scripture that should deny a woman this opportunity."

She notes with some hint of dismay that it will probably be a long time before women are accepted into the priesthood. "I feel that in time it will happen, but it may be a long time." Even more discouraging to her is the probability that it will happen for the wrong reasons. "I think that it will be sad if it happens because there are not enough men." Maybe that's the only way it can happen."

Hanging on the wall of her small, decorative office rests a framed photograph of the young family of John F. Kennedy, a memory of the year Sister Joanne spent teaching religion to young Caroline. She remembers tutoring Caroline during the year that her father was assassinated. "I worked with Caroline during that time. I was present with her." Sister Joanne's reminiscent eyes once again gain their usual sparkle. "It was a very exciting time. They were such caring parents. They were so concerned with her total education."

On the wall near the aging photograph, a hand-written letter from a little boy sending well-wishes to Sister Joanne is printed on large paper' framed by Sister Joanne. They are part of the personal touches she has added to her rectory office.

She is settled here now' though she shares a house with other sisters in the South End of Boston. Sister Joanne expects to stay in Newton for a long time. "I would hope to."

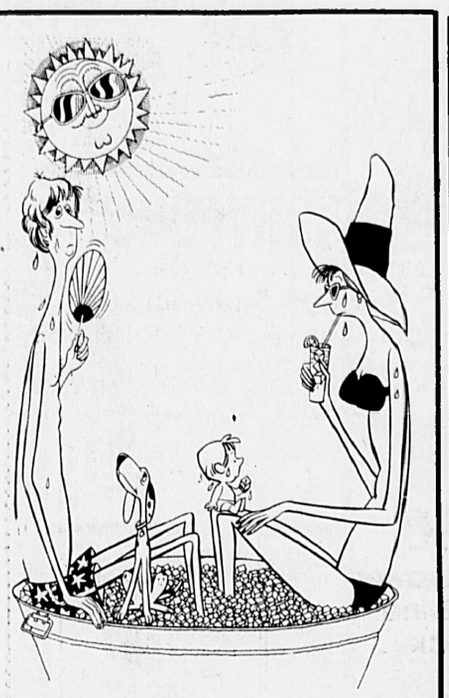

"I can go to about any of the shops in West Newton and see my friends. People are accepting me as part of the community. I'm beginning to know all the streets. I like the cops. I like everyone."

She has also been enjoying various events in the city and notes with enthusiasm the Feast of St. Carmen, held recently in Nonantum. "I loved the festival. It was just beautiful." She was also invited to Mayor Theodore Mann's annual prayer breakfast. "There were lots of people from various organizations. It was a wonderful cross-section of people."

Recently ' she helped initiate a program to reach out to elderly people and others confined to their homes. "I find people that need help or need someone to talk to. There are some people who do not want their loneliness disrupted. But I know it's good for people to be drawn out of themselves." They talk and talk' recalling their past and sometimes they cry. But that's good too."

Sister Joanne's goal is to reach out and help more people in the community' and try to get more people involved in the church's work. "The church is striving to make its faith a community experience that touches all of life. I like to use that same approach in my work here, people concerned about each other, in whatever the needs might be."

August

By Voni Weaver

Oh Augustus was a Caesar
Bent upon reform;
Had to banish his own daughter
Because that naughty girl loved porn.
August is so dull a time
I'd as soon discuss the turnip,
A vegetable I oft decline,
You might even say I spurn it.

Or the coffee from a coin machine,
Beside which other coffee pales;
Tastes like it never saw a bean,
In fact, is made from coffin nails.

The appropriate opprobrium
Is seldom brought to bear
On these subjects: moritorium.
Should I mourn or tear my hair?

Oh Augustus was a Caesar
Bent upon reform;
Julia wouldn't mend her ways
And Augustus died forlorn.

Stuck in traffic at some toll gate
Or peering vainly toward some sight'
Or watching corn become raccoon bait,
Or simmering, sweltering, day or night,

I sing August here and August there;
Some leave town, some flee it,
But it's boring August everywhere;
Throw up your hands; so be it.
Hark unto renowned cliches.
Celebrate the harvest moon;
Some Godforsaken winter day
We'll pine for summer's afternoon.

Rome fell' but left us August,
Fitting tribute' I should say,
For all reformers, just or unjust:
What they want is their own way.

Warriors squeeze past Cubs

Thirteen-year old Jamie Rice recorded his seventh win in eight decisions while Ed Cohen and Dave Buckley each pounded out two hits for two RBI's to lead the Murphy Division champion Auburndale Warriors to a 5-3 victory over the Oak Hill Cubs Thursday in an International League game at Newton South.

The Warriors, who clinched the title last week, are now 17-2-1. The defeat dropped Oak Hill to 13-7 and ended a five-game winning streak.

Rice ran into trouble early, allowing a run in the first and two more in the third. But the Warriors fought back from that with a run of their own in the first and three in the third.

Steve MacKay led off that third frame with a double, scoring on Cohen's follow-up two-bagger. Buckley singled in Cohen and Rice drove in Buckley to conclude the rally.

Auburndale got an insurance run in the fifth as Rob LeConti (two hits) tripled and Cohen singled him home.

Steve Chapman was a bright light for the Cubs, banging out three hits and driving in two runs.

Sacred Heart sent 14 batters to the plate in a nine-run fifth inning enroute to a 15-3 victory over Totem Pole in a game at Newton Centre Playground.

Dan Walsh was the winner going six innings and he also singled in two runs in the fifth frame. Fernando Migliassi, Roger Nusbaum and Ed McAvinn drove in runs in the fifth inning for Sacred Heart.

Adam Rubin also singled in two runs in the first inning for the winners. The victory lifted Sacred Heart's record to 8-12.

Gil Gross included a double and a triple amongst his three hits and Charlie Smith also went 3-for-5 as Carson Post stung Upper Falls, 18-9, at the Upper Falls Playground.

Carson Post took a 8-2 lead with three runs each in the first and second innings and two in the third before Upper Falls rallied with seven in the bottom of the third to take a 9-8 edge.

Upper Falls only got one hit in the entire game -- by Jeff Vachon -- but 13 walks by pitchers Don Natale and Gross led to nine runs.

Carson Post went back into the lead with four runs in the fourth and six in the fifth to cap off the scoring.

Gross notched the win in relief. Sean Gardner also had two hits in the winning effort.

John Drew cracked two doubles in a perfect 4-for-4 night to power Newton Post 440 to an 11-3 rout over Newton Sports Center at Cabot Park.

Doug Lantigua went the distance to notch the win, allowing only five hits.

Post 440 got all the runs it would need in the first when they went up, 4-0. Chip Guiney and Neil Stolzenbeck both had two-run singles. Drew then doubled in two runs, Guiney singled in another, and two more were forced in with bases-loaded walks as the winners exploded for five runs in the fourth to seal the easy triumph.

Bob Blouin singled in two runs to cap a three-run sixth inning which gave the Elks Red Sox a close 3-2 edge over the Auburndale Oaks at Albemarle Field.

The Oaks had taken a 2-0 lead with single runs in the third and fifth innings, but Ian Chambers started the winning rally by singling to lead off the sixth. After Sean McLellan walked, Kevin Walsh drove in the first run. Blouin then singled home the winners.

Doug Zito fired a three-hitter for the victory. Steve Delvecchio was solid in defeat, allowing four hits and fanning 10. He also went 2-for-3 at the plate.

International League

Deverix helps Boys' Club clinch crown

Dan Deverix picked up the win in relief and also contributed a clutch two-run triple as Boys' Club clinched first place in the International League Tuesday night with a 5-3 victory over Carson Post at Cabot Park.

Deverix replaced starter Jim Proia in the third inning and shut down Carson Post, which was leading, 2-1, at the time, with just one run the remainder of the way.

He also was the driving force behind a three-run rally in the bottom of the third which gave Boys' Club the win. After Bob Connerney singled and Dino Leone walked, Deverix cracked his triple. Mitchell Nash then followed with a single to complete scoring.

Boys' Club picked up an insurance tally in the fifth when Connerney singled, stole second, went to third on a throwing error and scored via Proia's sacrifice fly.

Boys' Club is now 15-4.

Jeff Robinson, a 14-year old righthander, threw a one-hitter to give the Totem Pole Braves a 3-0 triumph over Abruzzi Club at Del Ryan Field.

Paul Heck singled to centerfield for Abruzzi's only hit. Otherwise, Robinson was outstanding, fanning 11 batters and walking three. He got the only run he would need in the third when Craig Patrick walked, stole second and came home after Bob Nash's single.

Two more came across in the sixth. Jim Quinn and Paul Peruzzi both singled for one run and Mark Buckley executed a suicide squeeze for the other.

Totem Pole is now 8-8 while Abruzzi falls to 6-12.

Chris Pachus pitched an inning and two-thirds of clutch relief and he lined a timely two-run game-winning triple to pace St. Bernard's to a 7-5 come-from-behind victory over the Elks Red Sox in a game at Howie Ferguson Field.

The Elks scored five times in the fifth inning off starter Tom Ryan. Pachus came on with one out and got two strike outs to end the threat with the Elks on top, 5-4.

St. Bernard's charged back with three runs in the top of the sixth inning. Scott Lancilotti and Greg Welch led off with singles. Bob Gannon brought in the tying run with a base hit off the third base bag.

Pachus then slammed the two-run triple that hit the 380-foot marker in center field.

The five-run Elks' fifth inning started with walks to Ian Chambers and Doug Zito. Mark DeDasquale singled to left, but the ball got past the leftfielder allowing all three runs to score. Dan Blouin singled in two runs chasing Ryan from the mound and bringing on Pachus.

St. Bernard's took a 4-0 lead on an RBI-single by Clark Lowery, a sacrifice fly Lancilotti.

The win upped St. Bernard's record to 13-6.

The Oak Hill Cubs captured its sixth straight win by breezing past Newton Sports Centre, 13-1, in a game at Lincoln Park. Steve Chapman was on the mound for his fourth win of the season without a defeat.

The Cubs took charge of the contest with seven runs in the second inning. Steve Anglin, Dave Whyte, Todd Stern, Marc Stiller and Glen Rosengard all had RBI hits in the inning for the winners.

The win upped Oak Hill's record to 13-6.

ST. BERNARD'S(7)--Ryan 4-0; Gannon 4-1; Pachus 3-2; Romano 3-0; Lowery 2-1; Boule 3-2; Lancilotti 1-1; Weltz 3-1; Nicolazzo 2-0; Tot. 25-8.

Boys' Club clinches 1st place tie

The Boys' Club clinched a tie for first place in the Newton National Division by edging past Mosca Club, 5-1, Thursday night at Lincoln Park.

The victory boosted the Boys' Club to a 13-3-1 record. If the Boys' Club can defeat Upper Falls tonight it will clinch sole posession of first place. The loss left Mosca Club with a 11-6-1 record and in third place in the division.

Bill Bracken was pitching a no-hitter for six innings for Mosca Club, but still found himself trailing, 4-1. The Boys' Club capitalized on Mosca mistakes to gain the lead.

John Corsi went six innings for the win allowing just an unearned run. Bob Kenney came on in the seventh inning to mop up getting the side in order. Boys' Club grabbed a 1-0 lead in the second inning.

Bob Billings walked to lead off the inning and went to second on an error by the thirdbaseman. He stole third base and scored on a wild pitch. Mosca answered with an unearned run in the third inning.

The Boys' Club tallied three more times in the fourth inning without the benefit of a hit. Corsi scored on a wild pitch and two more runs scored on sacrfice flies by Mike Walsh and Willie Zeniar.

The Boys' Club broke up the no-hitter in the sixth inning with consecutive singles by Kenney, Joe Slamin and John Bradley for the fifth run.

Steve Venditti walloped a three-run homer in the bottom of the sixth inning to allow the Auburndale Sports Shop to retain its hold on second place by coming from behind and defeating Upper Falls, 4-3, at Del Ryan Field.

Steve Caliguri led off the sixth for Auburndale with a walk and went to third on winning pitcher Larry Kelly's single. Caliguri scored on a passed ball and Dave Arcese walked. Jerry McHugh then came in to pitch for Upper Falls.

Venditti smacked the homer over the centerfield fence off McHugh to win it for Sports Shop. It was Kelly's first pitching win the National Division.

Norumbega tallied three times in the fifth inning to grab the lead. Shawn Pollard singled in a run to bring in the first run. Ken Sabbag and Jim Goldblatt also had RBI singles for the Chiefs in the inning.

The win lifted Auburndale's record to 11-3-3.

C and K Components was awarded a 7-0 forfeit win over Upper Falls.

Colts roster down to 73

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — The departure of place-kicker Richard Snodgrass, a free agent out of Slippery Rock State, reduces to 73 the number of players left in the Baltimore Colts' training camp.

Snodgrass left the camp Tuesday following a brief training camp tryout at Goucher College.

"He just didn't feel it would work out," said Colts' spokesman Walt Gutowski.

The exit of Snodgrass, a 6-foot 180-pounder, leaves the Colts with three place-kickers on their roster. They are: veteran Steve Mike-Mayer and rookies Obed Ariri and Ish Ordonez.

Bracken's bat sparks Mosca

Bill Bracken singled to left field to drive in Mark Simches in the bottom of the sixth inning and ...t the Mosca Club to a 10-9 seat-squirming victory Tuesday night over St. Bernard's in a Newton National Division contest at Albemarle Field in the night cap of a doubleheader.

Bracken pitched to one batter and picked up the win. He came in for Steve Kasten, who was injured in a collision at home plate. Mosca Club went into the fourth inning with a seemingly comfortable 7-0 lead. St. Bernard's battled back to score four times in the fourth and fifth inning.

The home run was a major part of the attack for St. Bernard's. Harry Martins led off the fourth frame with a solo homer. Bob Mack singled in another run two more scored on a wild pitch and an error.

In the fifth inning, Paul Boudreau slammed a three-run homer to left field and Mosca starter Mike Pappas left for Kasten. Kasten got wild and walked in the eighth run. Kasten also allowed the tying run in the sixth inning on a wild pitch.

Mosca Club also made the home run as staple in its early offense. Paul Aries walloped a two-run homer in the first frame for Mosca. In the five-run second, Rob Fast let loose with a three-run homer and Mike Nicoletti blasted a two-run homer off starter John Santagatti.

In the first game, St. Bernard's scored five times in the third and fourth inning to run away with a 12-5 decision over Mosca. Bob Bernard pitched six innings for the win.

A two-run double by Dave Donahue sparked the five-run third frame for St. Bernards. In the fourth inning, Boudreau and Martins each had a two-run single for the winners. Paul Aries and Mark Paglia each had an RBI-single for Mosca Club.

The day left St. Bernards with a 6-7-3 record and Mosca Club with a 11-5-1 record.

John Toyias' double with one out in the sixth inning gave C and K Components a 3-3 tie with Auburndale Sports Shop in a game at West Newton Common.

C and K battled back from a 3-0 deficit with a run in the fourth inning and the two in the sixth frame. Gary Frechette started the sixth off with a walk and Mat Bilodeau followed with a single. Both runners advanced on a wild pickoff attempt. Toyias followed with the game-tying double.

Chris Buras singled home Jim Walsh with the first C and K run in the fourth inning. Auburndale jumped out to a 3-0 lead.

Steve Venditti's RBI-single scored Larry Kelly and when the ball got past the centerfielder Dave Arcese came around to score the second Sports Shop run. The third Sports Shop run scored on an error by the C and K shortstop. The summaries:

Ouimet winner John Hadges

Hadges rallies to capture Ouimet

John Hadges rebounded from a mid-round crisis to win the 13th annual Francis Ouimet Invitational Golf Tournament Friday at the Woodland Golf Club in Newton.

Hadges, who won the tournament by three strokes with a 144, got into trouble on the par-four 10th hole. He hit his second shot awry to set up a double-bogie six. That put former New England Amateur Champion David Lane into the lead by a stroke.

Hadges charged back to regain the lead with a birdie-four on the 12th hole and he never looked back. Hadges shot a 72 as he did in the first round on Friday. Lane finished the round with a 74 and the tournament with a 147.

Ken Whalley, who was tied for first on Thursday, finished tied for second with a 147. Jack Calf, also deadlocked for the lead after the first round, blew up to a 78 on Friday and ended with a 148. The summary:

John Hadges, 72-72--144; Ken Whalley, 73-74--147; David Lane, 73-74--147; Jim Hallet, 75-72--147; Peter Alves, 73-74--147; George Lucas, 75-73--148; Bob Caprera, 72-77--149; Paul Murphy, 75-74--149; Bruce Cahalas, 74-75--149; Jack Claf, 71-78--149; George Pepp, 74-76--150; Fordie Pitts, 75-75--150; Rick McDermott, 77-73; Paul Cortese, 74-76--150.

Phillips likes ex-Pat

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Guard Sam Adams, a big man of few words, is also, in the opinion of New Orleans Saints coach Bum Phillips, "an excellent football player."

Adams, a 10-year veteran of the NFL, was acquired by the Saints from the New England Patriots in return for an eighth-round draft choice in 1981.

"I've got a football player there," Phillips said. "He's a good football player. No, he's not a good football player, he's an excellent football player.

"I'll tell you one thing, the only way Sam Adams won't start for us this year is if he's not alive.

The guard's experience on a winning football team makes him a valuable addition to the Saints' lineup, Phillips said.

"He's been through it all and he's won. He's been on a winning football team," the coach said.

Phillips attributed Adams' leadership ability to the way he plays and practices.

"He's a load, I'll tell you. At 285 pounds he beats most of those guys out there," the coach said. "I imagine they could beat him on a 40-yard dash, but a 40-yard dash is just four first downs.

"When he comes off that line you watch him! He's ahead of all of them. By the time they get to the linebackers he's 1 ½ yards ahead of them and when he arrives, he arrives in a bad mood."

Although Adams doesn't talk much, rookies on the team learn from his actions, Phillips said.

"Having a guy like Sam Adams to look after the rookies doesn't hurt nobody," he said.

Having a safe picnic

At this time of year the impulse to picnic is whether nearby on patio or rooftop, at irresistible' the beach, or in the park during an open-air festival. There's a particular zest to dining alfresco, and enticing picnic fare is extremely varied.

But not every food that can be enjoyed cold or at room temperature is suitable for picnics. Even when kept in a cooler ' the heat manages to penetrate eventually. On a warm day, rapid spoilage may cause food poisoning.

To avoid such an unhappy conclusion to a summer excursion, St. Elizabeth's Hospital offers the following "picnic pointers."

Among the most susceptible foods are salads with mayonnaise dressings, dishes made with cream or milk and other dairy products like soft' semisoft or fresh cheeses.

Dr. Mark Rohrer, director, Emergency Medical Services at St. Elizabeth's explains that foods which allow bacteria to multiply rapidly, such as creamy dishes' are the ones which spoil quickly. Potato salad is a typical example. Every summer Dr. Rohrer treats d number of unfortunate victims of this buffet favorite.

Cooked and, especially, uncooked meat, fish or poultry are definite hazards. While it's unusual to encounter spoilage in fresh cold cuts' sliced meats or pates tend to discolor when exposed to heat' and are better in sandwiches prepared in advance. In most cases, barbecued foods are, also, a safe bet. acid ingredients and dressings with

For picnics' vinegar or lemon juice which tend to pickle foods and discourage the growth of bacteria are preferable. Greek or Middle Eastern appetizers and salads with oil and lemon dressings, gazpacho, South American empanadas, peppery Chinese salads all make excellent picnic fare.

Ripe fruits are all you need for refreshing dessert. Or individually wrapped cookies and brownies will not crumble.

You may want to take a vacation from soft drinks and substitute iced tea or fruit juice in a cooler. By diluting you obtain a lighter, quenching orange drink. orange juice with water'

A good idea is to assemble, wrap and refrigerate your picnic early in the day or the night before, so that foods are thoroughly chilled when transferred to the hamper. And don't overstock the cooler' as air circulation will help maintain a cold temperature.

It's extremely important not to leave foods sitting out, but return them to the cooler as soon as they have been served. And be very careful with leftovers—some of what was delicious and safe to eat at noon may be a risky snack later.

Dr. Rohrer cautions that it's impossible to tell by looking at food whether it's fit to eat. What looks fine and has no odor may be tainted.

The possibilities of picnicking are limited only by the imagination, taste and appetite. With a little prior planning and care, it should be "happy and healthy eating."

Recipient of this year's Janice Schlessinger Scholarship from the Republican Women of Newton is Debra DiCarlo (right) of Newton Highlands. Presenting the scholarship is Frances Shaer, president of the club.

Group plans solar exhibit

NEWTON — The Newton Citizens Commission on Energy will sponsor a series of solar programs beginning Sunday, Sept. 13, with a "This Is Solar" program and exhibition at Newton City Hall from 1 to 5 p.m.

The program will feature prominent speakers on relevant solar applications for Newton residents. Local solar contractors will be on hand to exhibit and answer questions on solar and conservation products.

A week-long focus using films' lectures, slide shows and workshops will include topics on greenhouses and sunspaces, domestic hot water systems, solar in new construction and a workshop for do-it yourselfers. A special feature will be a womens energy workshop co-sponsored by the League of Women Voters. The week will end on Saturday, Sept. 19 with a solar site assessment workshop for Newton residents.

Follow-up to the NEWTON SOLAR WEEK will include a solar home tour of Newton in October, to be co-sponsored by the Newton Conservators, as well as courses on solar applications to be offered to residents through the Newton Community Schools and continuing adult education programs of the City.

Co-ordinators for NEWTON SOLAR WEEK are Shuli Rockoff and Judy Jaffe, members of the Newton Housewarming staff. Newton Housewarming is an energy conservation and energy action program of the Newton Citizens Commission on Energy started in 1980, to assist citizens in conserving energy at home.

For more information or to volunteer to work on the program, call 244-2416 or 552-7057.

Former writer gains GTE post

NEEDHAM — The appointment of Claire M. Deveney, of Newton, as Manager of Public Affairs for the Strategic Systems of GTE has been announced by Richard R. Fidler, Division Vice President and General Manager.

The division, part of Sylvania Systems Group, is a leading designer and developer of command, control and communications systems and lithium battery power sources.

In the newly created position, Miss Deveney is responsible for national and local publicity, community affairs and employee communications. She joined GTE in 1980 as Public Affairs Administrator for Sylvania Systems Group. Previously, she was president of a public relations consulting firm' Public Relations Director of Lahey Clinic, Assistant Director of Publications for the Massachusetts Teachers Association and Employee Relations Director of Sweetheart Plastics, Inc.

A former feature writer for "The Boston Globe," Miss Deveney received a bachelor of science degree from Boston University School of Public Communication. Choreographer Nikki Hu

"If I can't find a studio to dance in, I'll dance in the air," says choreographer Nikki Hu, winner of a Massachusetts Artists Fellowship.

WATERTOWN — "If I can't find a studio to dance in' I'll dance in the air'" says Nikki Hu' a Watertown choreographer who recently lost her dance studio, a loft in the Boston leather district, when it was turned into a condominium.

Although one of Hu's aims is to "expand the form of modern dance," she does not expect to master the art of flying. So she is renting studio space from friends until she finds a suitable new place of her own.

Hu, born in mainland China, lived in Taiwan until coming to the United States when she was 6. She returned with her family to visit China briefly in 1978.

Hu's ideas about expanding modern dance include using techniques adapted from traditional Chinese theater. Chinese theater incorporates speaking, singing, movement, dancing, nime, and acrobatics. "The Chinese use it all — and that's what I hope to do'" Hu says.

In addition to exploring the form of modern dance, Hu hopes to expand its audience. "It's a challenge to try and find new ways to present modern dance in a favorable light," she says. "The audience for modern dance is everyone — not just dancers and their friends and family. Too many people have the impression that modern dance is boring."

The dances Hu choreographs are certainly not boring. Dancers are often accompanied by such dramatic props as bells, paper airplanes, a full-sized swing' or a plaster egg. And her dancers make great use of their hands andfaces, more commonly seen in Chinese theater than in American dance.

One of her dances, "Pustefix," begins "underwater," with dancers lying down on the floor mimicking clams and shellfish. A frog dancer appears; she is a magician who begins conjuring with bubbles. Huge bubbles form, undulate, float, and break onstage, accompanying dancers, who move with them, ignore them, or break them.

"Silver Wings," a dance about airplanes' gives a witty human version of helicopters, propellers, pilots in goggles, and passengers knitting. At the end of the dance, the dancers echo each others' movements, reminding the audience of planes flying in formation.

The first two dancers in another Hu creation — "Finches" — move in jerky, bird-like motions. A third, much larger bird' lumbers onstage ' and the birds warily dance around each other. The birds are awkward, but the dancers are not — a paradox often found in Hu's work.

While Hu would rather spend all her time creating new dances' she shares one common problem with all young' creative artists — surviving. She must divide her time between the creative art of choreographing new works and the practical task of earning money. Like many artists, Hu finds that teaching is a way to earn a living while staying within her craft. Hu has taught at Lesley College, as well as in various public schools.

One resource that made a big difference to Hu was the $3'500 Massachusetts Artists Fellowship that she won in 1979. The fellowship afforded some much-needed financial stability ' as well as public recognition ' and gave Hu time to create new work.

These fellowships, funded entirely by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities and administered by the Artists Foundation' are awarded in 12 disciplines each year. In addition to choreography, the categories are: poetry ' fiction, playwrighting, painting, printmaking and drawing, photography, sculpture' crafts, film, video and music composition. For full information on the Massachusetts Artist Fellowship program, write: Artists Foundation, 100 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. 02116.

"Winning the fellowship helped me in a number of ways — and one important one was becoming involved in the Artists-in-the-Schools program," says Hu. "Working with children and introducing them to modern dance is an excellent way to develop audiences for the future."

Hu's latest work combines fashion and dance. She calls the piece "Fashion Fantasies: A Performance by Nikki Hu's Clothes." Her work is inventive ' sometimes surprising. She lives in the world of the imagination, creating delight, until the morning newspaper arrives and she again takes up the hunt for a new — and affordable — studio.

PROGRAMS SUBJECT TO CHANGE

movies

THUR., AUG. 6

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) THE SECRET WAR OF JACKIE'S GIRLS. Mariette Hartley leads a team of courageous WW II female flyers who leave the safe routine of stateside flying to challenge dangerous missions on both sides of enemy lines. Lee Purcell, Ann Dusenberry, Caroline Smith, Dee Wallace and Tracy Brooks Swope. Bombardears.

FRI., AUG. 7

8:30-11PM NBC (7:30 Cent./Mt.) THE SLIPPER AND THE ROSE. Richard Chamberlain (how he gets around!) is the prince and Gemma Craven, Cinderella, the lass who captures his heart, in this musical fairy tale. A breath of fresh air.

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) THE POSSESSION OF JOEL DELANEY. Shirley MacLaine is a chic New York divorcee caught up in a series of hair raising events by the uncontrolled malevolence of her troubled brother (Perry King). One for the heebie-jeebies.

SAT., AUG. 8

9:30-11PM CBS (8:30 Cent./Mt.) NUNZIO. A grown man with the mental capacity of a child struggles to make sense of the turbulent Brooklyn streets around him by donning a Superman suit and devoting himself to noble deeds. In the exciting climax, Nunzio (David Proval) lives up to the heroic image of the fictional hero whose garb he has borrowed.

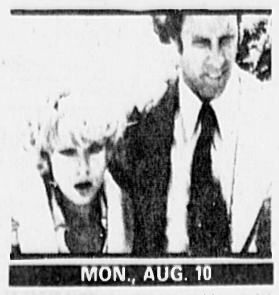

SUN., AUG. 9

8-9:30PM CBS (7 Central/Mountain) RENDEZVOUS HOTEL. A rollicking comedy tale of life in a breezy California resort hotel. A host of madcap problems and situations are as varied and unpredictible as there are different people seeking resort bliss. Bill Daily. Good for guffaws.

8-11PM ABC (7 Central/Mountain) THE BIBLE... IN THE BEGINNING. In the beginning, at press time, this movie was scheduled for the 2nd, so let's try again for the greatest story ever told: the creation of man, the temptation of Eve, the banishment from the Garden of Eden and the destruction of a sinful world by flood. George C. Scott, Ava Gardner, Peter O'Toole and Richard Harris.

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) FAMILY PLOT. In the 53rd film directed by the master of suspense movies, Alfred Hitchcock, two shady characters set out to find a missing heir. The dangerous search is filled with discoveries of crimes. Karen Black, Bruce Dern, Barbara Harris, William Devane and Martin West are all involved in this thriller.

MON., AUG. 10

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) BURNT OFFERINGS. Oscar winner Bette Davis stars with Karen Black and Oliver Reed in a tense thriller about a college professor and his wife whose summer vacation plans backfire when they rent an isolated, sinister mansion.

Good grisly offering for a summer night. Rest, relax and enjoy. Oh - and renters. Maybe you'd better button down those blinds!

TUES., AUG. 11

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) TORN BETWEEN TWO LOVERS. Lee Remick is a woman torn between the love for her husband and family and the thrill of a new romance and a new life. George Peppard and Joseph Bologna also star in this romantic drama.
Will she or won't she?

WED., AUG. 12

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) THE SEEDING OF SARAH BURNS. Teleflick that takes a dramatic look at the emotional upheavals surrounding a human embryo transplant. Kay

Lenz, Martin Balsam, Cliff DeYoung, Cassie Yates and Charles Siebert star. A new kind of pioneering.

THUR., AUG. 13

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) MARCH OR DIE. Part 1. Terence Hill and Gene Hackman are members of a French Foreign Legion detachment assigned to protect a desert excavation party... until they run afoul of a wily Moroccan leader who is out to thwart their plans. Max von Sydow and Catherine Deneuve also star. Second part tomorrow night at nine.

FRI., AUG. 14

9-10:30PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) MARCH OR DIE. Part 2.

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) I WANT TO HOLD YOUR HAND. Nancy (Blow Out) Allen is one of a group of New Jersey teenagers caught up in the first wave of Beatlemania when the Liverpool String Quartet first arrived here.

SAT., AUG. 15

9-10PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) GREATEST HEROES OF THE BIBLE Abraham's Sacrifice. Hebrew leader Abraham (Gene Barry) and his nephew Lot (Ed Ames) draw up a battle plan to save son Isaac (Brain Erickson) from kidnappers.

SUN., AUG. 16

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) HANGING BY A THREAD. (1). Sam Groom and Michael Sharrett play a father and son trapped along with others aboard a disabled sightseeing tram high above a deep mountain gorge. A cliff hanger.

MON., AUG. 17

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) HANGING BY A THREAD. (2).

TUES., AUG. 18

The Story of Freddie Prinze

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) CAN YOU HEAR THE LAUGHTER? THE STORY OF FREDDIE PRINZE. Ira Angustain as the comedian whose brilliant career was swiftly and willfully cut short at the age of 22. Kevin Hooks co-stars as Prinze's closest friend. A compelling drama.

WED., AUG. 19

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) JIMMY B. & ANDRE. Heartwarming true story about the relationship between a popular Detroit restaurateur and a black child who touched his heart and changed his life. Alex Karras stars as his real-life pal Jimmy and Curtis Yates takes the role of 10-year-old Andre. Kay Armen, whose voice charmed millions during radio's heyday, co-stars.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

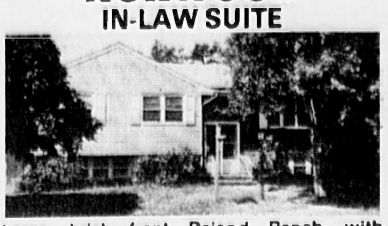

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

OUR FREEDOM SAFEGUARDS YOUR FREEDOM

Newspapers are the voice of a people and the force of a nation. They speak up and speak out... informing us all about what's happening in the world, and we in turn, learn and form opinions that help us to act on the issues and vote in government. The workings of a free and fearless press is our best defense against tyranny...and a powerful strength in a democracy.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
PROBATE COURT
Middlesex, ss.
No. 277943
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Henderson Inches, late of Newton, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R.Civ.P. Rule 72 that the fourth thru sixth accounts of James Barr Ames and Alfred W. Fuller, as Trustees (the fiduciaries) under the will of said deceased for the benefit of Elizabeth Ayer Inches and others (being the fifteenth thru seventeenth accounts of the trust) have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge on or before the twentieth day of August, 1981, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciaries, or to the attorney for the fiduciaries, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciaries pursuant to Mass. R.Civ.P. Rule 5.

Witness, Sheila E. McGovern, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this twenty-ninth day of June, 1981.

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen this week rejected the $38 million plan to revitalize Newton Corner, which included the construction of five new buildings.

The proposed development, which included 301 units of housing, retail, commercial and business space at the Washington and Centre Street block, failed to gain the necessary two-thirds majority (16 votes) of the 24 member legislative body. The final vote was 12-11 in favor of the development.

As a result, the Boston based Druker company, which unveiled the comprehensive proposal to revitalize the eastern gateway to the city 18 months ago, will go ahead with plans to construct two four-story office buildings at a cost of $25 million.

Ronald Druker, president of the Boston firm, said construction on the two office buildings should begin in six months. Under zoning laws, Druker can construct the office buildings without the approval of aldermen.

The office building proposal calls for the razing of the four-story brick Gorin and Leeder building on Washington Street and several multi- story brick buildings across Centre Street on Nonantum Place. One of the office buildings will be constructed on the Gorin and Leeder site and the other will be constructed on the Post Office side.

More than 100 neighborhood residents, including a score of tenants from the Gorin and Leeder building, jammed the aldermanic chamber at City Hall for the final debate on the proposal.

The Druker proposal, which included an eight-story office building, a nine-story apartment building and an 11-story apartment building, was one of the largest proposed developments in the city's history.

Opponents of the project argued that the plan was too large and would overshadow and destroy the residential neighborhood.

Land Use Committee Chairman Terry Morris, who termed the Druker proposal "unacceptable," said the plan was far "too dense" to consider. Morris, who lobbied strongly against the development, stressed that aldermen have "consistently" rejected "highly urbanized" developments that would destroy the residential and village characteristics of Newton.

He explained: "We have spent years building up standards and we are asked now to run contrary to those standards because of the proposal before us."

Developer will go ahead with two office buildings

NEWTON — A disappointed and disheartened Ronald Druker watched his vision for a revitalized Newton Corner die Monday night.

Druker, president of the Boston development firm that unveiled a proposal to revitalize the area more than a year ago, looked on as aldermen rejected his comprehensive plan to bring new life to one of the most run down areas in the city.

After the vote, Druker, dressed immaculately in a blue suit, stood outside the crowded chamber and discussed the vote by aldermen.

Surrounded by reporters, Druker shrugged off the defeat of the $38 million plan and confirmed that his firm will construct two-four story office buildings at the Washington and Centre Street block.

"Your representatives have spoken," he said, "We'll now build the best office buildings we can in the tradition of the Druker company." Druker promised local residents, "a first class project."

"In my opinion, Newton Corner is the loser," he said. "We'll build four-story office buildings. It would have been better with a mixed residential development that provided much needed housing and life for Newton Corner."

"The community made a decision and aldermen did as well, and that decision was they preferred not to see housing there," he said.

Despite the setback, Druker, who had worked on the plan and attended countless neighborhood and city meetings for 18 months, was cordial and joked with reporters.

It was clear, however, that Druker was dejected by the board's decision. These have been trying days for the real estate developer, especially with the death of his father, Bertram,

Pay raise on hold

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Some aldermen are apparently unwilling to scrap a mayoral pay raise without a fight.

After the board voted down a substitution which would have entitled the mayor to a pay increase of more than $10,000 over a four-year period, Alderman Donald Budge used a parliamentary tactic to delay final vote on the item.

A substitution of committee reports, which would have allowed aldermen to vote on the recommendation of the Finance Committee, called for a yearly 6½ percent step-raise for the office of mayor.

The raise, which would bring the mayor's salary to $48,240 by Jan. 1, 1985, was suggested by Finance Chairman Edward Richmond as "a cost-of-living increase."

A citizens committee selected to study mayoral and aldermanic pay voted 4 to 2 not to raise the mayor's salary but because the seven-member committee did not get a five-member vote on the prevailing side, it chose not to voice a recommendation.

Under the "charter" procedure, which Budge used, any alderman is allowed to delay vote on an item until the following meeting of the full board. Unless a special meeting is called before the next regular meeting, pay raises for the office of mayor and aldermen will come under final scrutiny on Sept. 8.

Aldermen also failed to vote on a $400 pay raise for themselves, despite an advisory group recommendation, which would bring the yearly aldermanic salary to $2,200.

Many aldermen have said privately that it may not be worth the political flak to vote themselves a raise during this election year.

If the pay hikes for the respective offices are rejected by aldermen, both the mayor and board members will not be allowed, under city charter, to receive a raise until the next election.

In the case of the office of mayor, a negative vote would keep the mayor's salary at its

Condo ordinance back before board Thursday

NEWTON — Aldermen, using a parliamentary tactic, have delayed a final vote on a controversial condominium ordinance until Thursday.

The ordinance, which would protect renters from short-term notice condominium conversion and require developers to obtain a permit from the Board of Aldermen for the conversion of rental units to condominums, has been called illegal by City Solicitor Daniel Funk.

Citing the potential liabilities the city could endure as a result of such an ordinance, Alderman Joseph DePasquale moved to "charter" the item Monday much to the chagrin of more than 200 tenants of the Chestnut Hill Gardens complex.

Under the "charter" provision, any alderman may cancel debate and delay a vote until the next meeting of the full board. However, Alderman Ethel Sheehan did some quick lobbying at City Hall and garnered enough support (seven votes) to call for a "special meeting" on Thursday.

Residents of the twin-tower complex, many of whom sat through a two-hour debate on a previous item, are looking toward the proposed ordinance as leverage against the condominium conversion of the Chestnut Hill complex.

Funk contends that the passage of the ordinance without enabling legislation from state lawmakers would violate the State Constitution's Home Rule Amendment. The Massachusetts House, which currently has before them Newton's Home Rule legislation (approved by aldermen by a 23 to 1 vote), is in a six-week recess.

Park Laners still perplexed by street

NEWTON CENTRE — Whether or not the redesign of the intersection of Park Lane, Greenlawn Avenue and Brentwood Road was a necessary step toward improved safety, residents who live at the intersection remain outraged and perplexed by the so-called "process of city government."

Albert Rand, of 40 Greenlawn Avenue, described the events which culminated with last week's decision to go ahead with the construction: "It seems like somehow a bad idea surfaced and began gathering momentum and there was no way of stopping it."

"We could never find the decision-maker," Rand added. "They're telling us now to let construction go ahead and if you

Sherri Levin

On to the Olympics

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON -- Sherri Levin,19, of West Newton knows that it takes more than innate talent and chance to become a success. Nor is she coy about the hard work and determination that has made her a fine, young athlete, excelling in both track and baseketball.

"If you have the tools of an athlete, then you have the potential to be a top player," Levin says simply. It is that personal confidence that helped Levin win silver medals in both basketball and track last month at the Maccabiah Games in Israel. In fact, she was the only athlete there to hold the distinct honor of winning silver medals in two different sporting events.

The attractive 5'9" shooting guard for the womens' basketball team at Holy Cross College already earned several basketball honors before leaving for Tel Aviv on July 16. Levin says she was exhuberant upon learning that she was named a Womens' Jewish All-American in May, as were the young children at the basketball camp where Levin was coaching' who begged her to autograph their sneakers.

Levin is also a a Globe All-American, in addi-tion to being the first a man or woman at Newton North High School to score over 1000 points.

At Holy Cross, where she will be entering her sophmore year this fall as a communications major, Levin av-eraged 21 points a game, 83 per cent from the freethrow line and finished the season with a total of 511 points.

She fondly refers to her family as an important element in her success. "My family has been extremely supportive. My sister has been 110 percent for me."

"I think one of the ingredients of success is a supportive family. You may come home from a bad game, and there is your family to cheer you up' or celebrate with if you have a success."

When she is not playing basketball, Levin more closely resembles a well-trained fashion model than an aggresive athlete. An elegant young woman,she floats gracefully, head held high, across a room. Short, soft brown hair frames a very pretty face.

But Levin is not over ly confident. She knows that she needs to keep working at her game. "I'm still learning. I'm always learni chance ng."

The trip to Israel was a for Levin to experience the people, places and history that she learned about as a schoolgirl in Newton. "It was exciting too see Israel as a history."

The athletes were given an extensive two-day tour of Israel, including trips to Masada, The D ead Sea, Jerusalem, Mt. Olive and the Western Wall, wh ich Levin says was avery moving experience for her. "It was an emotional thing for me because I had never been there before and now I was reliving part of its history," says Levin, vividly remembering the elderly people standing before the memorial.

The Israeli people warmly greeted the Americans during the opening ceremonies. Levin recalls how thousands of people cheered and waved enthusiastically as the American teams, dressed in blue uniforms with baseball caps, marched into to the stadium packed with 600,000 people. "All those people were cheering for us," Levin exclaims.

When she arrived in Tel Aviv, Levin had no idea that she would be asked at the last minute to run in the 4x400 relay race.

She had just finished four days of "round robin" with womens' basketball teams from three countries when her coach told her the American track team needed another girl for the race.

Levin mistakenly thought she would be running in the 4x100 relay, not the 400 and agreed to run the race. As a former sprinter, Levin thought the 100 would be easy. However she admits being nervous when she l8earned that it was the 400. "The 400 is a much longer race. It's technique, pacing yourself and kicking at the end."

While her fellow basketball players relaxed on the beach, Levin was preparing for the race. She earned her second silver medal when the team came in second place.

8"I wanted to do well for the three other girls. I gave it 110percent and it worked out well."

Her first medal came after victories over both the French and Australian baskeball teams. "France was an easy victory' They weren't advanced at all in their skills."

However, Israel proved to be a much stronger team. "They were real aggressive. They were an extremely strong team." The team lost to Israel by 20 points.

Levin stressed the disadvantages the American basket-

Jonathan Brant, School Committee

NEWTON — Jonathan Brant, 34, of 33 Maple Ave. Newton, has announced his candidacy for the Newton School Committee fron Ward 1 to succeed Howard Spergel who is moving from Newton.

Brant isa magna cum laude graduate of Brandeis University and a graduate of Harvard Law School. He is currently a practicing attorney and associate professor of law at New England School of Law and lecturer at Tufts Medical School.

From 1975 to 1980, he served as an assistant attorney general under Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti where he handled major cases involving education, special education, and children's rights including the highly publicized Chad Green case.

Brant has been awarded the Twentieth Century Award by the Massachusetts Bar Association. He serves on the Ward 1 Democratic Committee, was a delegate to the 1981 Issues Convention, and is treasurer of the Newton Toddler Program.

Brant has been a homeowner and resident of Ward 1 in Newton for eight years. He is married to Renee Tankenoff Brant, a child psychiatrist. They have two children, Simone 4 ½ and Justin 1 ½.

In announcing his candidacy, Brant stated, "The pressures of inflation and Proposition 2 ½ have made the challenge of maintaining quality public education more difficult than ever. I am running because my background in public service and my commitment to public education provides me with a unique background to work to insure the continued development of the Newton school system."

Former alderman Joan Saklad discusses the campaign agenda with mayoral candidate Bruce Marquis of Waban.

Second ex-alderman joins Marquis' team

NEWTON — Former Ward 6 alderman Joan Saklad has joined the steering commitee for the candidacy of mayoral candidate Bruce Marquis.

"I am pleased to support Bruce Marquis for mayor," Saklad said. "It is time for change in the management of the City of Newton' and Marquis will bring a fresh approach and style to the office of mayor."

"Bruce was raised in Newton and participates in many of its organizations," Saklad went on to say. "He knows the process of government well."

Former alderman Saklad served on the Board of Aldermen for four years and was a member of the Finance Committee. Prior to her stint on the board she became well-known in Newton for her chairmanship of the "Single Session Committee," which effected the change of elementary school hours and instituted a cold lunch program in the schools.

During the past several years she has been a strong advocate of increasing the human services component of the federal Community Development plan in Newton, a program of federal funds used to improve the city's various villages.

Mrs. Sakalad said she "deplores" the current local administration's "unwillingness to allocate an adequate proportion of these federal dollars for human needs."

"At a time when the city, state and federal human service programs are being cut, it makes good sense to use these monies to fund human services," she noted.

New officers to be hired

NEWTON — The Police Department will hire 11 new police officers during the next six weeks to fill positions left vacant after a hiring freeze last November.

Mayor Theodore Mann implemented the freeze in order to help combat the impact of Proposition 2½. Police Chief William Quinn said last week that the 11 new officers will bring the department's officer total up to 204.

Quinn is also requesting that some of the $1.2 million in additional local aid be used to restore some of the eight positions and $160,000 in overtime eliminated from the Police Department budget because of Proposition 2½.

When asked if the 11 new officers would be sufficient to battle crime in the city, Quinn responded: "We are doing well. The important thing is to get these people aboard and get them trained."

Quinn pointed out that the department's force has been cut back considerably in the past several years. In 1975, the department had 234 officers, according to Quinn, who added, that the department has dropped from about 212 officers to 193 since the hiring freeze was implemented.

As a result of the cutback in officers and summer vacations, Quinn said the department is spending about $3,000 a week in overtime. He said he plans to use the $40,000 in budget reserve for salaries to cover the overtime cost.

Plan party for mayor

CHESTNUT HILL — The Friends of Ted Mann will meet at the JB Steak House in Nonantum Thursday for breakfast and to hear plans and arrangements for the reception honoring Mayor Theodore D. Mann' to be held the evening of Sept. 10 at the Sidney Hill Country Club.

Details as to head table guests, entertainment, and program, will soon be available according to the announcement.

Man held in lieu of bail

NEWTON – Brian Sobernock, 21, of Newton, is being held on $25,000 bail pending a trial Aug. 17 in Newton District Court.

Sobernock is charged with breaking and entering in the daytime.

Although the defendant screamed and stormed out of the court room when Judge Monte Basbas announced that he would remain in custody, the judge stood firm.

Robert McMillen Ward 4 at-large

NEWTON LOWER FALLS — Robert P. McMillen, 23, of 11 DeForest Rd.' has announced his candidacy for alderman-at-large from Ward 4.

McMillen, a lifelong resident of Newton, attended Hamilton, Warren Jr. High and Newton North High School. He is currently employed as marketing director for Escort Limousine Corp. in Watertown.

McMillen, while new to local government, has had prior experience as president of the half-million-member National Explorer Organization. He has been involved in political campaigns on the state and national levels, and he has been active in volunteer organizations such as the American Red Cross and the Boy Scouts of America. He was the 1980 recipient of the Judge Julian Yesley Award for service to the Youth of Newton.

McMillen's decision to run against incumbents Donald Budge and Richard McGrath was prompted by his concern for "continuity and the maintenance of the high quality level of services provided to the citizens of Newton, given the fiscal restraints imposed by Proposition 2 ½.

He said that his priorities in maintaining services would "initially focus on the Police and Fire departments, where cutbacks could result in insufficient numbers of personnel to provide protection to the residents of Newton." McMillen also stated that, "While school closings are inevitable due to the current decline in enrollment and the need for decreased spending, every effort should be made to examine the impact of school closings on the neighborhoods involved, as well as the affect of repeated closings in specific sections of the City."

He went on to say that, "the Board of Aldermen should take a closer look at the options available for building re-use, not only noting the need for housing in the city, but also taking into consideration population trends which might indicate an increase in the school aged population at a later date."

One of McMillen's other concerns is the "village concept," which he views as an integral part of the quality of life in Newton. He cites the strength and activism of local neighborhood organizations as evidence of the strong feelings many residents have for their villages. To promote these feelings McMillen believes that "the city must make a concerted effort to keep such things as branch libraries and community centers operational through funding and continued efforts of concerned residents."

An area where McMillen sees potential for improvement is in the comnunication process between an alderman and his/her constitutents. "Too often," he notes, "citizens are unaware of what an alderman does, or how s/he can help to voice his/her constituents' concerns to the legislative branch of city government. I would like to change that by personally issuing a quarterly newsletter, which would inform residents of pending issues and encourage their participation in the local governmental process."

Probable cause found in break case

WEST NEWTON —The case of a 21-year-old Newton man charged with breaking and entering into a Waban home on July 12, will be tried in Superior Court in Cambridge.

Stephen B. Hart pleaded innocent at a probable cause hearing in Newton District Court last week. Judge Monte Basbas found probable cause and sent the case on to the higher court.

The occupant of the home testified at the probable cause hearing and identified Hart as the man who came into her Bradford Street home at 10:30 p.m. July 12' while she and her husband were watching television on the second floor.

The defendant said he was intoxicated and accidentally walked into the house.

The victim also testified that when the defendant ran from her home he was carrying a red canvas bag and she later realized her red handbag was missing. It was later found by police.

Finding probable cause, Basbas said he wanted to reduce the charges to so that he could sentence Hart.

"I want to see him serve time," Basbas said. "I think he should serve it."

Neal Haganstab, the district attorney, disagreed and said the case should be heard in Superior Court' so Basbas did not reduce the charges.

Frank talks taxes with Newton Kiwanis

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON -- Congressman Barney Frank(D-Mass.) is unhappy with President Reagan's tax bill.

In an address to 25 members of the Newton Kiwanis last week, Frank pointed out that though he agrees with some of Reagan's approaches, "the bill cuts the wrong things'" and that the administration has "a bad set of priorities."

In his speech, Frank stressed that the fight between the Democrats and the Republicans for their respective tax proposals became a "contest" to see who was in charge.

For many members of the legislature' the priority was beating the opponent rather than formulating an appropriate tax bill' according to Frank. Quoting Vince Lombardi, Frank said, "Winning became the only thing." He further commented that some legislators who challenged the proposals d8id not have their own versions of a tax bill.

In addition, Frank was very critical of the fact that cuts were unec8essarily made in almost every facet of the economy' and that tax breaks were given to the oil companies.

"It really doesn't make any sense," he said' pointing to cuts in student loans and low interest homeowners loans as examples.

"It's crazy to throw that money away to the oil companies." Frank contended that "No one supported the billions of dollars in tax breaks for the oil companies. It was only in there because it was a competition."

Frank joked with members that if the United States had settled on the moon, "The man on the moon would recieve a tax break for titleship."

Pointing to anti-trust changes' Frank said he favors tax incentives for high technology industries. "Give high technology a base to compete with the Japanese'" Frank stressed, noting the Japanese dominance in some areas. "Don't put American businesses at a disadvantage...Don't dismantle I.B.M."

Favoring also the attempts by the legislature towards taxless retirement plans. "The legislature is broadening the right for all people to have a taxless, individual retirement plan." He added that people in their 40's and 50's now will have a better time when they reach retirement age.

When asked by one member if revisions could be made in the bill, Frank responded, "Once something like this is in place, it's alot harder to get rid of it." However he added that he would attempt changes on a bi-partisoan basis.

Frank was cri8tical of those legislators who opposed Reagan's plans, but incorrectly assumed that they could beat the president.

"They acted as though they were going to win." Frank says they wrong . "The second vote on the budget was harder for Reagan to win. If he could get them to vote yeas on that, then he'ld succeed with the tax bill."

Another member asked the congressman his opinion on the major cause for the current inflation. Though Frank re-sponded that the price of oil is one important factor' he stressed that, "You can't look at one cause. Inflation has many causes in a complex society. Anyone who reads one particular book and decides there is a particular cause for inflation is probably wrong."

Frank said he is concerned that many young families are unable to purchase home because of the high interest rates, but does not see the rates lowering significatly in the future. "Some couples have even post-poned having children."

He also briefly mentioned the Section 312 rehabil-itation loan fund, which was recently eliminated. "Many Newton and Waltham residents use that program." The fund provided low; moderate income families with low interest loans to repair their homes, including some energy saving additions. " "Let vi8ctory overtake economic reality," was the attitude of many of those who fought for the tax bill, according to Frank.

DeNucci to discuss long-term care

NEWTON — Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D-Newton-Waltham), House Chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs has called a special meeting at the State House on Monday, Aug. 17 to discuss problems in long-term care for patients.

The meeting will bring together legislators, nursing home operators, senior citizens, directors of services for hospitals, home care representatives, advocates, and representatives of the Department of Elder Affairs, Mental Health' Public Welfare, as well as the Rate Setting Commission. The new Secretary of Human Services, William T. Hogan' is also expected to attend.

DeNucci stated, "The availability of quality long-term care is beconing an increasingly difficult situation for people desperately in need of such care. There are many social planners who believe the demand for nursing homes is greater than the actual need.

"This philosophy that in part reflects the legitimate ' need for cost containment, has had an adverse impact on the Determination of Need process and has resulted in a decreased number of new nursing homes being constructed," said DeNucci.

DeNucci added, "Nursing home operators are reluctant to take in Medicaid patients because they feel the Rate Setting Commission is not granting reimbursements in line with real expenses' nor are increases in rates being granted in a timely fashion.

DeNucci points out that, "Medicaid is the largest single item in the entire state budget next to local aid to cities and towns. Our annual Medicaid expenditure exceeds $1 billion, of which approximately 45 percent is for nursing homes.

"Additionally," DeNucci remarked, "alternatives to long-term care are not being utilized to their full capacity, especially the use of home care, which allows elders to stay at home and avoid institutionalization.

"We must develop a systematic approach for identifying options such as home care in order to help persons receive necessary care. If we do not increase the number of nursing home beds that are available' maximize our options, and encourage the placement of Medicaid recipients, the result will be that many in need will fall between the cracks and receive no assistance," DeNucci said.

The Newton lawmaker noted that the increasing economic crunch on families has created a significant change in the social structure that forces both a husband and wife to work and produce an adequate income. A result of this change is that many elderly are being placed in nursing homes. At the same time, inflation is taking a heavy toll on fixed income of elders living alone and making it more difficult for them to survive.

"If nursing homes were able to handle those with specific needs, and if alternatives were more readily available for families or older citizens living alone, the crisis would be alleviated," DeNucci said.

"We must act now and look to the future and try to determine how we can provide the range and quality of services necessary to assure all senior citizens the opportunity to avoid institutionalization. At the same time, we must provide quality facilities for those who need long-term care, or for those unable to make a reasoned decision," concluded Rep. DeNucci.

Best books in New England presented by main library

NEWTON — Award winning books from the New England Book Show will be on view in the glass cases at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre Street, Newton Corner, now through Aug. 18.

The books cover a wide variety of topics, for both children and adults.

Sponsored by the Bookbuilders of Boston, the show is divided into three categories: educational, general trade and other. The books included in the show represent the winners of a juried exhibit of the best of New England book design and manufacturing' as well as a selection of publishers' choice books produced in 1980. Books are selected by the Bookbuilders for excellence in total design quality, manufacturing quality, limitations and the publishers' objectives for each title.

The Bookbuilders of Boston is comprised of representatives of the New England publishing industry, their suppliers of materials, manufacturers, and individuals in related fields such as design' education and library work. The group's purpose is to foster an interest in better bookmaking and to promote methods towards improving book design and manufacturing.

The Newton Free Library has displayed the Bookbuilder's show for each of the past 15 years. The Newton Free Library is one of 26 New England libraries to display the exhibit.

Summer hours at the Main Library are Monday-Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; closed Saturday and Sunday through Sept. 13.

What really counts for Watt?

Secretary of the Interior James Watt was quite right when he told a congressional committee that "my religious freedom is guaranteed under the First Amendment to the Constitution. I don't think that needs to be an issue before this committee."

The trouble is that Secretary Watt himself first raised the issue of his religion in reference to his advocation of Interior Department policies.

James Watt

Earlier this year Watt was questioned by members of the House Interior Committee about the importance of preserving natural resources for future generations. "I do not know how many future generations we can count on before the Lord returns," Watt said.

Watt is a fundamentalist Christian. They sometimes interpret much of the Bible very literally. A group in the Southwest recently prepared for the "rapture," a form of the "second coming" in which the purified are to be swept up to God. Quite within their rights they sold properties and made other preparations.

But there should definitely be concerns if people with such rigid beliefs are in control of extensive policies affecting the public welfare. Should a staunch member of a faith which considers blood transfusions a major sin be put in charge of blood banks? The recent flap over "creationism" raised the question as to whether a public school teacher with that religious belief could effectively teach even the rudiments of the theory of evolution.

Doctors and nurses who devoutly believe that abortion is murder should not be required to assist in such procedures. There might be concerns about members of religions that consider non-whites and women as inferiors in some voting rights enforcement positions.

Of course individuals must and should act in accordance with their religious beliefs and the requirements of their faiths or denominations. That's one thing religion is all about. But great care should be taken to insure that those individual religious tenets do not become necessarily a standard of public policy. That's one reason that First Amendment guarantee was written.

Secretary Watt has been extensively criticized for his support of strip mining, grazing of privately owned cattle on public lands and casting off some National Parks, as well as for his scoffing at concerns about endangered species and the need for wilderness areas. Perhaps his points of view have been established because of the state of the economy or because he is really trying to establish a "balance" between public and private interests as he insists.

But if he is disdainful of preserving natural resources for future generations because he sees the "second coming" on the immediate horizon then his religious beliefs do become a matter of public concern.

A memorial to Vietnam

By Donna Lombardi

Newton—Independence Park in South Boston rests on top of a hill, over-looking South Boston Army Shipyard. It is quiet there on a weekday morning, aside from the sounds of distant traffic and the planes overhead.

Harry Carroll usually sits in his old, blue Chevy, fondly watching a sight at the center of the park. It represents years of work, a dream come true, one that some said could never be accomplished.

Soon it will be a beautifully developed memorial to the young men from South Boston who lost their lives in the Vietnam War. In addition, the sight will be a "Welcome Home" to those who returned safely.

For several years' Carroll, who served in the army from 1967 to 1969, had a dream, a wish that there could be something he could do in memory of the friends and school chums he lost in Vietnam. Although South Boston had the highest casualty rate in the state, and the fifth highest in the country, there was nothing in South Boston to honor the young men.

Compounding Carroll's frustration was the fact that those who did return never received a welcome. Instead, he and others were greeted with criticism, and even hostility. "So I think it's unique in that it is both a living and a dead memorial."

In November of 1978, Carroll and his cousin and personal friend Tom Lyons' sat on the porch of his home in South Boston. Lyons recently had a mass to honor his friends who had died in Vietnam.

Shortly thereafter, the pair began a savings account with a $5 deposit. With the help of the entire South Boston Ccommunity, $21,000 was raised in three months to build a long awaited memorial.

When a Newton resident learned of their efforts, he sent Lyons and Carroll a letter saying that his son had returned safely from Vietnam, and was glad. Enclosed was a cheeck for $500 towards the fund. They eventually raised $28,000, while Boston, with the help of Frank Clark, the chief engineer, and John Fatigliano, parks commissioner, put $52,000 into the $80,000 project.

Now, Lyons and Carroll are patiently awaiting the arrival of stone which Carroll helped design.The concave stone of the finest black diamond granite measures four feet high, eight feet long and has an eight foot radius. On the front, a list of 25 names of the young men who died is engraved with inverted M16 rifles, topped by helmets on either side of the names.

A welcome to those who returned is engraved on the back and reads,"To all those men and women who served in the Vietnam War. Welcome Home."

A 253 foot walk leads up to the 5 ½ ton stone that will be surrounded by a fence protecting bushes and shrubs. Two silver blue high intensity lights will shine on the memorial each night. A memorial stone will also be planted in a semicircle at the foot of the walk leading to te to the monument.

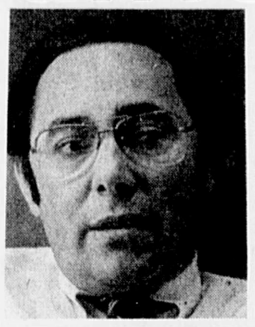

In mid September, the army band, marine band from South Carolina and color guards from all five services will come to South Boston to dedicate the memorial. At the Capitol in Washington D.C., the American flag will be raised then lowered to half-staff in honor of those who died.

No politicians will be allowed to speak, but the mother of a son who is still considered missing in action, as well as a few prisoners of war will address the spectators.

As servicemen salute fellow servicemen who died'with full taps, Carroll will remember his friends who are no longer with him. Lyons will remember the five young men who played football with him at South Boston High School. Others, too, hopefully will watch and remember the words written on the stone,"If you forget my death, then I have died in vain."

TV must meet different needs

By Sy Yanoff
Written for UPI

Whenever technology races ahead of our ability to comprehend its impact, a mistaken notion develops: it is the technology, or hardware, that is the driving force behind societal change. If this were truly the case, however, the evolution of technology would continually surge ahead; our lives would be altered and the technologically fittest (most advanced) would prevail. In the excitement over 90-channel cable TV, the belief in the preeminience of technological forces over societal forces translates into a mistaken belief that the cable will determine what is transmitted.

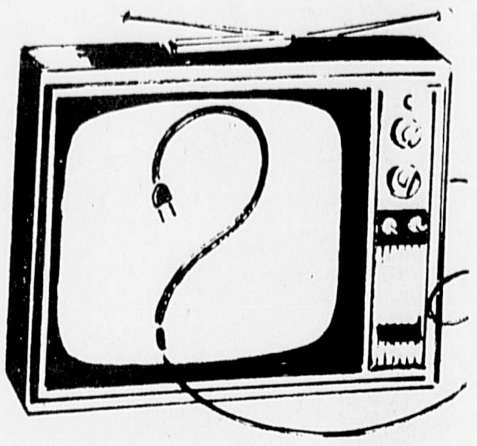

Unfortunately, it is not that simple. The technological imperative is not a law of nature. Society determines the course technology follows, not the other way around.

Computers, for example, have been a growth technology for 30 years. Because computers free employees of boring repetitive tasks such as keeping track of inventories and issuing paychecks, there is a genuine need for them in business and their use thrives. Today, we are asked to shell out a thousand dollars or more for a personal, or home, computer. Why? To spend all our waking hours typing in recipes? To balance our checkbook seems like overkill. As with other technologies — many of which clutter our cellars — the match is not clear. It is always possible that a match between home and computer will never exist. This is something society will determine.

In the coming television revolution, it will be the needs of the local community that will play the major role in deciding what aspects of TV technology will prevail. With all the many expanding options available, the exact mix will most certainly differ from city to city and from audience segment to audience segment.

In the past, television prospered by serving the mass audience. That is not to say that programming successes like "Roots" and "Shogun" and the "Who Shot J.R." episode of "Dallas" will not be repeated in the future. In general, though, they will be oddities compared to "The Show of Shows" with Sid Caesar, which captured such a large Saturday night audience that motion picture operators fought against showing it on Saturday night.

To be successful, commercial television must serve the individuals in its community. It must understand and meet very different needs. The elderly in the neighborhoods, the university students, and young professionals all have different requirements for information and entertainment. The communities of South Boston and the South End may be worlds apart, but you are sure to find Celtics' fans in both neighborhoods.

Plugging in TV's future

What's more, viewers from these and other neighborhoods and walks of life also populate Symphony Hall during BSO concerts and the Museum of Fine Arts on Sunday afternoon.

One of television's most important and difficult challenges of the future will be to serve these cultural needs, along with all the other diversified community requirements. For example, services such as BRAVO promise to provide viewers with a range of televised cultural events. This promise is predicated on new 90-channel cable systems — that is, the promise is predicated on technology. However, the technology for transmitting cultural events on television has existed as long as there has been television and has been feasible since UHF.

Begin and Falwell: the oddcouple

By Robert J. Wagman

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The newest politically prominent "odd couple" appears to be Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the Rev. Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority.

Falwell is an ardent supporter of Israel for reasons contained in the Bible. Begin realizes the political clout of the conservative minister and has been courting him assiduously.

The prime minister visited with Falwell on his most recent trip to this country. And when the Israeli air force destroyed the Iraqi nuclear reactor, Begin called Falwell at his home in rural Virginia to explain why the attack had been necessary and to ask for his public support.

In fact, say aides to Falwell, Begin called the fundamentalist preacher even before he called leaders of this country's Jewish community.

Now their friendship may have an impact on domestic politics. Capitol Hill sources say that Begin has been urging Falwell not to oppose the re-election of Sen. Edward Kennedy in 1982.

Begin presumably made the request because the Massachusetts Democrat has been one of the Senate's strongest supporters of Israel.

So far no opponent to Kennedy has emerged. Conservatives are divided as to whether it would be worthwhile to try to unseat the senator, who the polls show to be almost as popular as ever in his home state.

The prime minister visited with Falwell on his most recent trip to this country. And when the Israeli air force destroyed the Iraqi nuclear reactor, Begin called Falwell at his home in rural Virginia to explain why the attack had been necessary and to ask for his public support.

Falwell reportedly replied that he would consider the request. But he has thus far been unwilling to make any promises.

Are senators dealing?

Loring Swaim

There is talk, difficult to confirm, of some kind of tacit detente between ambitious Senators Ted Kennedy and Paul Tsongas. The idea is said to be that if Kennedy wins his re-election bid next year with a big showing, Tsongas will support him in his rerun for the presidency in 1984. If, however, Kennedy turns in a mediocre performance in 1982, he (Kennedy) will support Tsongas as a possible running mate in 1984 on a presidential ticket headed by former senator and vice president Walter Mondale.

Some Boston businessmen have pointed out an overlooked aspect of President Reagan's insistence on a three-year tax cut instead of limiting the cuts to two years as Democratic congressmen demanded.

By stretching the 25 percent tax cut over three years in increments of 5-10-10, the president, they suggest, has assured the suspension of any public judgment on the value of the gamble until late into election-time 1984.

The president has effectively taken the issue out of consideration as a factor in any bid for re-election. He can now argue that no assessment of the economic fallout of the cuts can be made till all cuts are completed and had a chance to sink in. If the final judgements might be discouraging, he can deflect their impact, they reason, by claiming "it's too early to say." If they turn out to be positive, he can point with pride to their already having stimulated the economy.

There are indications that HUD officials were on the verge of taking a closer look at allegations by Hispanics in a city north of Boston that their rights were denied them by local housing officials who demanded from $150 to $500 to approve placements.

Certain Hispanic families say they have had their names listed for housing for years, only to find others who allegedly acceded to the demands bumping them from the list and receiving housing out of turn.

Did local housing officials, alerted to the impending entry of HUD to monitor the transactions, jump the gun and pre-empt the issue for themselves — when the records of their housing allocations were recently sealed?

Hispanics, by the way, may turn out to be a critical element in coming political campaigns in Massachusetts — and their support is being solicited by Kennedy and Democratic operatives as well as by the GOP.

Excellent article

To the Editor:

The recent article on Sister Joanne Frey by Donna Lombardi was excellent.

Sister Joanne is a most welcome addition to St. Bernard's parish and the community. She is a delightful and caring person, and I, for one, am very glad to know her.

Commercials

To the Editor:

TV commercials are insulting our intelligence.

Seldom, if ever, do we hear a person interviewed give anything but a 100 percent endorsement of the product being tested. would be greatly impressed by having

I' for one' someone say, "This color TV is almost as good as No. 1," or, "This coffee is about the same as No. 1," or, "It's a little better a than No. 1."

With people buying millions of products, there can be no uniformity of taste. So if you people selling products don't want to turn people off, don't lie all the time.

Try to cut your exaggeration at least 50 percent. Your sales could increase.

A cure for weeds?

To the Editor:

Against my better judgment I have become a "farm-gardener" in two places this summer.

In good faith I sowed the seed, transplanted the seedlings and kept things damp or dry according to instructions. I even mulched the asparagus and tomatoes and hilled the potatoes. In time, no doubt, I shall harvest the fruits of my labors as everything looks revoltingly healthy.

However, one curse remains. What do I do with the weeds? I was willing to give them equal space and opportunity, but they are bounding ahead of every seedling crop and it was never in my contract that I should stoop to weed.

Self-raising flour does delightfully gruesome things to slugs, owl feathers distract the birds and Christmas bells annoy the rabbits, but what organic matter will kill witch grass, chickweed and other creeping miseries?

They seem to thrive on doses of ammonia, boiling water and curses, and so I would welcome any suggestions that Newton "Garden City gardeners" can give me on this page. But, be quick!

Notes from Nick

To the Editor:

I see the asbestos in Newton North is still on the drawing board at city hall. I personally can't see anyone getting the diseases mentioned.

The Newton Taxpayers' Association is a hoax. What have they done for us?

You think Mayor White of Boston is bad. Wait until the same Newton administration gets in for four more years. And remember I told you so.

We have a number of philanthropic people in Newton. Maybe they will leave some money to the city and then the taxes will be lower.

I would not like to have Rep. David Cohen or Rep. Susan Schur in my squad in the army. I wouldn't have a chance. They are against the draft. I would like to know who they are going to send to war?

Salary considerations

To the Editor:

Citizen sentiment on whether or not to raise the pay of Newton's mayor and/or Board of Aldermen is complicated enough to suggest that presenting the enclosed reports might help resolve the issue.

Those I asked were almost evenly split on the mayoral raise. The ones in favor tended to cite the demands and importance of the job, inflation and comparison to the pay levels of similar jobs and lesser ones.

The ones opposed cited the three current willing candidates at present pay, the fringe benefits and intangibles of the office and the present expense-cutting political conditions.

My recommendation is to maintain the present pay level of the mayor for the coming term, 1982-86 with certain qualifying considerations.

They are:

—The candidates now running for mayor had no assurance of any pay raise and were willing to run on the basis of the current salary.

—At some point, but not under present circumstances, a suitable pay increase might be in order for this important job.

—Under current conditions' it would be opportune for the mayoral candidates to pledge to take at least a token 2 ½ percent reduction in pay for the next two years.

—If the present Board of Aldermen votes a mayoral raise, it should be small and not take effect for at least the first year of the coming term.

—Another citizens' committee should be appointed to re-examine the question of a pay raise for the mayor. The committee should develop criteria for determining whether to raise or not and how much.

The committee might also consider making an increase contingent on the mayor's financial performance. This incentive would reward overall cost and tax savings, but would not reward neglect of things.

The committee recommendations should be subject to an advisory referendum in the fall of 1983. If a raise is approved by the voters, it would then be appropriate for the Board of Aldermen to vote for an increase taking effect in 1986.

My recommendation is to maintain the present pay level of aldermen for the next term subject to the following considerations:

—A raise, if any' could take effect in the second' rather than the first year of the forthcoming two-year term, or even in the succeeding term.

Such alternatives would acknowledge at least a token participation in accommodating the cuts in city expenses including some job eliminations caused by Proposition 2 ½.

—A change in compensation, if any, should be small, since it is the viewpoint of may that aldermanic compensation is partly to cover expenses and partly a "thank you" for otherwise unpaid volunteer service.

There is little pretext of adequately paying for the job done. Therefore ' neither a cut nor a raise should depend on such elements, but' rather on the amount of tangible thanks wanted. By most reports, expenses are already much more than covered.

—Consider at least an advisory referendum before enacting a raise or make the raise contingent on referendum confirmation.

—A raise should not be contingent upon cutting the size of the Board of Aldermen.

—Citizen input at a public hearing conducted by the committee on aldermanic pay indicated overwhelming opposition to an pay raise at this time.

Prior to that, and since that hearing' I have tested the sentiments of other citizens. The results of my inquiry were also preponderantly opposed to raising aldermanic salaries.

dominium conversion ordinances in Framingham, Acton, Amherst, and Swampscott have been declared illegal by the state Attorney General's Office.

Basically the question of constitutionality is a very serious one," said DePasquale, noting why he moved to delay the vote. "It puts me in a bad position because I don't want to vote against it but I can't vote for it because of the city solicitor's opinion."

"The proper way of handling this is to wait for the proper legislation from the state," he continued.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan, co-sponsor of the ordinance with State Rep. David Cohen, said both she and Cohen "feel it's constitutional."

"We've watered down the ordinance so much and those people still voted against it," she noted.

The ordinance would provide tenants with a two-year grace period before they could be removed because of conversion. In addition, if aldermen grant a tenant "hardship status," the renter would be given an additional three years occupancy.

The Legislation and Rules Committee, of which Sheehan is chairman, recently failed to endorse the proposed ordinance by way of a 3 to 3 vote.

Sheehan, who told aldermen that the ordinance was not geared to one special interest group, said the "goal of the petition is to protect the rights of Newton citizens."

She also asked, "On how many occasions have aldermen disagreed with the opinion of the city solicitor,?" and "Why now does it become impossible to bring this issue to the courts for a definitive opinion?"

Alderman Mark White, who recently challenged Funk in court over the ambulance issue, said, "Nothing is unconstitutional until a judge declares it unconstitutional."

Sheehan concluded: "There are people here tonight who are begging for your help, your protection, and a recognition of the purpose of elected office -to stand up and cry out to prevent a perceived injustice."

Many aldermen feel the ordinance is being railroaded through the board in order to help the people at Chestnut Hill Gardens. Tenants at the complex claim they were guaranteed by the original developers that their rental units would not go condominium for at least 14 years.

However, representatives from CHR General, the firm coverting the buildings, claim their revamped marketing plan offers tenants more than the proposed ordinance.

"I think our program offers more benefits to more of the people than the benefits offered by the board," said Peter Shapiro, vice-president of the Connecticut Bank and Trust (CHR General is a subsidiary of the bank). "It addresses purchasers, relocaters and individuals with hardships."

Shapiro has maintained that he needs another month to allow the bank's program to unfold. If the ordinance is passed, he has said the "economics of the situation would change" and the bank would consider revising its current program.

"I hope that we don't have to develop a new program that would track the ordinance," added Shapiro.

According to Wes Finch of Roberts/Finch Associates, the marketing firm selling the condominiums, approximately 85 tenants have taken advantage of incentives offered to them and have agreed to purchase their units at 20 percent off the market price. Another 15 residents have agreed to the terms of a relocation program which allows them to recoup upwards to $12,000.

Shapiro also said he has met with approximately 50 tenants who are hoping to be declared of "hardship" status. These residents will be allowed to retain their rental units for either 3-year, 5-year or lifetime periods in addition to their current leases which run from 1 to 4 years.

last week. The elder Druker headed the family firm that has developed millions of dollars of property in the Boston area.

In addition, Druker may have problems with the proposed office building development down the line. A local resident claims that Druker cannot construct a parking garage for the office buildings under city zoning laws and is considering taking his case to the courts. Druker simply called the charge "unfounded."

Druker said his firm will not lose money despite the manpower and dollars spent to promote the Newton Corner plan. However, the economic rewards for the Druker Company would have been greater if aldermen gave the plan the green light.

"I haven't lost any money," Druker explained. "It is a unique position for a developer to be in because we really couldn't lose because we are a diversified development company. We have the capacity of developing houses as well as apartments."

"The fact that aldermen have voted against the residential proposal in no way dampens our proposal for Newton Corner as an office location," he continued. "If that is what the people of Newton wanted through their aldermen, that is what they will get."

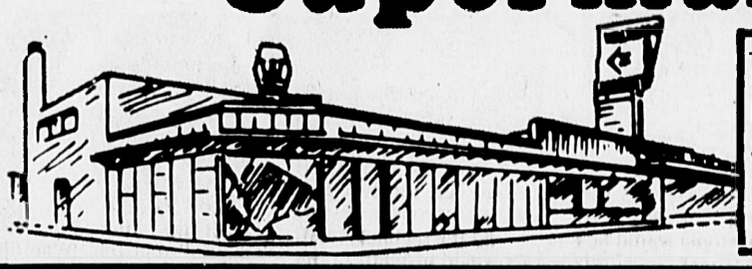

Despite the continuing cry that the project was "too dense" for the site, Druker emphasized, "In our urban design sense, it was an appropriate scale for Newton."

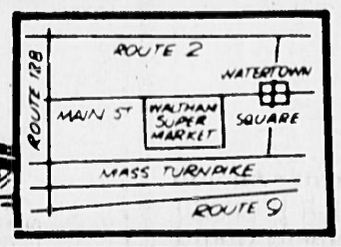

Druker said his firm has already begun work on the plans, which he noted must be "refined," for the $25 million dual office building proposal. He said construction should begin in six months and be completed 18 months later.

When asked if there was any possibility that he would come back before the board with a scaled down mixed use development for Newton Corner, Druker said, "I don't think there is any feasible way."

Police report

Breaking and entering charge

NEWTON — A Newton man is facing a charge of breaking and entering and larceny after an alert patrolman stopped him for questioning Thursday afternoon, police said.

Officer Edward Pendergast was on routine patrol when he saw a burglary suspect enter the Ski Chalet at the corner of Centre Street and Commonwealth Avenue shortly after noon. When the suspect left the ski shop, the patrolman asked him what he had in a paper bag he was carrying. The suspect reportedly became nervous and ran.

Pendergast notified other police units and then went after the suspect. Sergeant James O'Donnell spotted the suspect and chased him through Reed Terrace and Grant Avenue yards into a wooded area, police said.

The suspect emerged at a Montvale Road address and got into a taxicab in front of the house. Before the taxi could leave, the suspect saw O'Donnell running toward him, got out, pushed the officer, and attempted to flee again. O'Donnell and patrolman George Chappelle were able to subdue and handcuff the suspect, assisted by Sergeant John J. Kennedy, Pendergast and patrolman James Carson.

In the bag were jewels with the name of a Janet Road resident on them, police alleged. A check with the residents revealed a break-in had occured a short time earlier. The suspect was charged with breaking and entering in the daytime and larceny of belongings valued at more than $100, police said.

Police arrested two Boston men Saturday night inside an Otis Street home and charged them with breaking and entering and larceny.

Police found stolen goods traced to another Newton housebreak in a nearby car believed to belong to the suspects, according to a police spokesman.

Police said that one of the suspects faces additional charges stemming from the Otis Street break-in. Those charges are unlawful possession of weapons and possession of burglarious tools. The suspects were to be arraigned in Newton District Court on Monday.

Detectives surrounded the Otis Street home about 9:10 p.m. Saturday after receiving a call from a suspicious neighbor that a man was seen walking by a second-floor window. After a search of the house' police discovered the two suspects in an upstairs bedroom.

Police allegedly found foreign currency along with American money in the possession of the man facing the most charges. The other suspect had no belongings in his possession, police said.

According to police, a garage door to the house had been forced, an inner storm door screen ripped and an inner door jimmied for the suspects to get inside.

When police found what they believe is the suspects' car nearby the Otis Street home, they discovered Oriental rugs and jewelry inside. They traced the belongings to a Walnut Street residence where they found that a rear window had been forced open. Police did not indicate whether the suspects were charged with that break-in as well.

Police received reports of other housebreaks last week on Pleasant Street, Kenmore Street and Bridge Street. The break-in on Bridge Street, reported last Wednesday morning, was at the Nonantum Branch Library.

Several bookcases at the library had been overturned after thieves entered through an unlocked bathroom window, although nothing appeared to be missing.

Police also received a report of the theft of of a car stereo and speakers last Tuesday from a Minot Place resident's car.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
Think of your spinal column as a series of vertebrae stacked up on top of each other like building blocks. Between them are fibrocartilages, or discs. Rather than holding the vertabrae together, discs cushion shock, reduce friction and allow movement to occur. There are twenty-three of these valuable little body pieces, and, if one is out of place for some reason, problems and pain can possibly occur. Part of the chiropractor's function is to put discs back to where they belong.
Your chiropractor's function is to determine when vertebral subluxations are the cause of your symptoms. The modern doctor of chiropractic works both directly and indirectly with the nerves and other systems. Health comes naturally when all systems are naturally balanced. Chiropractic utilizes modern forms of diagnostic procedures in addition to specialized chiropractic procedures for locating the real, fundamental cause of your problem. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment including three evenings a week.

Charlene Tilton battles fat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Not even J.R. Ewing would be mean enough to call Charlene Tilton a fatty, but by her own confession, that's the way it got to be on the set of the CBS super-soaper "Dallas."

"When you're only five feet tall, it doesn't take much," she said Wednesday in New York where she's busy promoting a diet and a magazine for once instead of the show that made her famous. "You want to see something gross? Look at that picture! That's gross!"

"Gross" the hazel-eyed honey blonde who plays Larry Hagman's sex-crazed niece on "Dallas" never was and never will be, but the picture in question does show her a shade on the chubby side. That's why — at 112 pounds — she turned to Glamour magazine for a diet, an exercise regime and exposure before 7 million readers, many of whom also presumably have a "gross" picture of themselves somewhere in the family photo album.

"I've read Glamour since I was in junior high," she said, "and the magazine decided I'd be the perfect role model for women who want to lose weight. And there isn't a woman alive who doesn't."

So, while the Ewing family saga languishes amid the doldrums of summer reruns, Charlene battles bulges before millions. Her motives — to feel better and to keep her job.

"Overweight doesn't make it," she said of her role in "Dallas."

"It's grounds for getting fired. I'm surprised the network didn't say anything."

"There are over 1,700 fad diets on the market now and none of them are any good because you just put the weight right back on," she said, warming to her topic. "I'm out to lose one to two pounds a week — permanently. This program has totally changed my thinking."

It also has changed her silhouette. She said she is down to 100 pounds now and she's shooting for a final scale tale of 90 to 95.

If her determination is as strong as getting the role for "Dallas", she should have no problem.

"I first read about the role in a local casting magazine in Los Angeles and I just went after it," she said. "I made up my mind that role was mine and I kept bugging them until they gave me a reading. Nobody, but nobody else, was going to get it ... It's the greatest opportunity any young actress ever could have had."

She swears she really didn't know who shot J.R. last season when "Dallas" madness hit the world like an epidemic of breakbone fever, but she's in on the cliffhanger with which the series' writers left fans this summer.

She knows whose body that is there in J.R.'s swimming pool.

"Sure I do but I'm not going to tell," she said with a twinkle. "In any case, it won't be like last time. All that hype last time came from the public — we had nothing to do with it. The public just went nuts.

One thing, at least, is certain. The body in the swimming pool is not Charlene's. If it was, would she be so busy trimming her figure for the fall season? If it was would she be looking forward to a lifetime as J.R.'s libidinous niece?

don't like it in six months, petition the aldermen."

The construction, part of a package of work at four city intersections being done by a private firm, Pavao Construction, was the end result of a June 1978 petition by a group of Mason-Rice parents, led by Judy Graham of Garland Road, for stop signs and increased police enforcement of speeding violations at the intersection.

According to David Tannozzini of the Public Works Department, the Board of Aldermen approved the peition and requested a four-way stop at the intersection in March 1979. Tannozzini said the stop signs failed to solve the problem, with the city receiving three citizen complaints of "driver disobedience."

Although neighbors of the intersection cannot recall but one collision at the intersection in 38 years, years (a two-car accident which resulted in minor injuries), U a traffic planner for the city came up with a design which would reshap the swooping curves of the intersection into ninety degree corners. The "t" shaped intersection would force drivers to come to a full stop at the corners.

To accomplish this, the planner extended the curbing at two points of the intersection by 29 feet, after first tearing down the traffic island which adorned the intersection for many years. As the neighbors view the project, the work began suddenly with an appropriation already having been made' a construction firm hired and their intersection drastically altered.

When they became aware of the project, the abutters and neighbors, who had never been informed of the plans nor asked to sign the original petition, stormed city hall and construction was halted. After meetings with the Traffic Commission, the project was modified twice with the curbing at the two points moved back a total of 12 feet.

Residents of the area, led by Peter Stoner of Park Lane, planned to discuss the construction with members of the Public Safety and Transportation Committee of the Board of Aldermen last Monday night' but were told that night that it was the responsibility of the Public Facilities Committee to determine the outcome of the residents' battle to restore the intersection to its original condition.

On Wednesday, the Public Facilities Committee, chaired by Ald. Richard McGrath, voted down the neighbors claims that the intersection had actually been made more hazardous.

Stoner charged that the design "forces unnecessary momentum into the intersection because the curves are still rounded" as the driver heads into the intersection. Stoner says that drivers will now enter the intersection with greater speed than will enable them to take the ninety degree turns properly and will swing wide into the other lane.

But' McGrath and the other members of the committee remained unconvinced. "Believe me, if there were arguments presented that this was creating a hazard, that ' would have been rescinded," McGrath said.

Lois Rand said she would not have minded losing the battle so much if only it had been a "fair battle."

Since the abutters and the immediate neighborhood never realized what was in the works until the project had already begun, Mrs. Rand says only the proponents of the project had a chance to speak.

"This is an absolutely clear example of no democracy in action," she said. "This whole thing would never have happened if the people who were going to be most effected had had a chance to speak at the hearing."

Mrs. Rand also charges that the neighborhood aldermen "fell down on the job because they never informed us about it and they signed it."

After the work had already begun, Mrs. Rand believes city officials continued support of the project has been a "face-saving operation."

Her husband, Albert Rand, resents the tone of several aldermen and other officials that the project had gone through the "the so-called process of city government and that that somehow makes it right."

Rand and his wife, along with Stoner, feel they were listened to by deaf ears.

"I feel the aldermen and everyone else involved in this really had no intention whatsoever of changing the course of this," Mr. Rand said. "Nobody was willing to take a step back and say, 'Is this really what we're trying to do?'"

McGrath countered by saying that the residents were "listened to, they just have not been agreed with."

"We reopened the case and allowed the public to speak and gave them two additional hearing which they were not entitled to in the legal sense," McGrath added.

McGrath said that the need to spend additional money to restore the intersection was not a consideration when he voted to go ahead with the modified design. He is convinced that the intersection will be safer.

"All statistics and all authorities universally agree that a ninety degree entrance to an intersection is safe," he continued. "If they could have convinced me that the intersection was not safer, I would have in a second spent the money to put it back."

Of the fact that the abutters were not informed before the project was approved, McGrath placed the blame on the neighborhood's aldermen.

"I as an aldermen personally notify the neighbors when something is happening. I don't care if it's going to be a telephone pole moved across the street'" McGrath said. "Now I assumed that when they stated that this was something everyone wanted, that they had done their homework."

Oddly enough, the neighborhood's ward aldermen, Ernest Dietz, has the same complaint. He says the project passed the Public Safety Committee with unanimous support.

"We usually assume that they have done their homework'" Dietz said. "With this kind of committee support, the board usually passes it."

But' Dietz feels the real fault lies with the original petition which was not distributed to the aldermen of the area or to the neighbors who would be directly effected.

"I'm as upset as the neighbors," Dietz said. " said, "but, I see no way of restoring it now."

Pointing to the experts, he added that they "sincerely believe that what we have now is a much safer situation."

Levin

ball team experienced while at the games. "They key is wider and at an angle. Also, the referee doesn't touch the ball after a violation." In addition, and confusing to Levin's team was the fact that in Europe, players are allowed to take an extra step before shooting. Levin remembers a French woman who would "stop and step around us" as Levin's team kept screaming "Traveling!"

She made several friend while in Israel, an Israeli, an Argentinian and an Australian girl. "The Australians were one of the friendliest groups."

She hopes to maintain those friendships through letters, and perhaps meet them again' maybe at the Olympics. "The culmination of all the work would be the Olympics for me."

Perhaps the tenaciousness that has taken her this far will also take her to the 1984 Summer Olympics for another experience that would be as wonderful for as was her trip to Israel' where the slogan was,"Two weeks to experience, a lifetime to remember."

Project

aldermen, agreed. "This project is too dense and too big for the area," he asserted.

Aldermen supporting the plan argued that it would provide the city with much needed housing. Alderman Susan Schur said the Druker plan, was the "last kernel of hope" for subsidized housing in the city.

Schur and other aldermen contended that the alternative to the plan -four-story office buildings - was less attractive. Alderman Rodney Barker called the prospect of office buildings "bleak and grim."

He pleaded: "This alternative at least provides us with much needed housing."

Calling Newton Corner "a slum," Alderman Robert Gaynor said: "This is more housing than we created in the last 25 years or we will create in the next 25 years... Subsidized housing under Reagan economics will be dried up in the future."

After the vote, Gaynor added: "The people won the battle, but lost the war. They lost 301 units of housing, $500,000 for relocation expenses, a tot lot and open space."

Aldermen on both sides of the issue said it was unfortunate that the proposal failed after the Druker firm worked with community leaders and city officials for more than a year on the project.

"I think it's very sad," Schur said. "The city is losing a project with vision and I don't think the tenants of those buildings will be the beneficiaries... I didn't think the Druker proposal was perfect, but I think it was solid and a whole lot more appropriate than office buildings."

Morris admitted, "I feel no great sense of satisfaction at having defeated this...However, losing something presumes you had something in the first place."

Aldermen voting against the Druker proposal were: Lisle Baker, Wendell Bauckman, Bruce Carmichael, Paul Coletti, Joseph DePasquale, Elaine Gentile, Richard McGrath, James Miller, Terry Morris, and Dominic Taglienti.

Aldermen voting for the plan were: Rodney Barker, Donald Budge, Cynthia Creem, Paul Daley, Ernie Dietz, Robert Gaynor, Edward Richmond, Susan Schur, Carol Ann Shea, Ethel Sheehan, Robert Tennant, and Matthew Jefferson.

Alderman Robert Katz was absent for the vote.

Raise

present level of $37,500 until 1986. The mayor last received a raise in 1978 when his salary was hiked $10,000 from $27,500. Aldermen at the same time received a $600 raise bringing their salary to the current level of $1,800.

"It is incomprehensible to me that the legislative branch of this city can allow the chief executive to go eight years without a raise against double-digit inflation," pointed out Richmond.

Alderman Lisle Baker felt that if the salary remained at its present level, the city might be unable to attract top candidates for the post. "In a time of fiscal constraint, we're going to need even better men," said Baker. "It impedes your ability to pay department heads and your ability to hire and retain a good staff."

"It's not in the best interests of the city with that type of lid on the city's management structure for four years," continued Baker. "If you want to save money, you do so by good management."

Budge, who chartered the item, asked, "What hasn't gone up in the last four years?"

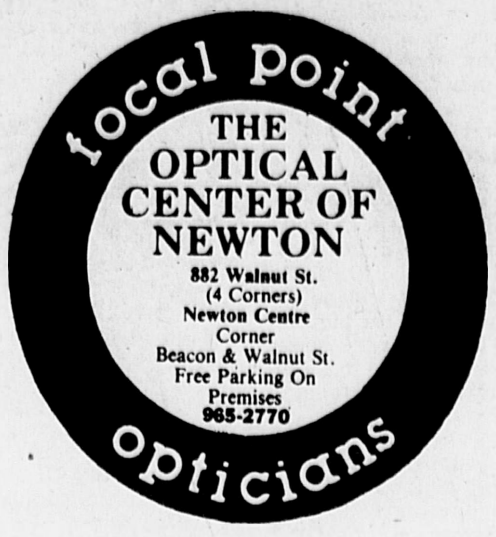

"You've got to pay the position," Budge said. "If you don't pay for the position, you won't get top people. I'm talking about the position, not about the current mayor."

Alderman Paul Coletti favored an increase for the mayor, but "only if he clears out his support staff" which currently earns more than $110,000 in salaries.

"He has spread out his responsibilities," he continued. The mayor's office currently operates with five assistants including two secretaries.

Alderman Richard McGrath seemed surprised by the citizens committee's final report.

Producer criticized for new FBI program

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Producer David Gerber is being pilloried by critics for basing his new TV series on the FBI.

Even before the two-hour pilot of "Today's FBI" was seen, the critics jumped on Gerber as an apologist and propogandist for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Probably no filmmaker in Hollywood is more cognizant of the pitfalls of producing TV series involving the constabulary than is Gerber.

He produced "Police Story," "Eicheid," "Police Woman" and the four-hour smash hit, "Killer Cop."

Gerber is a stickler for authenticity who steers away from such cops-and-robber indulgences as "Kojak," "Baretta" and "Starsky and Hutch," a trio of psuedo police shows which stretched credulity to the limit.

A big, humorous bear of a man, Gerber struck back at TV reviewers who are belaboring "Today's FBI" even before they see it.

"The minute I announced that we received permission to use the official FBI seal on the show and will have the bureau's full cooperation, the critics began to yell," Gerber said.

"They confuse FBI approval with FBI control. An FBI man will work with us for authenticity, research and technical advice but that's it. We'll draw our stories from FBI case files, but we'll fictionalize each script.

"I can't put myself in the position of criticizing the critics, but they are not starting with open minds. They have a fetish about me being a propogandist for the bureau.

"The bureau is hiring women and minorities like never before. Also, I was attracted to the idea of an FBI show because of the new sophisticated electronic tools the bureau is using to fight crime.

"We're telling stories about dedicated men doing a very difficult job. And we're getting into the human side of these agents and how their work affects their personal lives."

"We're not going to rely on car chases and some of the old and easy elements of crime shows. There's almost a science-fiction feeling to some of the crime-fighting equipment and labs that the bureau is using today."

"Today's FBI" stars Mike Connors of "Mannix" fame as a senior field agent inspector in charge of a trio of young agents, played by newcomers Carol Potter, Joe Cali and Steve White. Another agent may yet be added to the cast.

When Gerber first brought the idea of an hour-long series based on bureau files, the FBI was reluctant to go along. Gerber took his project to ABC which enthusiastically agree to buy it.

The network's chairman, Leonard Goldenson, went to the FBI himself to plead Gerber's cause.

"Even so, the bureau was reticent," Gerber said. "They wanted to know what my approach would be. They read the story line of the pilot show and approved it. Then they read the script and gave approval.

"The story deals with an agent who goes undercover and begins to lose his own identity when he discovers he is identifying with the racketeers he's investigating.

"The bureau didn't agree to go ahead with the series until after they saw the completed pilot. ABC went along with my gamble to make the pilot, hoping the bureau would like and approve what it saw.

"I tried to convince the bureau that we'd demonstrate the positive, constructive side of what the FBI is doing.

"They appreciated my past record with police shows and the personal stories involving officers in the line of duty.

"I also told them I was not a propagandist for anyone. I simply respect anyone in the life-and-death business of law enforcement but needed fluidity to show the agents as human beings, not conveyer-belt superheroes.

"The bureau has agreed to allow us certain liberties.

"The series won't take place in any one city. Instead Connors will head up this team which moves around the country, something the bureau doesn't ordinarily do. I want to show the national activities of the bureau.

"Jane" won't see Tarzan

RUTLAND, Vt. (UPI) — When the new version of "Tarzan" appears at her neighborhood theater, actress Maureen O'Sullivan, who played Jane nearly 50 years ago, does not plan to see it.

It's not that Ms. O'Sullivan — who starred with Johnny Weissmuller in MGM's 1932 production of "Tarzan and the Ape Man" — refuses to watch anyone else play her role.

Since Ms. O'Sullivan and Weissmuller appeared together in "Tarzan," more than 30 "Tarzan" movies have been made and more than 15 men and a dozen women have played the starring roles in Edgar Rice Burroughs' jungle classic.

Ms. O'Sullivan, on a three week "sabbatical" from Hollywood, said she considers it "ridiculous" to make an R-rated version of "Tarzan," though she does not necessarily object to sex in the cinema.

What made Mickey move?

NEW YORK - Ub Iwerks, that pioneering 20th century artist, is presently on display at the lofty Whitney Museum of American Art. So are more than a dozen of his pals, all of them big names — Norman Ferguson, Dick Lundy, Ward Kimball, Frank Thomas, Vladimir Tytla.

Never heard of any of these guys? Feeling ignorant? Relax. Outside of their colleagues, few people know who they are. But maybe you've heard of their creations. Iwerks gave the world Mickey Mouse. Ferguson: Pluto. Lundy: Donald Duck. Kimball: Jiminy Cricket.

These are the animators who toiled long and hard for Walt Disney, the pioneers who helped revolutionize animation in the 1930s — brought it to life, as only the Disney shop could. They are gifted and important artists, and they are finally getting the public recognition they richly deserve.

"Disney Animations and Animators," at the Whitney through the summer, explores their work during the so-called Golden Age from 1932 to 1942. And it was when the Disney animation factory produced a string of feature length classics which seem fresh and innovative even today: "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" (1937), "Pinocchio" (1940), "Fantasia" (1940), "Dumbo" (1941) and "Bambi" (1942).

Here is the first comprehensive museum exploration of the Disney magic. In all, some 1,500 drawings, sketches, cels and backgrounds are on display. More than 150 Disney animated films are being screened as part of the exhibit.

The animation process — what makes Mickey move, if you will — is detailed here step by fascinating step. Preliminary sketches outline and detail the characters. Background elements are drawn. Then the characters are positioned against the background, and a test reel made to check the movement. Videocassettes of the test reels have been provided as part of the exhibit.

Then the character sketches are cleaned up and transferred to celluloid. By positioning these cels against the background paintings, the illusion of three dimensions is created. By photographing hundreds of these cel paintings, each a bit different than the preceding one, and by running these photos through a movie camera, animation is created.

But the Disney cartoons don't endure in the heart of America because of technique. It was the ability to give clear and lovable personalities to mice, ducks, cows, flowers, even doorknobs and broomsticks that constitutes the Disney magic.

What takes "Disney Animations and Animators" past the textbooks is that it introduces the key contributions of the animators in the creation of those personalities. Iwerks didn't just draw Mickey Mouse. Nor was Lundy's job simply to pencil in Donald Duck slipping and sliding across a frozen pond. Each of the animators responsible for the Disney characters defined his character — was his character.

Nobody knew this better than Disney. "Disney in fact 'cast' animators the way producers cast actors and actresses," writes Handardt, "giving each one leeway to create roles, so that their distinctive drawing strengths and the personality of their drawing style would continually inform the character and story idea."

Though he himself was an artist, Disney functioned through these golden years of the studio as a producer — always looking over his animators' shoulders, urging them, pushing them, driving them. It was Disney who set the standards for what was good enough to belong in a Disney film. But he couldn't have done it without the pioneering animators on display here.

Rudy Valle turns 80

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rudy Vallee, celebrating his 80th birthday recently in his shocking pink palazzo atop the Santa Monica Mountains, is still determined to make a major comeback.

Robust, pink-cheeked and with a full head of brown hair (not showing a speck of gray), Vallee remains an iconoclast railing against the vicissitudes of the 1980s and the incomprehensible lack of appreciation for his talents.

His home, which he bought 40 years ago, is a repository for thousands of bits and pieces of memorabilia, a veritable Louvre de Vallee. Indeed, his long, shaded driveway is marked by a sign reading Rue de Vallee.

He lives in a museum, a gallery, a warehouse of Valleeana. The two-story structure beneath his tennis court includes a small nightclub and storage areas for his enormous hoard of items from the past.

Rudy and his beautiful redhaired wife, Ellie, cannot turn in any direction without seeing some memento of Rudy's past glory.

Much as he savors his accomplishments, Rudy does not live in the past.

He devotes much of his time to making a comeback with his one-man show, a 90-minute collection of slides, tapes, songs and jokes which he performs almost at the drop of a hat.

Rudy is also writing an addendum to his third book, "Let The Chips Fall," originally published in 1975. His first two tomes were "Vagabond Dreams Come True," 1929, and "My Time Is Your Time," 1962.

The latter titles were, of course, symbolic of Rudy, the wavy-haired, nasal-voiced, megaphone crooner who billed himself as the Vagabond Lover and whose theme song was "My Time Is Your Time."

He likes to reminisce about the glory days of the late 1920s and 1930s when Rudy Vallee was the hottest property in show business, a veritable combination of the Beatles, Presley and Sinatra.

"I paved the way for all of them," Rudy said, enjoying a noonday bowl of soup on one of the many terraces of his home. The sun danced off a gold ring inscribed with a capital "Y" and the figures 1927.

It turned out not to be a genuine Yale graduate ring but one Rudy had made up.

"I was the first to sing in a natural, untrained voice back in 1928. Crosby and Sinatra would have been laughed out of the studios if it hadn't been for me. I introduced the style.

"There's no counting the number of hit songs I had. One of the biggest was 'The Stein Song' which made the University of Maine famous. It sold 25 million records worldwide and eight million sheet music copies here and abroad.

"Why when I played the Keith Theater in New York in 1929, the lines went around the block several times. We did turnaway business four times a day.

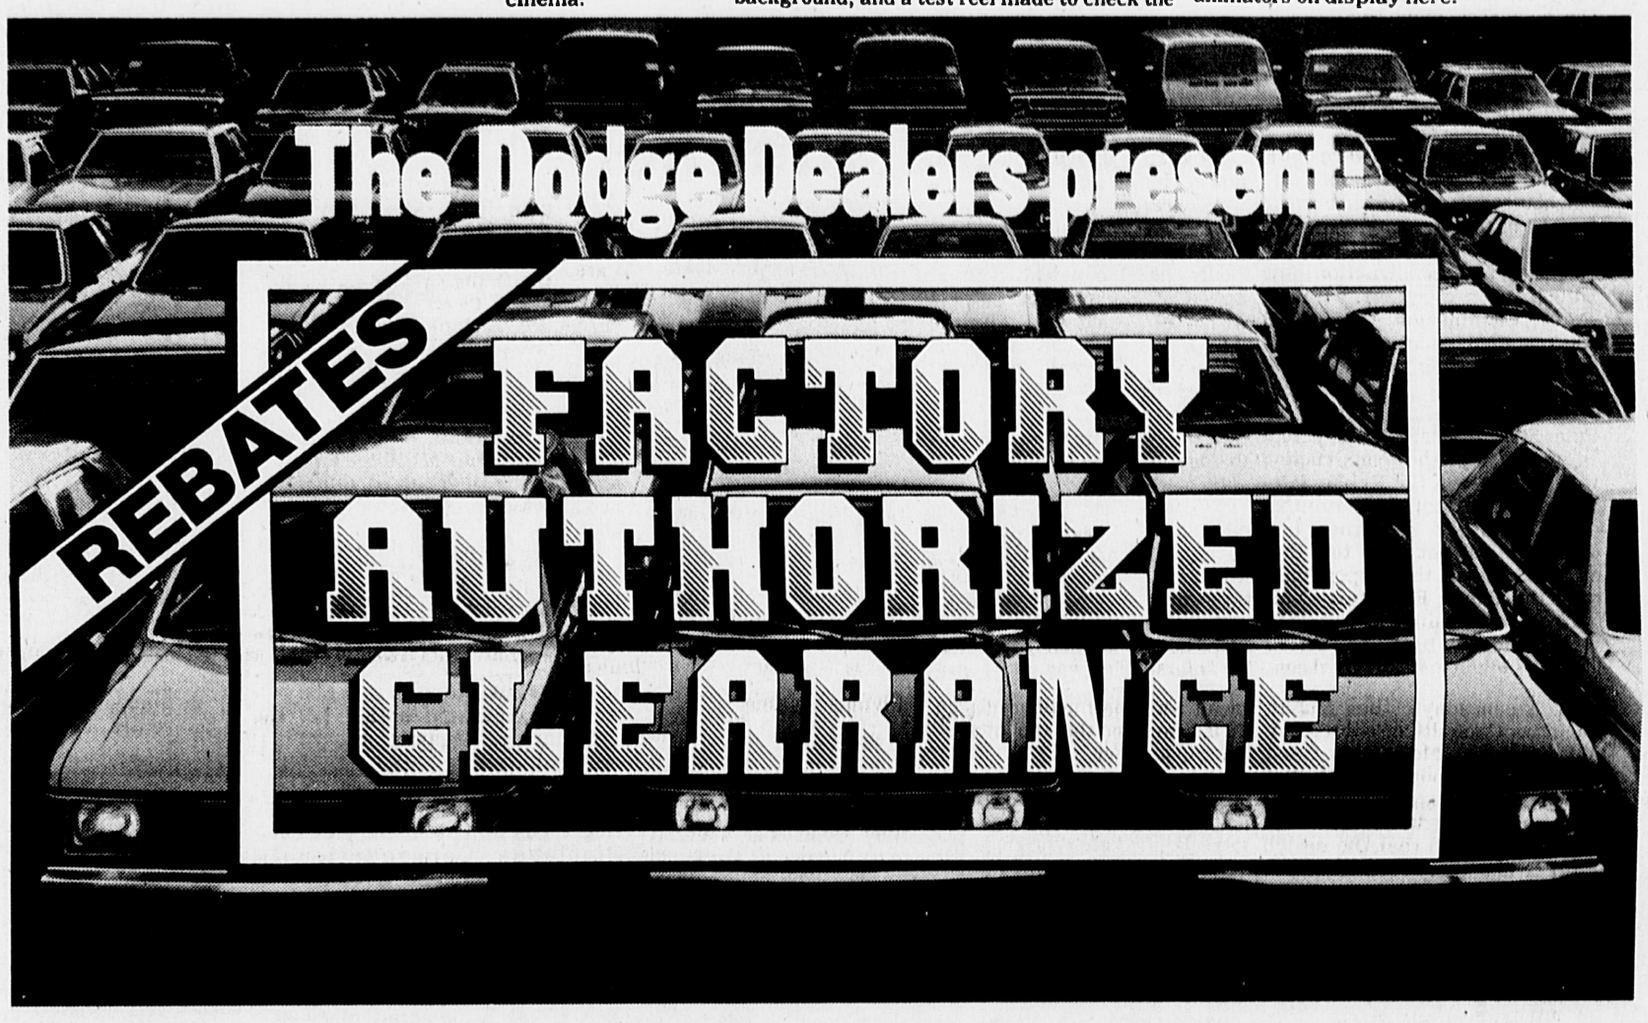

"I had sex appeal in my voice. My voice may have been a little thin, a bit nasal, but it drove women crazy. We packed them into the Heigh-Ho club in New York for two whole years."

Rudy has spent much of his life embattled with authorities, agents, nightclubs and publishers. He's also been embroiled in law suits. But the old boy continues ready to do battle whenever he thinks he's been wronged.

Before he departs this vale, Rudy has three mountains he'd like to climb.

"The first thing I'd like to do is make an album of 25 or 30 of the greatest songs of my career from 1942 to the present — when they were originally recorded and when my voice was at its best. Each one has a story to tell.

"The album would be sold along with a book telling the stories of the songs and how they were done. I'd want Time-Life or the Reader's Digest to publish both the album and the book. It would be the album to end all albums.

'Camelot' an evening of majesty

By Cynthia J. Black
Staff Writer

It's a magical story, magically portrayed. It has all the stuff of legend, because it is a legend; and it must be mystical and beautiful and whimsical and bittersweet, or it will lose its power of enchantment.

"Camelot" comes to the Met Center with Richard Harris as King Arthur and Meg Bussert as his queen.

The legend lives, and the audience is enchanted.

With songs that have been memorable for 20 years, the musical "Camelot" itself is almost a legend. It is inextricably linked with the presidency of John F. Kennedy and serves as a symbol of fond rememberance for "other times."

It is a perfect symbol, since the story of King Arthur is one centering on the creation of laws stressing the importance of life; a story of new departures from old ways. In "Camelot" it's more important to be right than have might.

All of these things are brought lovingly back to life in the current "Camelot" revival with Harris as the satisfyingly dominant presence.

Arthur begins the story as a boy made king, relying heavily on his mentor and teacher, Merlin. He shoulders the mantle of kingship, with Guenevere at his side, progressing from the youthful dependent to the man of tragic and heroic stature compelled to watch his dream succumb.

The dramatic conflicts are momentous for a musical that is so lovely and engaging. Lancelot, who worships Arthur but loves Guenevere all the same; Mordred, the evil, ill-conceived son co-opting the virtuous knights of the roundtable, trapping Lancelot and Guenevere and ruining the kingdom. Arthur suffering in silence.

Harris, who so obviously relishes the role, carries it all off perfectly. He is capable of deftly alternating between the gaiety needed for a musical and the growing pathos of Arthur.

He is one minute a boy; the next tragic king. He rivets and dominates throughout, and is on stage for virtually the entire three-hour performance.

Singing is not his forte, and "Camelot" was never structured with Arthur as the character carrying the main burden of song. Meg Bussert as Guenevere and Richard Muenz as Lancelot quite easily present the most memorable songs in the show, Lancelot's "C'est Moi" and "If Ever I Would Leave You," and Guenevere's "The Simple Joys of Maidenhood" and "I Loved You Once in Silence."

Bussert, with a lyrical voice, makes a winsome Guenevere.

Muenz, selects, much to the delight of the audience, a posturing interpretation of "C'est Moi," a paen of self-praise.

The medieval splendor and murkiness of the sets is unparalleled.

On one hand, they evoke the regal settings associated with a king; while on the other, the choice of dark, baroquely mixed colors, serves to actually make it seem as though the stage is a window to the past.

The production is also enlivened by Barry Ingham as the dotty King Pellinore, an old friend of Arthur's in residence at the castle on a breather from his eternal search for "the questing beast."

Pellinore provides one of the most charming moments in "Camelot" when he enters with his shaggy dog and explains his presence in Camelot. As he rattles along, Arthur enters, someone shouts, "The King," and the dog bows.

The greatest problem with the production seems to be getting the sound under control.

The "Camelot" stars chose not to wear body mikes, and when they sing while crossing the stage, the sound has something of a "crest and trough" effect. In range of a mike, it's fine; but it fades out in between mikes.

Picking up the pace of the first act would not be a bad idea either. The act, running close to two hours, becomes interminable and almost destroys the climactic scene that ends it, a lavish ceremony with the haunted Arthur knighting, among others, his friend Lancelot, whom he then knows is in love with his wife.

Anyone who goes to see "Camelot" should spend the money to get the best seats in the house for a couple of reasons.

First, the sound of both the songs and dialogue will be more audible and enjoyable, and second, to fully appreciate Richard Harris' performance, it is important to be able to watch his face.

His transformation from the boy Arthur to the man Arthur takes place mainly in his eyes and via the expression on his face.

The eyes grow so sad and the expression so bereft as he watches Guenevere's attraction for Lancelot grow, building meticulously to the final scene when he learns that the dream lives after all. Majesty.

"Camelot" will be at the Metropolitan Center through the end of August.

Richard Harris runs the gamut of emotions in a tour de force performance as King Arthur in "Camelot" at the Met Center.

A parable right for the summer

A parable is defined as "as simple story told to illustrate a moral truth," and the "The Fantasticks" is described as "a parable."

It is.

This simple story, lightly played, is the current offering of the Newton Country Players at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church. It holds the title of longest running musical in the world; and while the reasons might escape you' that does not mean it is not perfect summer fare.

It is.

One of the endless variations of the Romeo and Juliet theme' "The Fantasticks" presents you with "The Girl," played by Esther Schreier, and "The Boy," played by Daniel Goldstone, as the young lovers overcoming obstacles to reach togetherness.

The twist here is that their respective parents aren't really opposed to the union; rather, they are pretending to be because—as we all know—children always want to do whatever their parents DON't want them to do.

And since the path to true love is never smooth, the young pair must go through various trials and tribulations before deciding they are, after all' meant for each other.

The Newton Country Players elect to stage the story as simply as its content dictates' and therefore pull off a nice diversion.

We are taken through the story of the young lovers by a narrator and series of engaging characters to its ultimate happy conclusion.

The major characters all do their jobs well.

Schreier is demure as the young girl captivated by her suitor, played by Goldstone. The narrator, who doubles as the bandit El Gallo, played by John Sullivan, has an easy presence as the narrator and a strong enough voice to carry his dashing counterpart.

The fathers of the pair, Chad Goldstone and Eric Kahn, are marvelous, long on charm and pleasant cameraderie.

The most interesting feature of "The Fantasticks" is the role of "The Mute," played by Diane Carlson.

Carlson, who obviously never says a word, plays "the wall" the fathers' build in the garden, and helps the sun, moon and characters fulfill their various roles.

She is excellent. Unobstrusive while making her presence known and felt. She is graceful, delicate and an integral character without one word.

The voices of John Sullivan and Daniel Goldstone are certainly up to their parts; but Schrier seems to have forgotten she is playing almost cabaret style. In the smaller room, it is necessary for her to rein her voice so that she is singing and not shrieking.

The musical accompaniment is excellent.

Directed by Jay Massimo, "The Fantasticks" will be performed Aug. 13, 14 and 15 in the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 54 Lincoln St., at 8 p.m.

The production had one of the nicest sendoffs imaginable last week with an enthusiastic audience of about 80 people, mostly in their late teens, giving them the best ticket to greater glory—a standing ovation. — C. Black

'The Miser' at present

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

The Lincoln Plaza Players made their debut last Thursday with their own modern version of the Moliere classic, "The Miser," a play that is as funny today as it was 300 years ago.

While the story does have its tragic elements, such as a father and son fighting over the same woman and the selfish' tight-fisted old man who sees the world with only dollar signs in his eyes, Moliere makes even these pathetic folks seem laughable.

Justin Kaan is Harpagon, an insufferable old man whose life ambition, aside from making his childrens' lives miserable, is to keep a tight grip on his money. Nor will he allow his son or daughter to marry unless he has checked into the financial status of their prospective mates.

A junior majoring in theater at Emerson College, Kaan is wonderful as the grouchy miser who struts about banging his cane and irritating everyone in sight.

The players have updated the play by using nodern clothes and speech. For instance, young Cleante, son of the miser, wears Calvin Klein jeans and a green alligator shirt, which of course, his critical father dislikes. "Why must you wear pants with other peoples' names on them?" Then, pulling at Cleante's preppy shirt, "You have enough animals in your drawer to fill a zoo!"

Raymond Gamache gives a lively performance as the ardent, star-struck Cleante, who is hopelessly and forever in love with lovely Marianne, played by Donna Sangiolo. When he first dashes onto the stage, he appears to be some sort of lunatic, rolling his eyes wildly and jerking his lanky body in dramatic gestures, as he babbles on about a divine creture who has captured his heart!

Another conspicuous character is Frosine, the flashy community matchmaker who gets caught up in the troubles of this confused family. Evelyn Frankl gives her first performance in three and a half years as the fast-talking Frosine, who delivers such lines as, "If I had the time, I could match Tom Schnieder and Rona Barrett!"

But the funniest character was Master Jacque, chauffeur, cook, gardner or whatever "Sir" needs at the moment. A cross between Arnold Horshack of "Kotter" and Peter Sellers in "Being There" Steven Burnstein, who plays Jacques, uses a high— pitched, slow voice to deliver simple words of wisdom that will not only make you laugh, but also helps break up the monotony that sometimes disrupts the performance.

Completing the cast is Kara Johnson, who plays Elise, the love struck daughter who hopes to win her father's approval to marry the handsome Valere, played by David Horvitz.

David Liberatore takes the roles of both La Fleche, Cleante's best friend and an officer, and a local musician, known only as Randell, has two brief roles, though his tall stature dark features and deep voice make him a stronger presence on stage.

While the Players version sometimes becomes confusing, particularly when it shuffles back and forth from the use of modern speech ' to an attempt by some of the actors at an English accent, it is a very funny show that takes a satirical look at human shortcomings, which Moliere originally intended it to be.

Graphic policy on weddings, engagements

The Newton Graphic is happy to accept wedding or engagement announcements when one or both of the partners are from Newton.

There is no charge.

Weddings, accompanied by a black and white photo of the bride or couple, should arrive within two months of the date of the cerenony in order to be considered for publication.

Wedding forms are available at the Newton Graphic office, 1157 Walnut St., Newton Highlands. Call 965-6300 if you would like to have one mailed to you.

Engagement announcements must be sent well in advance of the wedding date. We do not have an engagement form, but suggest you follow the style used in the paper when writing one.

Engagements should be accompanied by a black and white photo of the bride-to-be only.

The deadline is Friday at noon for the following week's paper. Photos are returned if an self-addressed stamped envelope is provided. Photos can be picked up at the Graphic office after they have appeared in the paper.

If you have any questions, contact Ann Carter at 965-6300 on Thursdays or Fridays.

The mailing address of the Newton Graphic is: Newton Graphic, P.O. Box 341, Newton, Mass. 02161.

Mrs. Neal Foster

Nancy Slotnick is bride of Neal R. Foster in Boston

Nancy Enid Slotnick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Slotnick of Waban, was married to Neal Robert Foster' son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Foster of Newton Centre, on July 12.

Rabbi Samuel Chiel and Cantor David Myers performed the ceremony at the Copley Plaza Hotel, where a reception was held.

Ellen T. Slotnick of Waban was maid of honor, and Audrey S. Foster of Weston was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jocelyn Eichler of New York and Laurie Altshuler of Brookline. Tammy Kupperman of Washington, D.C. was junior bridesmaid, Karen Klein of Sharon was flower girl and Steven Rosen of Sudbury was ring bearer.

John Foster of Waltham and James Foster of Weston were best men. Ushers were William Camman of Brookline, Marc Ehrlich of Newton' Stuart Karger of Framingham, Alan Horovitz of Rhode Island, Jeffrey Saunders of Boston and William Slotnick of Waban.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Beaver Country Day School. Mrs. Foster attended Skidmore College and is now a student at Lesley College, from which she expects to graduate next spring. Mr. Foster attends Northeastern University and is production manager of Charles River Breeding Labs in Wilmington.

After a wedding trip to Europe, the couple is living in Wayland.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tedeschi

Joanne Sliverstein weds Richard John Tedeschi

Joanne Silverstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. was married to Richard John Nathan Silverstein of Waban' Tedeschi on June 28. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Tedeschi of Newton Highlands.

Cantor Alex Zimmer performed the 5 p.m. ceremony at the Hilton Inn, Natick, where a reception was held.

Ruth Audrey Silverstein was maid of honor for her sister, and bridesmaids were Darcie Fa Lubart and Janet Tedeschi of Newton. Robert Tedeschi of Newton was best man and ushers were James Caruso of Newton, Paul Kelly of Michigan' John Tedeschi of Holliston and Mark Forant of Sharon.

The bride received a BS degree from Boston University and is a teacher of children with special needs in the Wakefield Public Schools. Mr. Tedeschi is an account executive with CDI Corporation in Needham, continuing education at Bentley College.

The couple is living in Watertown after a trip to the West Indies.

Robert E. Gill marries Margaret Kelly, teacher

Margaret Susan Kelly, a teacher in the Newton schools' became the bride of Robert Emmett Gill, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Gill of Newton, on July 4.

The wedding was performed by the Rev. Richard Nadeau in the Church of St. Athanasius-St. John in Rumford, Me., and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman T. Kelly.

Kathleen Ann Kelly was her sister's maid of honor' and Thomas Gill of Boston was best man for his brother.

The bride is a graduate of Rumford High School and the University of Prince Edward Island. She received a secretarial degree at Katharine Gibbs School in Boston and is a sixth grade teacher in Newton.

Mr. Gill attended Boston College and will graduate from Harvard University in December. He is an accountant for the Kendall Company.

The couple is living in Newton Centre.

Grant for $150,000 received by school

NEWTON — The Kresge Foundation of Troy, Michigan, one of the largest charitable foundations in the United States, has awarded a challenge grant of $150,000 to Andover Newton Theological School for the renovation of Noyes Hall into the new dining facility.

The grant is one of the culminating gifts in a successful capital campaign for $1,018,546 to properly insulate 26 buildings on the Andover Newton campus and to provide an adequate dining facility. This is the first phase in a two-part capital campaign. Phase II, a campaign for over $2,000,000 to strengthen the school's endowment, will begin in the fall.

In 1981, The Kresge Foundation authorized grants totaling $33,354,000 to 176 charitable institutions in the U.S. and Canada. The 176 recipients were selected from 1551 qualified proposals, with most grants being given to assist in the construction or renovation of facilities. Most grant recipients had raised initial funds toward their respective projects before requesting Foundation assistance. Grants were then authorized on a challenge basis, requiring the raising of remaining funds, thereby insuring the completion of projects.

The Kresge Foundation was created solely by the personal gifts of the late Sebastian S. Kresge. Since 1924, appropriations of over $416 million have been made to institutions of higher education, health and related services, the arts and the humanities, social welfare, science, and religion.

Andover Newton, founded in 1807, is a graduate professional school of theology officially related to the American Baptist Churches, U.S.A., and the United Church of Christ. There are 705 students, including 426 degree candidates' who come from all parts of the U.S. and represents the major Protestant denominations as well as Roman Catholicism.

Jaycees plan harbor cruise

WALTHAM— The Waltham Jaycees are sponsoring a harbor cruise on Saturday, Aug. 15. The Bostonian II will leave from 20 Long Wharf, between the Aquarium and the Chart House Restaurant, at 8 p.m. and cruise until 11 p.m. There will be a D.J., a cash bar and a raffle.

Admission is open to the public at $8 per person. For more information call Frank Connors at 893-4141.

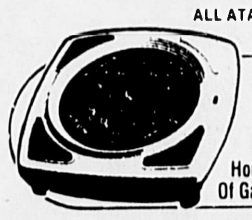

The Evening Auxiliary of Jewish Memorial Hospital has elected Sayde Scholnick (left) and Virginia Gross (right), both of Newton, co-presidents. The auxiliary sponsors yearly projects to help raise money for hospital research programs and for the purchase of special equipment.

'Three's Company' still gets a crowd

By David Handler

"Three's Company" has been giving TV a bad name ever since it premiered on ABC in March 1977. It is a vulgar, distasteful, voyeuristic show. It is a stupid show. It is an unfunny show. It is a hit. I don't think it has been out of the top 10 in weekly ratings for three years.

From the beginning, "Three's Company" has had only one thing on its mind. A swell-looking swinger named Jack (John Ritter) wants to share an apartment with two cuties, Chrissy (Suzanne Somers) and Janet (Joyce DeWitt). But in order to get past the landlord Jack must masquerade as a homosexual. The middle-aged landlord will approve of such an arrangement since no hanky-panky will go on, theoretically.

Jack moves in and spends his time alternating between unsuccessful grabs at his roommates and cold showers. Meanwhile, the landlord, initially Mr. Roper (Norman Fell), stands in the doorway and drools over Chrissy, then goes upstairs and fails to satisfy his sex-starved wife.

In one fell swoop "Three's Company" manages to offend gays, women, anyone engaged in an alternative lifestyle, anyone middle-aged and anyone with an IQ greater than that of a container of potato salad.

"Three's Company" is basically low-grade bedroom follies played out in PJs the size of postage stamps. It's a show where people don't climb into bed — they take a running leap and bounce onto it like a cannonball. The day a character on "Three's Company" has the flu is the same day the corner druggist has only rectal thermometers in stock. I've never understood why anyone watches it. I take that back, I understand perfectly well why they watch it. I've never understood how.

But watch they do. When the Ropers left a couple of seasons back to peep on a whole new set of neighbors, the producers brought in a new lecherous landlord, Ralph Furley, who is partial to ascots, baby-blue jumpsuits and white shoes. Google-eyed Don Knotts played Furley. My initial response to this bit of casting was to say "Poor guy. His career has been going steadily downhill since 'Mr. Limpet.'" But the ratings zoomed to the top three with Knotts on board; he is perhaps enjoying his widest success ever in this... stinker.

This season, I was sure ths show's number was finally up. Suzanne Somers decided the show would die without her. So she demanded a five-fold pay hike, from the mere $30,000 per week she'd been making — an insulting slave wage for one so vital, so talented — to $150,000 per week, which is approximately one-half the entire budget for a half-hour sitcom episode. The producers told her to get lost, her co-stars refused to work with her. I crossed my fingers and hoped her shocking greed would kill the show. It seemed poetic justice.

Foiled again. The producers simply went out and hired another tootsie and nobody noticed the difference. This one's name is Jenilee Harrison. She is tall, blonde, leggy, has nice dimples and abundant acting talent, which is to say she makes Miss Somers look like an Everlast heavy bag. Miss Harrison, a former Los Angeles Rams cheerleader, was cast as Cindy, Chrissy's cousin. Just for laffs they gave her character a little twist — she's clumsy. Isn't that cute? "Three's Company" finished number one in the ratings a couple of weeks ago. So much for Suzanne.

TV's Flamingo Road back for fall lineup

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cristina Raines and the Rev. Donald Wildmon have one thing in common. They both were surprised — though for different reasons — to find "Flamingo Road" in NBC's fall lineup.

The torrid prime-time soap opera is a dream showcase for Miss Raines who plays Lane Ballou, the story's sultry, beautiful "other woman," but it stands at or near the top of Wildmon's Coalition for Better Television hit list.

The coalition surprised everyone last month by deferring the threatened boycott with which it had terrified the industry. Wildmon said advertisers suddenly had become "cooperative" about matters of sex and violence to which the coalition objects.

He was not worried Wednesday about "Flamingo Road."

"Distressed merchandise," he said in a telephone interview from his Tupelo, Miss., headquarters. "NBC can't afford to be selling distressed merchandise. I imagine there will be a substitute before the season ends."

Miss Raines, whose career has been climbing like a shuttle-shot in recent years, was more worried about Nielsen numbers than the boycott battalions.

"I was really surprised when it got picked up because the ratings were not steady at all," she said. "They fluctuated. They went from a 20 to a 36 to a 19 — it was up and down and up and down. Nobody really knew where we stood so I thought, well, they'll probably drop us like a hotcake."

If Wildmon isn't worried about "Flamingo Road," Miss Raines isn't worried about Wildmon and his followers.

"It doesn't surprise me that this has come up," she said. "I think it's a reaction to the past two decades. I think people are trying to gather a grounding ... There'll be a balance. There's always an overreaction, then it comes back to a balance."

Even if Wildmon is right and "Flamingo Road" doesn't survive the season, Miss Raines isn't likely to stay out of work. Her recent role as the beautiful, compassionate Lucinda in James A. Michener's "Centennial" was just the sort of thing Wildmon and his coalition would like to see all over the tube, and she wouldn't object to another shot at the genre — especially if it took her back to Colorado. She was raised in Florida, where "Flamingo" takes place, but she said "Centennial" left her "homesick" for Colorado."

Tigers, Panthers in hoop title go

Roger Nusbaum hit a free throw in the last seconds to allow the Tigers B to edge past the Panthers, 51-50, Monday night in a semi-final playoff game of the Newton High School Basketball League at Cabot Park.

The Tigers B move to the final to face the Maguire Club on Wednesday night, 8:15 p.m., at Cabot. Maguire destroyed St. Sebastian's, 74-45, in its semi-final contest. The Panthers and St. Sebastian's are eliminted.

John Humphrey led the Tigers B with 14 points, while Mike Galvin netted 22 markers to pace the panthers.

Bob Billings threw in 36 points to pilot Maguire Club. Dan Gilbert paced St. Sebastian's with 14 points.

National Division finals

Sports Shop rallies for opener

Bob Goodfellow slammed a 1-1 offering from John Toyias in the bottom of the seventh inning over everything in rightfield to propel the Auburndale Sports Shop to a 6-4 come-from-behind victory over C and K Components Monday night in the best-of-five finals series in the Newton National Division at Albemarle Field.

Goodfellow's three-run homer brought Auburndale back from a 4-3 deficit and capped off a dramatic four-run seventh inning, after two outs. C and K earned the 4-2 lead and cruised into the seventh inning.

Paul Howley singled to get the all-important lead-off runner on for Auburndale in the seventh. Anthony Venditti walked and Toyias got the next two batters out. Rich Keyes then betled a single to drive in Howley and put runners on first and second with two outs.

Goodfellow then waited two pitches before sending the ball skyward to end the contest and give the Sports Shop a one game to none lead in the series. The series continues tonight, 8 p.m., at Albemarle Field.

Dave Arcese was the winner, going seven innings. It was his first win in the playoffs and he pitched will in the last two innings blanking C and K to allow Auburndale to come back.

Despite the exciting ending, the first few innings of the opening game of the final were sloppily played. C and K took advantage of Sports Shop errors to gain a 3-1 lead.

The first C and K run came in the second inning when Gary Frechette scored on an overthrow of the shortstop. C and K scored twice in the third inning on a run-scoring single by Chris Buras. Buras scored on an error by the third baseman.

The Sports Shop took advantage of errors to score its runs in the early going, also. Larry Kelly started off the game with a double to right and he scored when a grounder by Arcese got by the first baseman.

International playoffs

Connerney pilots Boys' Club

Bob Connerney captured his second win of the playoffs by going seven innnings, allowing three runs and scattering nine hits, to pilot the Boys' Club to a 6-3 victory over TNT in the first game of the best-of-three Copp Division Finals series in the Newton International League playoffs at Cabot Park.

Connerney pitched a one-hitter in his other playoff win over the Totem Pole Braves. He also contributed at the plate with a two-run double in the four-run Boys' Club second inning.

The Boys' Club found themselves trailing in the bottom of the second inning, 2-0. TNT scored when Greg Rutan and Frank Biotti led off with singles to put runners on second and third. Losing pitcher Chris Biotti then smashed a basehit to bring in the two runs.

It was a short-lived lead as the Boys' Club answered with four runs in the bottom of the frame and never looked back. Mitchell Nash and Tim Greeley started the inning with back-to-back walks. Colin Ryan beat out and infield hit to load the bases.

Jim Arsenault belted a single to drive in the first Boys' Club run and the bases remained loaded. Anthony Proia forced in a run by walking and Connerney followed with the two-run double to end the inning's scoring.

Connerney ran into a little trouble in the top of the sixth inning. TNT closed to within one run when Frank Biotti singled, stole second and scored on Jim Lawless' basehit.

The Boys' Club responded by adding two insurance runs in the bottom of the frame. Connerney led off with a single and was driven in by a Dino Leone single. Leone scored on a Micthell Nash triple to left-centerfield.

The Boys' Club was bailed out of any potential trouble in the seventh inning by some fine defensive plays. Centerfielder Leone made all three putouts in the seventh inning and two of those were acrobatic diving catches.

The series resumes tonight at Howie Ferguson Field, 5:30 p.m. Leone will pitch for Boys' Club and Rutan for TNT.

BOYS' CLUB(6)--Connerney 4-2; J. Proia 3-0; Deverix 3-1; Leone 3-1; Nash 3-2; Greeley 2-0; Ryan 3-1; Arsenault 1-1; A. Proia 2-0; Tot. 24-8.

TNT(3)--Adner 3-0; Hays 4-1; Phillips 4-1; Schleifer 3-0; Rutan 3-1; F. Biotti 3-2; C. Biotti 3-1; Lawless 3-1; Gentile 3-0; Tot. 29-7.

Copp Division playoffs

Schleifer boosts TNT, Clubbies in 9-3 romp

Dan Schleifer continued his hot hitting by going five-for-five to power TNT a 14-10 victory over Carson Post, Friday night and a sweep of the best-of-three Copp Division semi-final playoff series in the Newton International League at Newton Centre Playground.

TNT will tangle with the first-place Boys' Club tonight, 5:30 p.m., at Cabot Park in the best-of-three final series to determine which team will face the Murphy Division winner. The Boys' Club gained a spot in the final by winning two in a row from the Totem Pole Braves.

Schleifer is batting a scorching .875 in the playoffs and he started the ball rolling for TNT with a two-run single in the first inning. TNT jumped out to a 10-5 lead after three frames.

Carson Post charged back, however, with five runs off starter and winner Greg Rutan in the bottom of the seventh inning. A two-run double by Sean Gardener was the big blow. Rutan got out of the jame by striking out the final batter.

TNT scored three insurance runs in the top of the seventh inning that eventually preserved the victory. Ben Adner led off with single and Schleifer singled him home. Frank Biotti brought in the final two runs with a single for the winners.

Will Hayes doubled in a run, one scored on a passed ball and Fritz Phillips singled in the third run in the four-run third inning for TNT. Rutan helped himself by smashing a solo homer to lead off the third inning and belting an RBI-double in the first frame.

The Boys' Club breezed past the Totem Pole Braves, 9-3, to complete the sweep of its playoff series. Dino Leone went the route for the win despite having men on base in almost every inning.

The Boys' Club pounced on Totem Pole with three runs in the first inning. Dan Deverix delivered a two-run single and Colin Ryan had a run-scoring safety.

In the second inning, the Boys' Club scored twice on three consecutive doubles by Bob Connerney, Jim Proia and Leone. In the two-run fourth inning for the Boys' Club, Deverix and Tim Greeley each smacked RBI-singles.

Totem Pole scored three times in the seventh inning, but the comeback bid fell way short. The Boys' Club won the first game of the series, 2-0. The summary:

BOYS' CLUB(9)--Connerney 5-2; J. Proia 5-1; Leone 4-3; DeNucci 1-0; Nash 4-3; Deverix 4-2; Greeley 4-1; C. Proia 1-0; C. Ryan 3-1; Arsenault 4-1; B. Ryan 2-0; A. Proia 2-0; Tot. 39-14.

Murphy Division playoffs

LeConti gives Warriors jump

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

In case you wondered, there's a legitimite reason why the Auburndale Warriors tore up the International League this year with an 18-2-1 record. They didn't do it with mirrors, you know. They did it by taking advantage of every little break that was handed to them. And by transforming apparently harmless innings into back-breaking rallies.

Such was the case Thursday night at the West Newton Commons when the Warriors, trailing 4-1 into the fifth inning, stormed back for an 8-4 victory over the Oak Hill Cubs to take a 1-0 edge in their best two-out-of-three series.

The Warriors came back in explosive style. The Cubs had fashioned that 4-1 cushion with three runs in the first and one in the fourth, and with righthander Todd Stern cruising along on the mound, seemed well in command of the situation. Stern had allowed two hits and one run in the first, but then had proceeded to surrender nothing in the way of hits or runs for the next three innings. He retired the side easily and in order in the fourth, and started the fifth by getting the first two batters on just two pitches.

Then, however, the roof caved in. The Warriors got the break they were desperately looking for when Rob LeConti's grounder just to the right of second base proved unplayable. That seemingly innocent two-out hit opened the floodgates.

"They are a very good hitting team," said Cub coach Neil Schwartz later. "When they get a chance like that they know how to take advantage."

Indeed. Catcher Eddie Cohen followed with a single to left and Dave Buckley slipped another grounder past the diving glove of second baseman Marc Stiller to drive in the first run. Jamie Rice drew a walk to fill the bases and Mike McKay drilled a line drive which just stayed inside the left field foul line for two more and just like that it was 4-4. Stern finally got Dan Nardone on a pop out to end the inning, but the damage had been done.

"Todd pitched a great game," said Schwartz, "But he started tiring in the fifth. His pitches were coming up high and that's what hurt him."

With the game deadlocked, Auburndale's sensational left-thander Rob LeConti beared down. The tall, slender LeConti does not give the appearance of being someone who could overpower a lineup, but with a sneaky-quick fastball and a clever change of speeds, that's just what he has been doing to this league for the past three years. "Is he my No.1 pitcher?" asked Warrior coach Charlie Bell in response to a question. "Well, he's been 19-2 for me in the three years I've had him. That should tell you something."

LeConti, who had already fanned seven in his first five innings, K'd the side for the second time in the sixth (he'd also done it in the second), struck out the first batter of the seventh, and then retired the last two on a weak pop to short and an even weaker bouncer back to the mound to finish off the Cubs. Nothing to it.

"The thing that makes him tough is he's so smart," said Schwartz. "He knows how to pitch to these hitters and he knows not to give them the ball right over the plate."

The Warriors won it with four more runs in the sixth. Again they got a break. Paul Nicholas reached first to start the frame when his grounder slipped through Stiller's legs at second. After Healey reached on a fielder's choice, Steve McKay singled up the middle, signalling the end of Stern for the day. Evan Kushner came on to get the second out on a shot back to the box which bounced off his leg, but with runners now on second and third, Schwartz elected to intentionally walk Cohen and load the bases.

Kushner went to 3 and 2 on Dave Buckley before Buckley sent a slow roller to second base which he managed to just beat out. Because the runners were moving on the pitch, two runs scored. Rice followed with a clean single and two more crossed home.

"There were three close plays at second that we just couldn't come up with. That was the difference," said Schwartz.

Oak Hill's only big inning came in the first when Mitch Doren reached on an error, Steve Anglin and Kushner both singled and Stiller tripled them all home. Kushner singled in the Cubs' other run in the fourth.

The Murphy Division Series continues tonight when the Warriors and Oak Hill meet at 5:30 p.m. at Newton South. Oak Hill's Steve Chapman (4-0) opposes Auburndale's Jamie Rice (7-1).

Dave Boule struck out 12 and recieved plenty of offense support from his teammates as St.Bernard's routed Post 440, 16-6, at Albemarle Field.

The win gives St. Bernard's a 1-0 edge in their best-of-three series. The second game is tonight at 5:30 p.m. at Cabot Park.

St. Bernard's scored nine runs in the first three innings to take a commanding 9-1 lead. They added one in the fourth and five in the sixth to round out the scoring.

Chris Pachus was the offensive hero of the 15-hit attack, going a perfect 5-for-5 including a three-run homer and an RBI double. Tom Ryan and Mark Romano (two doubles) also had three hits apiece.

Pachus' home run came in the third inning. Jim Nicolazzo started the frame by walking. Dave Boule and Ryan both singled for one run and then Pachus cleared the bases.

National Division playoffs

Fox hurls Sports Shop to final

Don Fox recovered from a weak first inning to pitch a four-hitter while also contributing a key triple as Auburndale Sports Shop ended the Mosca Club's hopes of repeating as Newton National Division champions Thursday with an exciting 5-4 victory at Lincoln Park.

The win gives Sports Shop the three-game series in two straight and eliminates Mosca Club. Auburndale now moves on to the finals against C and K Components, beginning Monday night (8 p.m.) at Albemarle Field. C and K upset Boys' Club in two straight games also.

It didn't seem likely that Fox would be around at the end after giving up four quick runs in the opening frame. But he settled down to allow just two hits the rest of the way while striking out three and walking four. His counterpart, Bill Bracken, had more glowing numbers, surrendering five hits and whiffing 10, but Sports Shop got to him for two runs in the second and three in the sixth to pull out the victory.

Russ Nicoletti began Mosca's big first inning by singling and then moving all the way around to third when he stole second and the catcher fired the ball into centerfield. Fox walked Rob Fast and hit Mark Nicoletti to load the bases.

One run scored when the catcher interfered with Jason Kaufmann' swing; two more came home on Steve Kasten's ringing single. Sports Shop, playing poorly at this time, handed Mosca the fourth run when the throw home on Kasten's hit skipped by.

But Auburndale began getting to Bracken (who enjoyed a sensational sophomore campaign at Newton South last spring) in the second. Steve Vendetti (two hits) singled, Don Fox walked and Roger Carmel reached on a fielder's choice to fill the bases. Two runs scored when Paul Howley's grounder was misplayed.

The winning rally came in the sixth. Dave Arcese tripled to start things off. He quickly scored on a wild pitch by Bracken, and Auburndale tied the game when Vendetti singled and Fox tripled. Fox scored the winning run himself after an overthrow on the same play.

Mosca did have one golden chance to tie the game in the bottom of the sixth when Bracken was hit by a pitch and Paul Aries singled to give them runners at second and third with one out. But Fox got Steve Mosca on a grounder to third for the second out and then saw the game end when Bracken unsuccessfully tried to go home on the play.

The summary:

AUBURNDALE SPORTS SHOP(5)--Keyes 2-0; Goodfellow 2-0; Kelly 3-0; Arcese 3-1; Vendetti 3-2; Fox 2-1; Carmel 3-0; Howley 1-0; Caliguri 2-1; Garabedian 2-0; Totals 23-5.

Connerney pegs 1-hit, 2-0 victory

Bobby Connerney had his no-hit bid spoiled by the first batter of the seventh inning but still held on to toss a one-hitter Thursday to give the Boys' Club a 2-0 shutout over the Totem Pole Braves in the opening game of their three-game International League playoff series at Cabot Park.

Boys' Club, which won the Copp Division this year with a 15-5 record, will meet the fourth-place finisher Braves again tonight at 5:30 p.m. at Del Ryan Field.

Connerney, a 15-year old righthander, actually had a perfect game going until Bill Brownstein broke it up with a clean single to the left-center field gap leading off the seventh. He then retired the last three batters, meaning he faced only 28 men and got 27 out.

Boys' Club broke a scoreless game in the fifth when Colin Ryan singled, advanced to second on an error, and scored after Tony Proia's single. An insurance run came across in the next inning as Mitchell Nash singled with two outs and Tim Greeley tripled down the rightfield line.

TNT took a 1-0 edge in their playoff series by virtue of a thrilling 7-6 victory over Carson Post at Howard Ferguson Field.

TNT won the game in the last of the seventh inning when Jacques Roussea scored on a passed ball. He had reached third by walking and then moving over after singles by Will Hays and Fritz Phillips.

Phillips, who turned 16 Thursday, notched the win despite walking 14 batters. He also was a perfect 4-for-4 at the plate with one run-batted-in and two runs scored.

Sean Gardiner had three hits for Carson Post.

The two teams play again tonight at 5:30 p.m. at Newton Centre.

Red Sox get second chance; vendors aren't quite as lucky

By CHARLIE GREEN
Staff Writer

BOSTON — The major league baseball season re-opened Monday with new hope for teams starting over, but no hope for people who earn their living off the game to make up the money they lost during the strike.

They are the vendors — college students earning tuition, older men picking up a little part-time cash, tavern owners, parking lot attendants and security guards in and around Fenway Park. For them, baseball has lost its luster and not even a second season can recoup the losses they suffered during the 50-day players' strike.

A parking lot owner said he lost as much as $15,000 during the strike. Others, who work during the summer to live during the winter, lost as much as one-half of their annual income.

Some people didn't work at all while the players and owners bickered over the bargaining table.

"This is the first time I worked in three weeks," said George Boykin, an usher at the ballpark.

"I'm just glad to be back at work," said Darryl Johnson, another usher.

Vendors inside the park — some of them working for college tuition — agreed.

"We need the money because we're going to school in a couple weeks," said Jim Berman, who will enter the University of Massachusetts at Amherst this fall. Berman did not work at all during the strike.

"It's too little too late," said vendor Gary Nathenson, a Boston College student. "I spent my time counting the money we're losing."

A souvenir vendor saving money to get married said he is happy the baseball season opened again.

"I'm glad. It puts money in my pocket. There was no work during the strike and us vendors work on commission," said Dan Loizzo of East Boston.

At Copperfields, a bar behind Fenway Park, assistant manager Jack Kearney said the place lost money during the strike — even though it has a regular crowd, baseball or no.

"We lost a lot of money," he said. "There's no way to make it up."

Re-opening day was nothing like Opening Day April 9, even though the Red Sox hosted the same team, the Chicago White Sox, Kearney said.

"This is nothing like Opening Day. It was wall-to-wall people — inside and outside. The place was just packed — just thousands upon thousands of people."

The regulars came into Copperfields during the strike, Kearney said. But it wasn't the same.

"This is a great pickup bar during baseball," Kearney said.

Janice Jones, an attendant at Fenway Park, said she was angry the players walked out in the first place. Jones estimated she lost as much as $900 during the strike.

"I think it was really wrong for the people who depended on the money. I work, my daughter goes to college and that's the only money we get during the summer. I was mad. Our union isn't as strong as theirs (the players')."

Donald Pearson, a parking lot owner, and Earl Shaevitz, a sports souvenir store owner, both are ecstatic that the season has started again.

"I feel great. I make my living here," said Pearson, who estimated he lost $15,000 during the strike.

"How would you feel if you were making money again?" asked Shaevitz, who sells T-shirts, jackets and caps. Business was off 80 percent, he said, and there is only one way to make it up.

"If the Red Sox win the World Series — and you know what kind of chance that is."

St. Bernard's edges Warriors

All season long, the Auburndale Warriors have waited 'till the late innings to put an opponent away. It was a successfull strategy, allowing the Warriors to finish first during the regular season.

But St. Bernard's, which was one of two teams to defeat the Warriors during regular season, turned the tables on the Warriors Monday night by scoring in the seventh inning to capture a 6-5 victory in the first game of the best-of-three Murphy Division title series at West Newton Common.

Dave Boule was the winning pitcher, going seven innings and striking out seven. He also played an instrumental part in the St. Bernard's seventh inning rally. After one batter was out, Boule smacked a double to left field.

St. Bernard's jumped right out of the starting blocks with a run in the top of the first inning. Ryan, who is nine for 12 at the plate in the playoffs, smashed a triple to right field to drive in Boule.

Auburndale responded with two runs in the bottom of the inning. Ed Cohen singled in a run and Dave Buckley doubled in the second run. St. Bernard's tied it in the third on a run-scoring single by Pachus.

The Warriors grabbed the lead Chris Pachus then followed with a line-triple that whistled past the leftfielder to bring in the eventual game-winning run off the Warriors' starter and loser Rob LeConti. It was LeConti's first loss of the season.

The game was not over yet as the Warriors are famous for late-inning comebacks. Nothing materialized, however, with Boule getting a ground out and finishing strong by striking out the last two batters to end the contest.

With the 1-0 series lead, St. Bernard's will be the home team in tonight's encounter at West Newton Common, 5:30 p.m. Tom Ryan, 4-0 on the year, will be hurling for St. Bernard's and Jamie Rice, 7-1, is slated to start for the Warriors.

back in the third inning on another run-scoring double by Buckley. St. Bernard's took a 5-3 lead with three runs in the fifth inning. Mark Romano, Bob Gannon and Pachus all drove in runs in the inning.

Auburndale kept in form by rallying in the bottom of the sixth inning to tie it with a pair of runs. Cohen singled in Ken Healey and Buckley tied the game with his third RBI of the contest, a basehit. Boule shut things down after that to preserve the victory.

Here's how!

U.S. Women's Open golf champion Pat Bradley of Westford instructs Humberto Cardinal Mederios in proper golf technique at Cardinal's residence in Brighton. Bradley was special guest at planning session for first annual Catholic Charities Cardinal's Cup Golf Tournament to be held at Wollaston on Sept. 21.

Newton Central tourney victor, 3-2

Jon Biotti fire a 3-hitter to give Newton Central the victory. He fanned 12 in his overpowering performance, at one point striking out seven batters in a row.

Dave Greenberg singled home the eventual winning run in the third inning. Russ Houston also collected two hits for Newton.

Newton also triumphed last week, defeating Parkway Federal, 4-0, by the one-hit pitching of Peter Burke.

Newton Central advanced to the quarterfinal round of the District 11 and 17 Little League Tournament Monday night with a 3-2 victory over Watertown Central at Praught Field in West Roxbury.

Burke allowed only a single in the fourth inning. Steve Gallier's two-run base hit was the big blow.

Newton plays again Wednesday at Bunker Field in West Roxbury.

Yanks watch Gossage

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees remember only too well what a healthy Rich Gossage means. And while they aren't panicking they are carefully watching his tender shoulder.

"It's something that he gets every spring so we're not that worried," said pitching coach Clyde King Monday night.

Gossage was scheduled to try to throw Tuesday after consulting with team doctors. He missed the All-Star Game with tightness in his right shoulder and has promised no date for his possible return to the Yankee bullpen.

"I just want to protect myself," the right-handed relief ace said.

Mental Health Values

By Marvin Snider

One morning, we awoke to find that our family dog's rear legs were paralyzed. It was heart wrenching to see hime try to move by pulling himself along by his front paws.

Medical attention at the local vet and then at Angel Memorial Hospital quickly determined that our dog, Brutus, had a herniated disc in his back. Emergency surgery was recommended to maximize the chances of his recovery. We were confronted with the decision of having Brutus undergo expensive surgery and an extended hospital stay with no assurance that the operation would be successful. The alternative would be to put him to sleep.

What were we to do? We were forced to put a price tag on what Brutus meant to us. How much was this dog "worth" - he who has been a member of our family for the past six years? How much value do you put on a wagging tail greeting you when you enter the house? How much is it worth to have his warm body nuzzle up to you looking for a pat or a belly rub? It didn't take us very long to realize that we couldn't put a price tag on someone or something we cared about.

This experience with our dog brings a larger question into focus-one we tend not to think enough about. How do we value our human relationships and what "price" are we willing to pay for them?

We regularly make choices about our relationships. It may not always be considered in terms of dollars. Most times the investment is made in terms of energy, caring and time.

A father makes this decision when he decides to be at home with his family instead of working extra hours or playing golf. A mother makes her choice when she decides to work, play tennis or be at home. A child makes the choice in deciding to be with friends rather than spend Sunday afternoon with the family. No value judgement is intended in describing these choices - only to recognize that we make them.

With each choice there are implications-particularly over time. A father and husband who regularly puts work, tennis, or his poker club ahead of time with his wife and children is, through his behavior, saying that family relationships are low in his priority. Eventually, in such cases it should come as no surprise to find that a marriage is in difficulty or that a child is getting into trouble while seeking relationships that are missing at home.

Each member of the family in turn expresses the value of their relationships to other family members in the currency of time, caring, and energy. How much are we willing to go through the struggle to make relationships work? There is no free lunch! We only have to decide how much we are willing to invest to make them work.

Relationships are like plants. If you take care of them, they will flourish and give you much pleasure. If you neglect them' they wither and die and leave you with the pain and frustration of what might have been.

In making these choices intentionally or otherwise we are dealing with an expression of our value system. With what value and priority do we want to invest in relationships? The choice is mine and yours and so are the consequences that go with it.

If you have a question or topic you feel would be of general interest to the public, send it to: Dr. Marvin Snider, The Institute at Newton, 30 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands, MA 02161. Copyright' 1981' Dr. Marvin Snider' Director of The Institute at Newton.

Players to present a comedy fairytale

NEWTON — Lora Chase of Framingham will direct the cast of actors' singers, dancers and musicians when the Vokes Players of Wayland present Mary Rodgers' musical comedy "Once Upon A Mattress." Performances are on Aug. 13-15, 20-22 and 27-29 at Beatrice Herford's Vokes Theatre, Boston Post Road, Route 20' Wayland. All shows begin at 8 p.m.

"Once Upon A Mattress" is a comedy version of the fairytale "The Princess And The Pea." Carol Burnett starred as Winnifred in this broadway musical over twenty years ago. In the story, an overbearing queen' married to a mute king, wants her son, the prince ' to marry a true princess. She puts every potential princess through a series of tasks. The one who survives will marry the prince. Meanwhile, no one in the kingdom can marry before the prince marries.

In the role of the Queen is Gabrielle Swirsky of Sudbury. This is her first time performing at Vokes although she has appeared in other productions with the Sudbury Players. She also received two supporting actress awards from the Sudbury group. In October she will appear at a new dinner theatre at the Grill Restaurant in Northboro as Mrs. Norma Hubley in "Plaza Suite."

R. Michael Wresinski of Hopkinton plays the King. He has performed roles in many community theatre productions including Richard the Lionhearted in "Lion in Winter" at Vokes, Professor Henry Higgins in "My Fair Lady" in Holliston; Oscar in "The Odd Couple" at Will-O-Way Repertory, Starbuck in "The Rainmaker" at the Firehouse Playhouse, among others. He has also directed many productions.

Winnifred is being played by Jenny McGonagle of Wayland. A sophomore majoring in acting at Boston University, she has performed in other Wayland High School productions as well as in the ensemble of "Jesus Christ Superstar" at Vokes.

Scott Ward of Wellesley will perform the role of Dauntless. He has acted in Wellesley Senior High School productions and won a four-year talent scholarship to Illinois State University.

Playing the part of the Knight is James J. Williams of Wayland. His prior acting experience has been in New York and Pennsylvania.

Robin Welch of Framingham plays the role of the Jester. Welch performed in "Diamond Studs" and was Judus in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

Wayne Merrifield of Hopkinton is the Minstrel; Michael Willhoik of Framingham is the Wizard and Thomas Hojnacki of Jamaica Plain is Sir Harry. Merrifield received the Best Actor Award in Hopkinton High School's one-act play competition in 1970. Willhoik's prior theatre experience was in Maryland. Hojnacki, who has performed in many area community theatre groups, won the 1980 Chamber Music Award from the New England Conservatory of Music.

Rounding out the cast are Linda Robison of Hopkinton as Nightingale and Lady Lucille, Sharon Foley of Framingham as Lady Rowena, Brenda Bowker of Maynard as Lady Larken, Malaina Bowker of Maynard as Lady/Kitchen Wench and Valerie Marsh of Framingham as Princess No. 12 and Lady Maybelle.

Director Lora Chase is a familiar name to Vokes' playgoers. She directed "Company" and "Jesus Christ Superstar" and did the musical direction for "Diamond Studs." She has directed over 200 plays for community theatres, college theatre, summer stock and professional companies. Chase also ran her own touring company. She holds a BA in English and Theatre from Emerson College where she taught in the Theatre Department.

Musicians for "Once Upon A Mattress" include Rosalie Robinson of Framingham, piano; Barbara Robinson of Framingham, piano, xylophone and guitar; Lisa Champlin of Hopkinton, flute; and Robert Hamilton of Ashland, percussion.

Backstage crew includes Judi VonDohlen of Waltham' stage manager; Pat Teich of Wayland, props; Sarah Clawson of Wayland, set design; Bob Gibson of Wayland, set construction; Karen Welsh of Framingham' costumes; Mike Hirsh of Sharon, lights; Sheila Watnick of Framingham, publicity; Betty Gibson of Wayland' tickets; and Kippy Goldfarb of Weston, photography.

Tickets for "Once Upon A Mattress" are $3.50 on Thursday and $4.50 on Friday and Saturday. Call Betty Gibson at (617) 358-5231. Seating is on a first come basis.

Gala ceremony marks Col. Tocci's retirement

By Adalino Cabral

BOSTON — It was a gala event. "The Star Spangled Banner," "Stars and Stripes Forever" and other patriotic tunes played on while all stood sternly at the commander's call to attention for recent retirement ceremonies of LTC Theodore C. Tocci.

Retirement, a time which enables a person to reflect upon past accomplishments and envision future progress, was the theme of this event. Lieutenant Colonel Theodore C. Tocci (Ted), an active and long time resident of Newton and the Executive Officer for the 1173d T.T.U. at the Boston Army Base, pridefully accepted the Meritorious Service Medal and numerous other awards and letters from friends and officials of the local, state and federal levels in recognition of his dedicated service through Army Reserve and community participation.

A one time National Guardsman for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Tocci transferred to the Army Reserve to spend the remainder of his military career.

He was operations officer for the 1173d TTU for many years and reached to the position of executive officer-second in command to the unit commander.

Colonel Frank J. Cofsky, the commander of the 1173d TTU remembers distinctly the many and diverse accomplishments of executive officer: "As an individual, Colonel Tocci demonstrated remarkable interpersonal relationships with everyone in the unit and will be missed greatly. As a soldier, officer and gentleman, he has contributed immensely to the unit's mission accomplishment with unflagging dedication' sense of duty and love for the Transportation Corps' the Army Reserve and the Unit which he served.

Graduates will present panel at Continuum

NEWTON—Graduates of the Continuum internship program will present a panel, "Women Changing Lives and Careers," on Wednesday, Aug. 26, at 9:30 a.m.

Opportunities for non-technical women and information about internships as realistic routes for job entry will be discussed. The program is free of charge.

Call 964-3322 or write Continuum, 785 Centre St., Newton 02158.

Highlands outing

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — For over eight years, the staff at Highlands Hardware has been like "one big happy family." Like any big family, they have their annual outings.

This year, owner Tom Thornton took the staff to Hampton Beach' N.H., where he rented the S.S.

Thumper for the store's first annual outing, a fishing trip.

According to John Miller, who along with crewman Jim Inman caught nothing but sunshine all day, Gus Govoni, former owner of the store at 47 Lincoln Street, won the prize for the biggest catch of the day.

Jerry Demco and John MacDonald caught one cod apiece, but Bob Daly went home empty—handed.

Afterwards, the crew went to Rye Beach, N.H., where Tom's wife prepared a feast for the annual outing.

Two more drop out of races

NEWTON — Two potential candidates for local office chose to withdraw their nomination papers last week' dropping the number of preliminary elections from six to four.

Former police union chief Allan Ciccone has withdrawn from the Ward 2 School Committee race' and Theodore Gross has withdrawn from the Ward 6 ward alderman race, leaving two candidates in each race and eliminating the need for a run-off election in September.

In Ward 2 incumbent School Committeewoman Kathy Jones will be challenged in November by Kenneth Hartford of 30 Clarendon St.

Incumbent Ward 6 Ald. Ernest Dietz will face Harold Levinsky in November.

Night for candidates set Sept. 10

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — The Ward 5 Democratic Committee is sponsoring a Candidates' Night on Thursday, Sept. 10' that will be devoted to the preliminary election races for School Committee from Wards 1 and 2 and alderman-at-large from Ward 4.

All three are citywide races.

The Candidates' Night will begin at 8 p.m., after a business meeting of the committee, in the St. Elizabeth's Center on Elliot Street near Mary Immaculate of Lourdes Church.

The public is invited to attend.

JV baseball wins at South

NEWTON CENTRE — The Newton South High School junior varsity baseball team had one of its best seasons ever this year with a record of 14-3-1. U The team won the Dual County League championship.

Players included: Rober Shocker, John Sheridan, Mike Davidson, John Giannenakis, Eddie Murray, Jerry Marcus' Mike Meehan, Brian Lewis, Ben Adler, Tom Albrect, Evan Kushner, Dick Wenning, Scott Royster, Andy Young, John Stephans, Harold Lindsey, Michael Pappas, Adam Rosman.

The coach is Paul Thomas.

Choke saver program on at camps

NEWTON — The Newton Health Department is presenting a special education program on first aid for choking to various groups and staff members of local camps in Newton. The program, Aug. 10-21' is offered to those groups where meals are shared and are a social activity.

Using audio-visual materials Jane Roth, health educator from the department, will teach the different techniques to be used on adults and infants. The program is short, approximately 30 minutes, yet the knowledge acquired is invaluable and may help save a life.

Because most people do not have an occasion to use those skills, the Health Department recommends periodic review-sessions. Members of any organization wishing to present the program to members can contact Ms. Roth at 552-7058.

At $250,000 to $350,000 the new homes at The Gables are an extraordinary value. There are many reasons.
LOCATION—The Gables, on Dedham Street at Murley Lane in Newton directly adjoins the Charles River Country Club. The single family attached homes are clustered in small groups among the trees to take full advantage of the natural beauty of the site.
SPACE—The distinctive two and three bedroom homes are extravagant by contemporary standards. For example, the three bedrpom unit offers 3100 square feet of living space, the smallest two bedroom, 1900 feet—unusual, when you consider that most new two bedroom houses contain less than 1200 square feet.
AMENITIES—Every home has its own attached two-car garage. There are large decks and/or terraces. Each home has a full basement, many with large windows and/or sliders. The private clubhouse looks out on an expansive sunning area, swimming pool and tennis courts. Combined electronic/guardhouse security protects you.
Pre-opening prices will be available only until the furnished models are ready. Astute buyers have already purchased 20 of the 29 currently available units. For complete information visit the sales office on the site—Dedham Street at Murley Lane in Newton. Open 9 to 5 daily, or phone (617) 969-0200.

Obituaries

Dr. Willy Leimgruber

Word has been received of the death of Dr. Willy Leimgruber, director of chemical research and assistant vice president, Hoffman-LaRoche, Nutley, N.J.

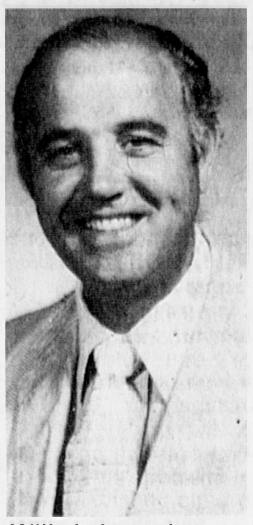

Dr. Leimgruber, 50, collapsed and died of a heart attack July 8, while walking his dog near his home.

Dr. Leimbgruber completed his undergraduate and graduate studies at the ETH in Zurich, and pursued post-doctoral studies at Harvard under the direction of the late Professor Robert B. Woodward.

He then joined the Swiss-based chemical and pharmaceutical firm, Hoffman-LaRoche.

Dr. Leimgruber was a member of the Swiss Society of New York, the American Chemical Society, the New York Academy of Sciences and the U.S. Chess Federation.

He is survived by his wife Mrs. Hope (Heenan) Leimgruber, formerly of Newton Centre; a son, William V. and daughter, Janet H.; and his mother, Clara Kupferschmid and two brothers, Willibald and Bernhard Voelkin, all of Zurich.

Willy Leimgruber

Services were held in Montclair, N.J.

Harvey Peck

Dr. Harvey Peck' 43, of Boston' died suddenly of a heart attack Friday, July 31, at home. He practiced orthodontics in Boston and Newton in partnership with his brother Dr. Sheldon Peck.

He was also a professor of orthodontics at Boston University School of Graduate Dentistry and was on the staff of Beth Israel Hospital.

Born in New York City, he grew up in Durham, N.C., and after graduating as high school valedictorian in Durham, began studies at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, graduating in 1959 as president of Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Peck went to the School of Dentistry of the University of North Carolina, graduating with honors in 1962, and studied in Boston with Dr. Herbert Margolis at the BU School of Graduate Dentistry, earning the M.Sc.D. degree in 1964.

He began practice with Dr. Margolis and was joined by his brother, Dr. Sheldon Peck.

Harvey Peck

The brothers co-authored more than 20 papers on basic and clinical orthodontic studies, and Dr. Peck lectured at universities and meeting throughout the country and abroad.

He was a member of the American Dental Association, the Massachusetts Dental Society, the American Association of Orthodontists, the Edward Angle Society of Orthodontists of which he was president in 1976.

He also belonged to the Explorers Club of New York City, the New Century Club of Boston and the Masonic Order.

Dr. Peck is survived by his mother and stepfather, Sylvia and Mortimer Wiener of Bal Harbour, Fla.; and his brother, also of Boston.

Funeral services were held Monday, Aug. 3, in New York City.

Harry Gray

Funeral services were held Monday, Aug. 10, in Myrtle Baptist Church for Harry E. Gray, 90, of Chicago.

Mr. Gray, formerly of Newton, was a World War I veteran and holder of the Purple Heart.

As a member of Myrtle Baptist Church, Mr. Gray served as Sunday School superintendent for 10 years and church clerk for 15 years. He was a member of the board of trustees also.

Mr. Gray was a charter member of the Unity Club and served as athletic director of the Newton YMCA from 1926-31.

After World War I, he studied printing and worked as a linotypist for the Newton Graphic from 1922-43 and wrote a column for the former Boston Chronicle.

He coached the Myrtle Baptist Church basketball team, and as coach of the Newton Colored Giants, led that team to several championships.

After moving to Chicago, Mr. Gray worked for the U.S. Postal Service, retiring in 1959. He also worked for the Munson Publishing Co. as a printer, retiring in 1977.

Mr. Gray is survived by his wife, Manassa (Perry) Gray; two sons, Arthur E. and Harry E.; a daughter, Dyann C. Pettigrew; two grandchildren' two great-nieces, one great-grandniece and one great-great-grandniece, and a grand-nephew.

He was also the stepfather of the late Elizabeth Fowler.

Burial is in Dell Park Cemetery, Natick.

LEGAL NOTICES

LEGAL NOTICE
NEWTON HEALTH DEPARTMENT
RULES AND REGULATIONS COVERING THE PRACTICE OF MASSAGE OR CONDUCT AN ESTABLISHMENT FOR THE GIVING OF VAPOR, POOL, SHOWER OR OTHER BATHS

The City of Newton Health Department hereby orders that the following regulations be and are hereby adopted this Twenty-ninth day of July, 1981 to be effective on August 15, 1981 under authority of Section 31 of Chapter III and Sections 51 and 53 of Chapter 140 of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

I. LICENSE REQUIRED AND FEE: No person shall practice massage or conduct an establishment for the giving of massage or vapor, pool, shower or other baths for hire or reward or advertise or hold himself out as being engaged in the business of massage, or the giving of said baths, in the City of Newton without receiving a license from the Newton Health Department. The license fee for each establishment shall be fifty ($50.00) dollars and for each masseur or masseuse shall be ten ($10.00) dollars. A license issued to an establishment, masseur, or masseuse is not transferable and shall be issued for a period of time not to exceed one year.

ii. DEFINITIONS: For the purpose of these regulations:

A. Massage shall mean the act or technique of treating the body by rubbing, kneading or the like by manual or mechanical means, to stimulate circulation, increase suppleness, or for the purpose of invigoration, pleasure, or for purported health treatment.

B. Establishment shall mean the room or group of rooms, office, building, place of business, or premises where massage is practiced or where therapeutic or conditioning baths of water, vapor, or other substances are given.

C. Approved shall mean approved by the Newton Health Department.

D. Approved course of massage shall mean a course on the art and science of massage which includes both theory and practice that is approved by the Newton Health Department.

E. Masseur shall mean a male who practices massage.

F. Masseuse shall mean a female who practices massage.

III. EXCEPTIONS AND EXCLUSIONS:

A. Individual: These regulations shall not apply to the following individuals while engaged in the regular performance of the duties of their respective professions:

(1) Physicians, chiropractors, osteopaths, or physical therapists who are duly licensed to practice their respective professions in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

(2) School athletic trainers.

(3) Nurses who are registered under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

(4) Barbers and beauticians who are duly registered under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts except that this exemption shall apply solely to the massaging of the neck, face, scalp and hair of the customer or client for cosmetic or beautifying purposes.

(5) Any person licensed to practice massage by any city or town in the Commonwealth may, at the request of a physician, attend patients in the City of Newton without taking out an additional license.

B. Establishments: These regulations shall not apply to hospitals, nursing homes, convalescent homes, home health agencies or other similarly licensed institutions.

IV. REQUIREMENTS FOR INDIVIDUAL LICENSING: No person shall be licensed to practice massage in the City of Newton unless they meet the following requirements:

A. Submit to the Newton Health Department a completed application form containing all information therein requested. False statements in said application shall be grounds for denial of a licensed request.

B. Provide written evidence that the applicant is eighteen (18) years of age or older.

C. Submit evidence of having completed an approved course of massage or having had at least six months experience under the supervision of a licensed massagist as approved by the Health Department.

D. Submit one front-face photograph at least two (2) inches by two (2) inches in size taken within thirty (30) days prior to the submission of the application.

E. Pass a written examination conducted by the Newton Health Department, testing the applicant's knowledge of the principles and practice of massage.

F. Shall not have been convicted within the past five years of any felony or a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude or have had revoked or suspended within the past three years a license for the practice of massage.

V. REQUIREMENTS FOR LICENSING OF AN ESTABLISHMENT: Every establishment for the giving of massage or vapor, pool, shower or other baths shall meet the following requirements:

A. Applicant must submit to the Newton Health Department a completed application form containing all information therein requested. False statements in said application shall be grounds for denial of a license request.

B. No applicant shall have been convicted within the past five years of any felony or a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude.

C. Every licensee shall notify the Newton Health Department prior to any change of name, address or ownership.

D. No licensed establishment shall operate under any name or designation not specified on the license.

E. No licensed establishment shall be kept open between the hours of 11 P.M. and 7 A.M., unless specifically authorized in writing by the Commissioner of Health.

F. No establishment shall employ or cause to be employed as a practitioner of massage a person who shall have been convicted within the past five years of any felony or a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude or who has had a license for the practice of massage revoked or suspended within the past three years.

G. Every licensee shall permit the Newton Health or Police Departments to inspect his/her place of business at any reasonable time.

H. If food is served, the establishment must be in compliance with Article X of "The State Sanitary Code."

I. No alcoholic beverages shall be permitted in that section of a building licensed for the purpose of giving massage, vapor or other baths as determined by Newton Health Department.

J. No person shall treat or be treated if afflicted with a communicable disease. However, they may treat or be treated when a written statement is received from a physician to the effect that the condition is no longer contagious.

K. The hands of every person practicing massage shall be thoroughly cleansed by washing with soap and hot water immediately before and after treating a patron.

L. No person may operate an x-ray, fluoroscope or other similar equipment unless licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to practice a profession requiring the use of radiation equipment.

M. All individuals employed by the establishment shall maintain a sufficient level of personal cleanliness as determined by the Health Department, and be properly clothed as determined by health and police officials.

N. The establishment shall be connected to the public sewerage system or a private system as approved by the Newton Health Department.

O. All rooms shall be well lighted, well ventilated and properly heated in accordance with local and/or State regulations except during those periods declared as emergencies by local or state officials.

P. There shall be a safe, adequate supply of hot and cold running water at all times.

Q. There shall be separate toilets, handwashing facilities, showers and treatment rooms if the establishment is to be used concurrently by both sexes.

R. All areas of the establishment, including the furniture and equipment therein, shall be kept in a sanitary condition at all times.

S. All robes, sheets towels etc., which may come in direct contact with the body shall be properly cleaned. Single service items are acceptable.

T. No rooms used for conducting the practice of massage or giving of vapor or other baths shall be fitted with doors capable of being locked.

U. No room or section of a building licensed for the purpose of giving massage, vapor or other baths shall be used as a bedroom.

V. The license of the establishment and all massagists must be displayed in a conspicuous place.

VI. DENIAL OF APPLICATION FOR LICENSE OR RENEWAL THEREOF: any person or establishment whose application for a license or license renewal is denied may within ten days of said denial request, in writing, a hearing upon the cause or causes of said denial. The Health Department may set a time and place for said hearing within a reasonable time, not to exceed fourteen days.

VII. SUSPENSION/REVOCATION OF LICENSE: Licenses granted under these regulations, for individuals or establishments, may be suspended or revoked without prior hearing if the licensee is found by the Newton Health Department not to be in compliance with any of the requirements.

A. Hearing: Any person or establishment whose license has been suspended or revoked may within ten days of the suspension or revocation of his license, request, in writing, a hearing upon the cause or causes of said suspension or revocation. The Health Department may set a time and place for said hearing within a reasonable time, not to exceed fourteen days.

VIII. PENALTIES: Whoever violates any provisions of these rules and regulations shall be punished by a fine or not more than one hundred ($100.00) dollars or imprisonment for not more than six (6) months or both in accordance with General Laws, Chapter 140, section 53, as amended.

IX. SEPARABILITY: If any section, subsection, sentence, clause, phrase or portion of these regulations is for any reason held invalid or unconstitutional by any Court of competent jurisdiction, such provisions and such holding shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions thereof.

To all persons interested in the estate of Julia S. Day, late of Newton, in said County, deceased:

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R.Civ.P. Rule 72 that the seventeenth thru twentieth accounts of New England Merchants National Bank and Frederic L. Day as Trustees (the fiduciaries) under the will of said deceased for the benefit of Frederic L. Day and others have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said accounts, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge on or before the twentieth day of August, 1981, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciaries, or to the attorney for the fiduciaries, obtain without cost a copy of said accounts. If you desire to object to any item of said accounts, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciaries pursuant to Mass. R.Civ.P. Rule 5.

Witness, Sheila E. McGovern, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this thirteenth day of July, 1981.

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Service news

Coast Guard Fireman Apprentice Machinery Technician Gary Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Davis of West Newton, recently returned from a training patrol. He is a crew member aboard the Coast Guard Cutter Bibb, homeported in New Bedford.

While enroute to New Bedford from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the Bibb was involved in the rescue of 12 men from their vessel during tropical storm Brett off the North Carolina coast.

Navy Ensign Thomas Dargan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dargan of Newton Corner, was commissioned in his present rank upon completion of Aviation Officer Candidate School.

The 13-week course at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., was designed to prepare candidates for future duities as commissioned officers and prepare them for entry into primary flight training.

GIVE YOUR PHONE BILL TO THE MAILMAN.

Starting August 10, you'll no longer be able to drop off your phone bill payment at the Newton Residence Service Center, 60 Austin St.

Instead, simply put it in the envelope enclosed with your bill and drop it in the mail. Or if you prefer, you can still use any of the locations listed in the front of your telephone book.

'Lifeline' expands radius of service

BRIGHTON — For many older adults, particularly those living alone' the possibility of accident or sudden illness with attendant inability to summon aid has been a constant source of great concern. So much so, that some have elected institutional care rather than run such a risk.

Now' thanks to Lifeline, a unique emergency response system sponsored locally by St. Elizabeth's Hospital of Boston, a number of "at-risk" area residents maintain independence at home.

Lifeline's remote-control communication connects them to St. Elizabeth's Emergency Treatment Center (ETC), providing quick access to health services night and day, whenever an emergency occurs.

St. Elizabeth's is expanding this life-saving program to serve additional frail or homebound elders, handicapped and disabled individuals who reside within a 15-mile radius of the Brighton hospital. The service is available to Route 128 communities, extending to those who live five to seven miles beyond the highway's perimeter.

The subscriber to Lifeline, who pays a monthly rental fee for the service, wears a small, wireless pushbutton mechanism which can be easily activated to signal for help.

The button triggers an automatic telephone call to the hospital where ETC personnel respond instantly. They contact the subscriber to determine his or her condition, or, in the event that the individual cannot be reached, designated "responders," —neighbors, relatives or municipal support services are dispatched.

St. Elizabeth's maintains up-to-date medical information on each subscriber, detailing diagnosis and physician, as well as the list of responders.

According to Marvin Rosenberg, of Newton, director of Social Services, who established the emergency system at St. Elizabeth's with a grant from the St. Elizabeth's Hospital Auxiliary, Lifeline acts as an "insurance policy." It's there when the individual needs it, and is appropriate for short-term or long-term application. For someone recovering from illness' Lifeline lends temporary support; for those with a chronic condition, Lifeline can mean the difference between home or institutional care.

Rosenberg reports that the system has already proven invaluable. The example of one area woman is typical. Prior to signing up for the emergency service, she fell and could not reach assistance. Now, she has a wonderful sense of security, "if anything happens I know I can reach help...if I had Lifeline before, I wouldn't have spent the night on the floor."

In another instance, a son has found an interim solution to monitoring his frail and hard-of-hearing mother. During working hours, he wears a beeper and is immediately contacted by the ETC nurse when his mother signals for help.

All Lifeline candidates are evaluated by hospital personnel to determine whether the service is appropriate. When a unit is installed in the home, client, family and responders are thoroughly schooled in its use. Mary Lyons, the hospital's Lifeline Coordinator, regularly updates emergency information, while confirming that the sytem is properly utilized.

For further information on Lifeline, call the Department of Social Services' 782-7000, ext. 2248.

Red Cross plans swim

NEWTON — The Newton Branch, of the West Suburban Red Cross is currently planning its third annual Swim-A-Cross.

The facilities involved in the Swim-A-Cross program are the Newton YMCA, the Marriott Hotel' Crystal Lake and Gath Pool.

All swimmers involved have taken the effort to recruit local citizen support' who will sponsor them with monetary contributions to the Newton Red Cross for each lap of the designated pool that they swim. Upon completion of the excercise, the swimmers will not only have had a challenging workout' but will also leave with a feeling of accomplishment. The desire to achieve their good deed for the day will have been realized.

The ages of the participants range from 6 to 60. However' all those involved are extending themselves for the purpose of developing their own skills, as well as helping the Red Cross.

The Red Cross Aquatic training programs have been an integral part of the lives of these people for many years, helping to develop and strengthen their swimming capabilities' and introducing them to new aspects of aquatics such as life saving. Now they are taking this opportunity to turn the tables in support of an organization that helped them. For more information, call 527-6000.

WHAT MONEY MARKET FUNDS CAN'T GIVE YOU.

Admittedly, the interest rates offered by money market funds are a little higher and that's fine, we're all for making money. But before you get lured away, take a good look at what the money markets can't give you that a savings bank can.

Where does the money market fund put all your money?
Who cares, as long as the return is satisfactory? Maybe you should. Because a great portion of that money is invested in places and companies that have no effect on you and your family.

As a community savings bank, we make every effort to see that the money in our bank actually helps the people who put it there. It's no accident that hospitals, schools, community development projects and the like are often the recipients of savings bank funds.

And about loans...
It'd never occur to you to visit your local money market fund for a loan to finance your car, home or child's education. That's what banks are for, right? Yes, as far as it goes, but let's face facts.

Savings banks can only continue giving loans as long as they have healthy savings deposits. Invest with us now and the likelihood of a reciprocal investment should the need arise is far better.

What it all boils down to is this: with all your money in our bank, we can continue to help you, your family, and your community.

We're not asking you to stop trying to get the highest return... quite the opposite. We just think that once you look past the interest rates and at the whole picture you'll see that a savings bank is still the best place to keep your money.

Arts Council lists grants

BOSTON — The Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities has announced it will receive a FY82 state allocation of $4 million.

From the allocation, the council will award nearly $2.5 million to 273 cultural organizations statewide through its financial assistance program.

The major funding program drew 344 applications totalling requests of $5.4 million.

In making this year's budget announcement, Council Chairman Vernon Alden said, "In light of the dramatic pressures on federal and state government, we are pleased that the governor and the legislature chose to continue this investment in the council and Massachusetts cultural organizations.

"Because inflation hits cultural institutions particularly hard, the FY82 appropriation is a decrease in real dollars. But we are delighted with the decision to maintain the current level of support."

The Council on the Arts and Humanities is a state agency that offers funding and other services to the state's cultural community.

In addition to its funding programs for non-profit arts groups, it supports programs for artists and exposure activities for the public.

The artist-in-residence program places artists in educational and community settings. To assist outstanding artists living and working in the state, the Massachusetts Artists Fellowship program awards fellowships to individual artists in 12 disciplines.

The Massachusetts Touring Program enables community groups to sponsor professional performing arts groups in their cities or towns to increase audience awareness and development.

Among those receiving State Arts Council funding for FY82 are the following Newton organizations:

All Newton Music School: $1875 to support a series of free musical events and concerts in a variety of community locations.

Jackson Homestead: $2000 to support a program of architectural awareness, "Discover Nonantum," for fifth graders.

MUSE: $3000 to support a concert performance series in nursing homes in eastern Massachusetts.

Newton Arts Center: $6500 to support the "Sunday Series," a multi-disciplinary performance series and a young artists internship program.

Arts in the Parks: $2500 to support the 1981 Arts in the Parks program of visual, musical and theatrical arts.

Newton Symphony Orchestra: $3500 to support the 1981-82 concert series and the string coach scholarship program.

Parents' Choice of Waban: $1200 to support the writing of articles on contempoarary and classical children's literature to be published in the bi-monthly magazine.

Watch the birdie

It's the time of year when baby birds hatch and leave the nest, and people often have questions about their well-being, according to the Audubon Society. It says most baby birds leave during a period of 11-14 days—a time that does not necessarily coincide with their ability to fly well. When people find them sitting on the qround, seemingly abandoned, they need not worry. Audubon says that for two to three weeks' the parents defend and feed the young and it is safe to leave them alone.

Broken window clue to fire

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A painter's helper and a machinist are two of the three suspects arrested for arson and breaking and entering in connection with the estimated $2 million damage to Meadowbrook Junior High as the result of a three-alarm fire Saturday morning.

Police disclosed Monday the occupation of Michael K. Masterson, 19, of West Roxbury, and Eric R. Krasnigor, 19, of Newton. Both men were arrested Saturday morning about a quarter of a mile from the school.

Police said Masterson is employed as a painter's helper and Krasnigor works as a machinist.

The third suspect is Leslie Alberts, 19, of Levbert Road, Newton.

The fire, which was reported to police at 1:20 a.m., resulted in no serious injuries, according to fire officials.

Detective William Fitzsimmons of the Newton Police Department said Monday that the possibility of additional suspects in the case has been ruled out. According to Fitzsimmons, none of the suspects has been previously arrested.

Two of the suspects became acquainted, Fitzsimmons said, while attending a special speech program in Natick. The third attended Meadowbrook Junior High several years ago.

Fire officials said the suspected cause of the fire, arson, is still under investigation, but noted that the fire began in two separate locations of the library wing of the concrete and brick building.

Fitzsimmons said police had determined that a window was broken to gain entrance to the building. He added that there was evidence of a fire being set in a metal wastebasket full of paper on the first floor of the building.

Fitzsimmons said two boxes of wooden stick matches were found at the scene and that the matches were apparently stacked against an art board in a science room and then lit. Bottles of chemicals, including flammable liquids, were also broken in one of the heavily-damaged science rooms of the school. Cardboard boxes of books in the now totally-destroyed library also appear to have been set afire, Fitzsimmons said.

Condo ordinance voted

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A score of renters faced with eviction because of condominium conversions in the city can sleep easier.

The Board of Aldermen this week approved an ordinance regulating condominium conversion by a 16 to 5 vote. The ordinance gives city renters a two-year grace period before they can be removed for a conversion.

The ordinance, which requires developers to obtain a permit from the board before converting rental units to condominiums, also grants tenants with personal "hardships" an additional three-year grace period before they can be removed because of a conversion.

Aldermen also approved a special preamble for the ordinance which declares a "serious public emergency" in the city because of increasing condominium conversions.

The preamble allows the law to become effective in 10 days rather than the normal 30-day wait. Aldermen approved the preamble, which needed a two thirds majority (16) of the 24-member legislative body, by a 19 to 2 vote.

Mayor Theodore Mann has indicated that he will not veto or sign the new ordinance. Under the city charter, if the mayor does not sign an ordinance within 10 days, it automatically becomes law.

Mann, like several aldermen, may feel the ordinance is illegal without the approval of the state legislature.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk has advised aldermen that they do not have the legal authority to pass the ordinance without enabling legislation.

Only cities and towns with rent control currently have the authority to regulate conversions. In the past year, condominium conversion ordinances in Framingham, Acton, and Amherst have been declared illegal by the state Attorney General's Office.

Several aldermen, including Bruce Carmichael and Richard McGrath, called on Mann to sign the ordinance so it can go into effect immediately.

"I want to see the mayor sign this," said Carmichael, "instead of letting it slide by."

"I think the mayor should sign this," said Alderman Mark White, a mayoral candidate. "This is one of the few times we can directly help people."

As the meeting came to a close, aldermen also approved a motion requesting that the new ordinance be sent to the state legislature for approval.

About 100 renters, many facing eviction if the ordinance was not given the go ahead, applauded the approval of the ordinance which was stalled twice during the last

Arson suspects plead innocent

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON— Innocent pleas were entered Monday as the two men and one woman suspected of setting fire Friday night to Meadowbrook Junior High School were arraigned in Newton District Court.

The three 19-year-olds, Eric R. Krasnigor, of 90 Clearwater Road, Newton, Michael K. Masterson, of 209 Park Street, West Roxbury, and Leslie Alberts, of 96 Levbert Road, Newton, appeared before Judge Monte D. Basbas. The cases will be heard Wednesday, Sept. 23 at 10 a.m. in Newton District Court.

The three are charged with arson and breaking and entering in the night in connection with the fire.

Bail was set at $1000 with surety or $100 cash. A payment of $100 cash was made for all three defendants.

Originally, district attorney Neal Hagerstrom requested that bail be set at $5000 each for both Krasnigor and Masterson; $1000 for Alberts, because, Hagerstrom said, "of the serious nature of the crime." Damage has been estimated at $2 million. "This is a very serious arson case'" he argued.

However, defense attorneys argued that $5000 and $1000 was too high, considering the defendants have no prior records, and that there is no cause to believe that they would not appear in court for the trial. All three of the suspects were accompanied by their families.

Attorney Richard Steinburg, who along with David Mofenson, is representing Krasnigor, said that Krasnigor will be entering college in Connecticut in the fall, is in good standing with the community, and has no prior record. Steinburg further commented that the incident "was not a conspiracy" and that "the public is not in danger."

Defense attorneys also argued that Masterson, who is in a special needs program at the Hall School, is also in good standing with the community, having no prior record. Masterson, he further said, is one of seven children who has responsibilities in his family.

Judge Basbas agreed that,"You can't allow preventive detention bail," and set the bail at $100 cash, as requested by the defesnse attorneys.

Massage ordinance in effect

NEWTON — The Health Department has established new detailed regulations for health clubs and businesses offering massages in Newton.

The new regulations, which went into effect Saturday, require clubs offering massages, steam baths and pool baths to be licensed by the Health Department and apparently are designed to prevent sexual solicitation.

City Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal said the regulations will "upgrade the quality" of massage parlors or health clubs that want to open in Newton.

Joyal denied the impetus for the new regulations was complaints about any of the four now existing in Newton.

Joyal said she has not received any complaints from residents about massage parlors in the past.

A review of the city's previous restrictions, along with guidelines from other cities and towns' shows that Newton's regulations governing massage parlors were inadequate, Joyal asserted.

The new ordinance requires all people giving massages in Newton to pass a written examination, including essay questions on the "principles and practice of massage."

In addition, the regulations require all employees of massage parlors to "maintain a sufficient level of cleanliness" and be "properly clothed" as determined by health and police officials.

The ordinance also prevents:

—Using rooms with doors capable of being locked.

—Operating from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. without written authorization from the health commissioner.

—Hiring any employee to provide massages who has been convicted within the past five years of any "felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude."

—Treating a customer who is afflicted with a communicable disease.

Under the new regulations, alcoholic beverages are not permitted in the room or section of the building where the massages are given and police or health officials can inspect the premises at "any reasonable time."

Furthermore, the regulations require stringent standards for the licensing of individual masseurs. Before being licensed, they must have completed a course in massage or had six months experience under the supervision of a licensed masseur.

The $50 license needed can be suspended or revoked by the

Elvis lives in Newton tribute

By Alison apRoberts
Correspondent

NEWTON — While thousands remembered Elvis Presley across the country yesterday on the anniversary of his death, more than 200 area residents watched their own local Elvis at Hawthorn Park.

For the third annual Elvis Day, Michael Pellegrini performed a look-alike, sing-alike and gyrate-alike Elvis show.

Pellegrini arrived at 1:30 p.m. in a rented black Fleetwood Cadillac limousine as the crowd stood and cheered. His black cape and bell-bottom outfit sparkled with gold and mother-of-pearl studs as he strode to the podium.

Pellegrini's sister, Donna, and cousin, Carol Ciretti, dressed in gold jumpsuits, crooned backup vocals to tapes of the superstar's hits, from "Hound Dog" to "My Way," with Pellegrini for about two hours.

Twenty nine-year-old Pellegrini, who lives in Watertown and works for BFI Waste Systems, was every bit the star with his Elvis-style mutton chop sideburns and ducktail hairdo. He threw out the 35 scarves he brought along for souvenirs to the kids who crowded around the stage and tirelessly signed "Elvis" autographs. With his legs spread in a straddling stance, he even imitated the Elvis gyrations which were a major controversy for the star.

"I don't do no dirty body movements. When I sing I just start a-jumping," Elvis Presley once said when asked about his rocking and rolling on stage.

For many at the park, Aug. 16, 1977, the day the 42 year-old star was found dead at his Graceland Mansion home in Memphis, was a day of mourning. Eighty-year-old Frances Schichilone, remembered crying when she heard the news of his death.

"We're a family of Elvis fans—all nine kids and 28 grandchildren," Schichilone's daughter, Mary Pirozzi said.

For 14-year-old Sam Davis, the memorial program introduced him to Elvis' music. He proudly displayed the scarf he wrestled to get and thoughtfully said "CC Rider" is his favorite Elvis song.

"I just like being a fan. He's so good," Davis said.

Staffed by volunteers, the program included a raffle for an eight- record set of the star's music and the sale of silkscreened Elvis t-shirts. Joanne Pellegrini, who works for the recreation commission but organized the memorial program independently, said the money raised during the day would be used to cover costs. Any money left over will go to help pay for a new park wall mural commemorating Arthur Fiedler.

The memorial program started with another mural project thought up by neighborhood kids in 1977, after Elvis died. Eighteen-year-old Paul DiBona of Adams Street wrote a letter, which he said about 25 kids signed, to the park commissioner suggesting an Elvis mural.

Marcy Richmond Ward 8 alderman

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Marcy Richmond, 28, of 155 Christina St., Newton Highlands, has declared her candidacy for Ward 8 alderman. A lifelong resident of Newton' Richmond has acquired governmental experience at the federal, state and local levels.

"I am running for ward alderman because I want to put my ability and experience to work for

Marcy Richmond

Newton city government," said Richmond. "I am determined to challenge the prevailing pessimism brought on by Proposition 2 ½ and the general fiscal climate. As a lifetime resident of Newton I appreciate the features which make this city a fine place to live and raise a family. Today, it is not a question of nore government or less government, it is a question of improving the government we have. I want to bring legal skills, years of experience with the legislative imagination' process and my commitment to Newton to the Board of Aldermen."

Ms. Richmond is a graduate of Suffolk Law School and a member of the Massachusetts Bar. She graduated cum laude from Harvard College. She attended Newton South High School where she was a recipient of the Senior Cup Award. She completed Beth El Atereth Israel Hebrew School.

Marcy Richmond has served as legislative assistant to Congressman Michael J. Harrington in both Washington, D.C. and Salem.

She was an administrative aide in the Elections and Public Information Divisions of the Secretary of State's office during Paul Guzzi's tenure.

Richmond has served as a voluntary prosecutor in the Middlesex County District Attorney's office. She currently works as an attorney for the Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs reviewing, evaluating and developing contracts with home care, nutrition and housing providers across the Commonwealth.

"I want to use my skills in reconciling groups with different viewpoints, in forging innovative solutions to difficult issues which confronts us and in establishing a climate of thoughtful and rigorous review of city government" Richmond observed.

"Whether initiating and organizing the first two Newton Walks for Hunger which raised more than $50,000 or helping to elect Barney Frank to Congress just last year, I have dedicated myself wholeheartedly to the pursuit of my goals. I want to reprent the people of Ward 8 and of all of Newton in the struggle with growing fiscal challenges and to assure the quality of Newton for this and future generations," she said.

"I intend to meet personally with every voter in Ward 8 in the next few months, listening to their concerns and ideas. At a time when the tide is running strongly against government leadership, I have the ability to help define a new and constructive role."

Burglary, car theft on rise in Newton

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — According to crime statistics comparing the six-month period ending in June with the same period last year' both burglary and motor vehicle theft are up in the Garden City.

However, down by more than 11 percent was larceny' which includes thefts from cars, shoplifting and similar thefts which the FBI defines as without force, fraud or violence. Also down was armed robbery from 13 incidents during the period from January to June' 1980' to 11 incidents through June of this year.

Aggravated assault or assault with a weapon was down from 37 reports to 29 reports during the recent six-month period.

But the good news according to Newton Police Department officials, is that compared with a 103 percent overall increase from 1971-1979 in crime nationwide, Newton experienced a three percent decline.

This comparison, based upon the most recent crime statistics compiled by the FBI from all cities and towns willing to submit reports on a monthly basis, includes the eight FBI serious crime categories of criminal homocide, forcible rape, armed robbery, aggravated assault, burglary (breaking and entering), larceny, arson and motor vehicle theft.

Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn said reports of break-ins and other thefts have "really been scattered throughout the city."

Despite the 14 percent increase in break-ins and nine percent increase in car theft, Chief Quinn says Newton is "holding its own."

"But," Chief Quinn warned, "we must be very vigilant because burglary is still the number one crime in suburbia."

Most of the break-ins occur during the day, according to Quinn, and "a good percentage" are drug-related. Quinn said that some of the perpetrators are local people' but added, "My guess at the moment is there are more outsiders than locals responsible."

"When we get burglaries concentrated in a particular area," Quinn continued, " we try to interest them in Operation Identification and the Neighborhood Watch Program."

Quinn said the two programs have been extremely effective in cutting back on thefts in Newton.

Noting that four suspects were apprehended in homes during the past two weeks after neighbors called police, Quinn spoke of the value of the Neighborhood Watch program, "People saw things' were suspicious and called us."

He related a recent incident where neighbors saw a shadow moving alongside a house in the West Newton Hill area and called the police. Quinn said two suspects were arrested inside the house as a result of the neighbor's actions.

New car stickers to seniors

NEWTON — Howard J. Lipton, Director of the Department of Human Services, reminds eligible senior citizens that new 'yellow' parking stickers are available. Possession of a sticker allows senior citizens to park without charge in metered municipal parking lots in the city of Newton.

For persons now using the green and white stickers, Mr. Kipton advises that these stickers officially expired June 30, 1981; seniors can still use the green and white stickers until September 1, 1981. A yellow sticker will be required after that date.

The new stickers cost $1 and will expire on June 30, 1982. People are urged to bring exact change with them when purchasing a sticker.

Participation in the program is dependent on the following regulations:

Applicants must present themselves during weekday working hours (excluding the noon hour) at either the Dept. of Human Services at Newton City Hall; the Newtonville Drop-in Center, at the Newtonville Library, 345 Walnut St.; The Newton Highlands Drop-in Center at the Parish of St. Paul, 1135 Walnut St.; or the Newton Corner Drop-in Center at the Lincoln Eliot School, 191 Pearl St. An applicant must be 65 years of age or older and a resident of Newton.

Applicants must have a valid Massachusetts license listing his or her Newton address.

Applicants must have a Massachusetts automobile registration which listed address corresponds with that on the license.

Stickers are issued for automobiles, not individuals; and not for any other kind of motor vehicle. Thus, if a family has one car and two drivers' only one sticker will be issued. However, a family with two cars may request two stickers.

If there are questions, telephone the Department of Human Services at 552-7170.

Backman initiates nuclear petition

BOSTON — State Senator Jack H. Backman (D. Brookline-Newton) has endorsed an initiative petition which would require voter approval before new nuclear power plants or waste disposal sites could be constructed in Massachusetts.

The proposal also requires the legislature to certify that any proposed facility should be operated in a safe, economical manner.

Members of the Massachusetts Nuclear Referendum Campaign will be gathering signatures to put the question on the fall 1982 ballot.

Speaking at a state house news conference with the petition sponsors, Sen. Backman issued the following statement:

"For years thoughtful senators and representatives concerned about the risks of nuclear power have filed bills to address issues such as nuclear waste disposal' low-level radiation, and decommissioning costs for power plants. Unfortunately the legislature has failed to give these proposals the serious attention they deserve. And Governor King has simply ignored the issue.

"Since the governor and legislature refuse to take control of the commonwealth's energy destiny, the people must act. The proposal to require voter approval and legislative certification before new nuclear power or waste disposal facilities can be constructed is a responsible mechanism for public input into energy policy. In the coming years, we must make major decisions about the best ways to deal with the soaring price of energy from convention sources. It is only appropriate that the general public have the final say on issues of this magnitude.

"Support of this ballot question is the best available mechanism to assure a safe and sane energy future for the commonwealth. I am proud to endorse the 1982 Massachusetts Nuclear Initiative."

Alderman declares support for White

NEWTON — Ald. Bruce Carmichael announced this week that he is supporting Ald. Mark White for mayor.

"During my years on the board," Carmichael explained, " Ald. White has consistently led the aldermen in the direction of what the residents need, and he has not given in to special interests or wilted under pressure from the mayor."

"When White has won, the taxpayers benefitted," Carmichael said.

Carmichael is a first-term member of the Board of Aldermen. He serves on the Finance Committee, representing Ward 1.

At $250,000 to $350,000 the new homes at The Gables are an extraordinary value. There are many reasons.
LOCATION—The Gables, on Dedham Street at Murley Lane in Newton, directly adjoins the Charles River Country Club. The single family attached homes are clustered in small groups among the trees to take full advantage of the natural beauty of the site.
SPACE—The distinctive two and three bedroom homes are extravagant by contemporary standards. For example, the three bedroom unit offers 3100 square feet of living space; the smallest two bedroom, 1900 feet—unusual, when you consider that most new two bedroom houses contain less than 1200 square feet.
AMENITIES—Every home has its own attached two-car garage. There are large decks and/or terraces. Each home has a full basement, many with large windows and/or sliders. The private clubhouse looks out on an expansive sunning area, swimming pool and tennis courts. Combined electronic/guardhouse security protects you.
Pre-opening prices will be available only until the furnished models are ready. Astute buyers have already purchased 20 of the 29 currently available units. Newton Corner tenants vow to fight office building alternative

Sandra L. Rotberg
Correspondent

Newton Corner — The fight is not over for the tenants of the Newton Corner Gorin and Leeder buildings versus Ronald Druker.

Although the outcome of last Monday's vote was welcomed by the tenants, Druker's alternative of office buildings was not.

"If we get eviction notices, we will fight," said resident Karen Hawes. "We are still hoping for Druker to compromise with us. Druker has come off as though he were pro-community, yet he has never compromised on any major issue, the major issue being to renovate the existing buildings. Months ago we (the tenants) asked Druker directly if he would collaborate with us and he said no. I feel Druker is like a small child who rather than share a toy would destroy it."

Most of the tenants felt the vote was a step forward. "I felt gratified," said tenant Katy Lehman.

Karen Hawes said, "We were all thrilled. I felt as if the democratic process works. Not just for the tenants, but for all of Newton Corner. We feel we have a chance to do it right."

Bobby Comeau of Bobby's Fruits said "The outcome of the vote is encouraging, but there are still things to worry about. Newton has been good to me and my customers are regulars. I would not want to move out of Newton. There are improvements I would like to make, but I cannot see investing the money if a steel ball is going to go through my window within six months."

Benjamin Barnett of Barnett Fabrics said, "We were pleased as much as we were able to prevent the wrong type of building. I have made no attempts to look elsewhere as I have been serving the community for 35 years and wish to stay here. I don't understand why everyone is trying to cram everything into Newton Corner.

"We can sandblast the buildings and clean them up. All over Boston they are re-doing buildings, why not here? We can do it in taste," Barnett continued. "The city of Newton has not taken an interest in Newton Corner for a long time. Now they want to step in out of nowhere."

"We have plenty of commercial mall developments all around us. The stores (in the malls) are repetitious and not individually owned. The stores (in Newton Corner) that service this area are unique in the fact that they are a service to the community and not chain operated stores that go by a computer. The whole idea maintains the old idea of shopping in a village."

None of the tenants believe they will not be gone within six months. Resident Linda Finucane said, "There is a certain amount of trauma living here. My children want to continue on in the school they're in. I may find something in the mail tomorrow."

"We are willing to compromise," says Hawes. The two buildings across the street are not as structurally sound and not as many tenants live there. The tenants that do live there can be made room for here and Druker could compromise by allowing those buildings to be his project. We could then keep our existing buildings for the low-income housing.

Resident Sue Stowbridge said, "If we allow another Gateway Center, Newton Corner would be setting a precedence for high-rise."

Mann laments Druker plan defeat as loss of needed rental housing

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann said Tuesday that the city has lost an "urgent" opportunity to provide badly needed rental housing with the defeat of the Druker proposal to revitalize Newton Corner.

Aldermen rejected the $38 million comprehensive plan, which included 301 units of housing (including subsidized family and elderly units), retail and office space in five new buildings, Monday night.

Mann, who disagreed with the decision by aldermen, said he was hoping that the Druker company's proposal was going to provide elderly and other city residents the opportunity "to live in Newton with a reasonable rent structure."

Mann called the shortage of rental housing one of the major problems facing the city. A recent report by the city's Human Rights Commission pointed out that condominium conversions since 1975 have created a "severe shortage" of rental units in the city.

Under federal budget cuts being implemented by President Ronald Reagan, Mann emphasized that the prospect for subsidized housing in the near future appears grim.

"The big loss is our need for rental housing," Mann said in an interview at his City Hall office. "We have less than one percent of our housing stock available for rental housing."

Mann, who had worked to obtain federal funding for the development, said he was disappointed by the aldermen's decision to reject the project. Mann will meet with Ronald Druker, president of the Boston development firm, later in the week. Mann is expected to discuss Druker's announced plans to construct two four-story office buildings at the Washington and Centre Street block.

Under zoning laws, the Druker company, which has an option to purchase the land, can construct the two office buildings without the approval of aldermen. Under the office building proposal, the Gorin and Leeder building, along with two other four-story buildings, across the street on Nonantum Place, will be razed.

"This is the gateway to the Garden City," Mann explained. "This should be the focal point of beauty for the city."

Mann also strongly criticized the owners of the Gorin and Leeder building for allowing the facade of the "Corner" to deteriorate.

"If Gorin and Leeder fixed up those properties and maintained those properties, we wouldn't be looking at the Druker plan right now," he said.

Mann promised to work with commercial and residential tenants of the building, who face eviction, in the coming months. About 125 tenants of the Gorin and Leeder building, along with a score of retailers, will be left in the streets when construction of the two office buildings begins in six months.

Alderman Mark White, a mayoral candidate, was one of 11 aldermen who felt the project would have overshadowed and destroyed the Newton Corner community.

White said the project was "simply too big" for the area. He called his vote on the sensitive issue the "most important" in his eight years as an aldermen.

Before the vote on the plan Monday night, White said: "What we are being asked to do now is make up for a lack of commitment to public housing for eight years...There is a point where you just cannot say - housing at any cost. There is a point where you must draw the line."

Ronald Druker, president of the development firm, said that his company will begin construction in six months and complete the project 18 months later.

Rejection of Druker plan may give developers cold feet

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Planning Department Director Barry Canner warns that the rejection of the $38 million Druker proposal to revitalize Newton Corner may have a "chilling effect" on future development in the city.

Aldermen voted down the project, which would have provided 301 units of housing, retail, commercial and business space at the Washington and Centre Street block, last Monday night. As a result, the company will build two four-story office buildings on the site.

Canner said there is a good chance that the rejection of the Druker proposal could have a "ripple effect" and stifle development. "We have no evidence of it now," he noted, "but I can sense it."

"The developers in the area were watching this project very closely," said Canner. "If a developer has the option of going somewhere else and making a little less profit, he might be willing to do it."

The Planning Department had recommended that aldermen approve the development. The veteran planning director stressed that the plan would have provided sorely needed rental housing for Newton.

"I am mostly concerned about the lack of housing and provision for housing," Canner said.

Canner also pointed out that Gorin and Leeder tenants will suffer because of the plan's defeat.

Under the $38 million revitalization plan, Druker would have been required to provide relocation asistance to the tenants as well as offer many of the residents an opportunity to return to the new complex. Under the office building proposal, Druker has no obligation to relocate tenants.

Editorial

Drug use dip is not enough

It would be unrealistic to do a lot of cheering over a reported "significant decrease" in drug use among several key population groups, particularly teenagers. If there is a decline hereabouts, the shift is slight.

Area school, police and hospital staff people who are closest to the situation say the presence of drugs can't be minimized.

The past school year saw the pervasive odor of marijuana, sweet and redolent of burning leaves, as prevalent as ever. Worse still, cocaine came into the picture as an even more serious threat. What begins as an experiment can become a daily habit. Students obviously affected had to be sent home, with some suspensions. Maintaining classroom and corridor discipline could be difficult.

So, if national researchers are telling the Senate Labor Subcommittee on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse of decreased incidence, it has to be measured against what information is close at hand even though any change in direction is encouraging.

The end of the trail for those who get hooked often is a hospital outpatient unit. A majority of young people who wind up there as accident victims have used marijuana or alcohol, sometimes both, attendants will tell you. For those lucky enough to avoid a hospital experience, the penalties can be poor performance academically and a bad start in life.

On the statistical side, the findings of a survey of 100,000 high school seniors showed a drop in daily marijuana use from a peak of 10.9 percent in 1978 to 9.1 in 1980. Still a frightening number.

An educational process, aimed at health concerns, was said to be producing results in cigarette smoking. The cutback to 21 percent was regarded as "dramatic" by the director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, which was reporting to the senators.

Need for a more intensified program of information on drugs would seem to be elemental. The tendency to dismiss marijuana as harmless, even to the extent of legalization, has given it a certain amount of acceptance, regrettably.

Smoking pot has been the "in" thing for so long one would expect peer influence to diminish its attraction to youth groups. The fact is that the proportion of high school seniors said to disapprove has grown from 66 to 72 percent in a half dozen years, so it would seem to be working that way.

But a serious crackdown on points of origin and major distribution of marijuana, or cocaine, for that matter, has to take place. Parents of students tell us it is common knowledge that buying drugs is an easy thing to do in junior or high school.

An antisocial problem may not be getting worse. But it isn't getting much better. Attacking it on every possible front is a must.

My Turn

Puppies and children

By Sarah Clayton

You should know that I am a sucker for puppies and children, not necessarily in that order. When I see the two together, my impulse for adoption (kidnapping?) is strong.

So, when I saw a five-year-old boy holding a squirming, but affectionate (a wet lick to the boy's face every chance he got! golden retriever puppy on his lap, I could not resist the opportunity to talk with the boy, and, of course' pet the puppy.

But, shortly after I began asking him the basic questions one asks a five-year-old, I sensed that something was "not right" with this boy.

Not that anything was obviously wrong' but that he was not responding to my questions like a normal pert five-year-old gloating over his new puppy. His was a problem that not only cut short our rather one-sided conversation, but also left me feeling sad and sorry for him as I walked away.

I'm not sure what was wrong with the boy. He could have been partially deaf. But, my response to the situation, a response many other people experience when they encounter a handicapped person, reminds me that it takes more than puppy and children lovers like myself to deal with retarded or autistic children or children with emotional problems.

An extreme example of the demands of being a primary caretaker of such children was shared with me by a woman in her twenties who is working in a facility which treats emotionally disturbed children.

For more than eight hours each day, she acts as a parent to these teenagers, some of whom have never really had any form of love from their own families.

Some of the cases she has told me about are difficult for me to fathom. At times it is the children that are hard to believe as they try to slit their wrists or cause harm to other people. At other times it is their parents who are the most disturbing.

Many of the children she works with were committed by a judge following psychiatric evaluation. The actions which prompted the judge's determination include setting fire to buildings and homes, assaultiveness and drug abuse.

Other kids which she works with are suffering from depression or have a problem with self-abuse or running away from home. Several of the children she treats experienced sexual abuse in their home setting.

If working daily with these kinds of teenagers doesn't seem glamorous, my friend will tell you that you're right. However' she plans on staying in the field of working with these types of handicapped children.

"It's very tough work. It's not always rewarding," she says with a sigh which shows the emotional strains of her working environment. "But' you always hope that something you do will change the kid just a little bit."

"It can be rewarding in a very 'for the moment' way," she continues. "All of the sudden, a kid will have a brilliant insight into something and it's wonderful seeing the kid develop and mature."

Unfortunately, the parents of many of these children do little to contribute to hope for the child's progress.

Examples of the cruelty of some parents are deeply disturbing. Imagine a mother telling her already emotionally weak 15-year-old daughter that she had decided that she did not want her anymore.

My friend adds that many of the parents of her emotionally disturbed kids treat their children like "yo-yos."

"They won't hear from their parents for three or four months," she says with disgust, "and then they tell the kid they want him to come visit. Then, afterwards, the kid doesn't hear from them again for five or six months."

Remember, these are emotionally disturbed children.

There is currently an interesting case in the California courts involving an adolescent boy with Down's Syndrome, who, like many children with the same handicap, has a heart defect which makes life beyond thirty unlikely (Doctors say he has a 50 percent chance of surviving beyond age 30.!.

From the time he was born, the boy has been in state institutions, with his parents contributing money from time to time. While the boy grew older' his parents went on with their lives and raised two healthy, normal children.

When it was determined that the youth needed a heart operation to repair a hole in an interior wall, his legal parents refused to permit the operation. They were taken to court and the judge ruled in favor of their arguments.

The legal parents argued that the operation was too risky and that the boy might die. On the other hand, they stressed, he might survive the operation and a life not really worth living would be prolonged.

Something else bothering the boy's legal parents was that if he lived longer, their two normal children might be saddled with the responsibility of caring for him.

People who have worked with the boy over the years point out that his parents have only visited him twice a year, on his birthday and at Christmas. The television update on this case did not say if the boy's siblings had ever visited him.

Meanwhile, a couple with normal children of their own have sort of adopted the boy over the years and brought him into their home setting. They feel that he is a wonderful influence on their own two boys and that his spen ng time with them each week has strengthened the family.

This woman also feels that far from living a life not worth living, the boy is maturing and developing each day of the year.

This couple sought to overturn the decision in favor of the legal parents and recently won custody of the child. They were then able to give permission for the operation.

The boy's "real" parents are appealing the case, not so much over the question of custody' but over the operation.

It is the contrast between the parents and the couple who adopted the boy and the contrast between my friend's efforts with her kids and the actions of some of their parents which moved me to write about these children with handicaps.

I may never be able to fully accept the behavior and problems of emotionally disturbed or retarded people, like my friend and the couple who adopted the boy. But, there is a lot of room in between for me to work toward.

Scoring low with high tech

By Loring Swaim, state columnist

With all Massachusetts' vaunted built-in, home-grown expertise in high technology, its state government has yet to take advantage of computers as management tools.

"Chaos in the state EDP systems..." charges the Senate Ways and Means Committee. "...a vacuum where leadership is needed.

"The system is overwhelmed...crippled...poorly managed," the committee claims in its tough-talking budget commentary. "Centralized planning and control of data processing are absent from state government. (The latter) has never articulated even the outlines of a state data processing plan. (It) has designed a process whose most salient feature is its slowness."

"Major systems are not meeting user or management needs," echoes the Governor's Management Task Force. Since 1975, private sector specialists have helped the task force track the state's EDP record and made recommendations. "For the most part," worries the task force, "their advice has not been acted on."

State Auditor John Finnegan's staff has now joined the chorus. In an audit released two weeks ago, he raises some disturbing questions about whether certain of the $100 million spent annuually on computer equipment and services might have been misguided or influenced by subjective factors difficult to identify.

One would think that with familiar native names like Digital Equipment, Control Data, and Wang Laboratories to draw on, to say nothing of the plethora of software people available in the state, Massachusetts government could do better than just stumble along.

It was while Francis Sargent was acting governor in the late '60s that the Commonwealth took its first hesitant steps with computers. Sargent commissioned studies and chose the welfare department as the data processing guinea pig. Programs were introduced, some progress was made but welfare still struggles with its complicated problems.

Gov. Dukakis' administration tried "facilities management," i.e., farming out to consultants matters like computer policy and performing certain EDP assignments. This produced action; it also produces headaches. Conflicts of interest allegations reared their ugly heads. Several plans backfired. Stung by political fall-out, Dukakis pulled in his horns and found himself — against the advice of his Management Task Force — opting for a local firm to handle a multi-million-dollar Medicaid Management Information System. It turned out the firm couldn't perform on schedule and had to be dumped by Gov. King.

The state's primary computer service center, the Bureau of Systems Operations, is under the Office of Management Information Systems in the Executive Office of Administration and Finance. To run this sprawling system, Gov. King recommended $15 million in his fiscal 1982 budget. Leery, the legislature chopped this to a barebones $11 million until it sees better results.

The Legislature lacks confidence in the administration's ability to get its computer act together. Accordingly, the House and Senate budgeted only minimum maintenance sums for the coming year, "deferring all but essential growth...until (the state) is in a position to provide some overall direction to systems expansion."

Fare was too high

Commentary by William Poole

BOSTON (UPI) — The woman stood outside the East Boston entrance to the Sumner Tunnel with two young boys, about 7 and 8 years old. She wanted to take the bus to Haymarket Square, less than two miles away.

"How much does it cost?" she asked the driver of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority bus, which had stopped before entering the tunnel on a run from Marblehead to Boston.

"Two dollars," he said. "One dollar for you and 50 cents each for the boys."

The woman shrugged, walked away and didn't take the bus. The fare was too high.

Nobody knows how many scenes like this have occurred since the MBTA raised its fares this month. They must be legion.

The deficit-ridden mass transit system needs help. There's no question about that. But for daily commuters the latest fare hikes make the MBTA look like it has gone from total confusion to utter chaos.

Take, for example, that Marblehead-to-Boston run. Under the MBTA's new zonal fare system the trip from that affluent North Shore community to Boston now costs $1.50 one way. Maybe that's not too high. It's a matter of opinion.

But the one-way fare from downtown Lynn to Boston, covering a much shorter distance as part of that same run from Marblehead, is also $1.50. Before the latest hike in fares it used to be 65 cents. The new fare represents a 231 percent increase for Lynn-to-Boston commuters.

Fares have skyrocketed since the 1950s when commuters could ride for 10 cents on the subway and take nickel inner city bus trips.

Service was faster and better then. But those were the days when traffic was a lot lighter, with fewer cars on the highways within the 79 cities and towns that are now members of the MBTA district.

If people stop taking the "T" to work because of cost and inconvenience, those roads would become even more congested than they are now.

Imagine how many private cars it would take to transport the MBTA's 250,000 daily commuters to and from Boston and you get some idea of the burden the mass transit system has assumed.

Then think about how many new highways, bridges and tunnels would be needed to help get workers back and forth from their Boston area jobs.

"There's a basic problem," said MBTA Advisory Board executive director Philip Shapiro in an interview last week. "Public transportation just isn't a priority in the (Gov. Edward J.) King administration."

Shapiro said "a lot of the 'T's problems are attitude problems. If the governor doesn't care, it filters down to the system's managers and its employees."

That could mean less concern by the MBTA about service and maintenance of equipment. And, in the long run, it could mean highways even more crowded than they are now with private vehicles and fewer commuters who are willing to travel back and forth to work in Boston from their suburban communities.

Opinions

Creation

To the Editor:

I hope you'll share with your readers excerpts from a letter I've sent to Isaac Asimov, famous Boston University science writer and atheist, author of 232 books, and former resident of Newton.

Dear Dr. Asimov: A believer in evolution and God' I object to your painting all believers in divine creation with the same Fundamentalist brush. One would think, from your writings, that the creationists who teach in Harvard Divinity School' Yale Divinity School, and other such institutions, are mortal enemies of general and evolutionary science right along with the Fundamentalist Creationists who hold to literal interpretation of Genesis.

It seems obvious that Fundamentalist Creationism is now being set up as a "straw man," easily torn apart, for use by anti-religious bigots to attack theism of every kind, including the modern theism which accepts evolution.

A Unitarian Universalist Christian (Charles Darwin was a Unitarian!), I reject Fundamentalist Creationism, but I was a Unitarian!), I reject Fundamentalist Creationism, but I question the easy assumption that our universe is infinitely old.

As you realize' most astronomers now hold that, having exploded outward from a single point no more than about 20 billion years ago at the "Big Bang," our universe will expand forever. That the "Big Bang" was sudden and absolute creation by God is a reasonable view for scientifically informed religious progressives who accept, as I do, the idea that God does not intervene in unfolding, on-going evolutionary processes originally enfolded in our universe at Creation. (At the same time' I agree only the latest in an endless succession, each finally (after, say, 100 billion years), expanding cold, diffused and dead in the depths of infinity, passing utterly from existence. (Rev. 21:1).)

You seem unaware that, in implying that you "speak for science" in holding that belief in God is mere ignorance, (you conflict) with the fact that many scientists of far greater achievement in scientific thought than yourself have publicly affirmed belief in God, from Newton to many modern scientists of stature, who never withdrew his famous statement, "God including Einstein' does not play dice with the universe."

Atheism and theism, Dr. Asimov, have been known options for many centuries, which raises interesting questions concerning your contention that holding to belief in God is simply an indication of ignorance and backwardness.

In all these areas of life with which our encyclopedias deal' the majority of the great, progressive minds (mentioned in these volumes) have chosen, not your view, but belief in God! Why do you suppose this is so?

Fund allocations

To the Editor:

It is of course the privilege of all of us, former aldermen included, to join committees in support of our favorite candidates.

However, if we are to make statements explaining our position, let's stick to the facts and not mislead one another.

An example of blatant disregard for reality was found last week in one such statement regarding the allocation of Community Development Funds (federal) to human services.

Actually, the author of the statement knows better, being somewhat familiar with the prescribed requirements of pertinent federal regulations, the numerous and well publicized series of public hearings held to ascertain community needs, preferences, and the allocations.

It is generally recognized that the planning and hearing process is completely open and indicative of a genuine effort to promote the public good in the face of pressing priorities and limited funds.

Those who attended the exhaustive series of public hearings and studied the facts presented are better qualified to evaluate the entire allocation process. Had the former alderman attended those hearings she would join with others in commending the various volunteer boards, and the city's administration' for the successfull fulfillment of the program's objectives.

We do participate

To the Editor:

Every once in a while, a Newton citizen, anguished over some local issue, sprinkles a letter to the editor with an expression like: "Newton Taxpayers' Association—where are you?" or "what are you people doing for us?"

As part of the answer, I am inclined to recall some advice given by the late Ambassador Morrow to his intelligent daughter' which I paraphrase: There are many more people attempting to take credit than there are doing credit-worthy things—be the kind that does credit-worthy things.

Over the years, including this one, we have at times initiated positions and at other times supported or opposed positions initiated by others in the hope of making a favorable difference in the outcome.

Now the challenge to all readers is to tell us how you think Newton's city government should now be improved with respect to economy and efficiency.

The unknown scholarships available

To the Editor:

One of the best secrets kept from high school students is the availability of scholarships worth approximately $30,000. These scholarships are available in large numbers and will pay all four years of college tuition costs plus providing an additional $100 per month subsistence allowance.

It may be difficult to believe, but it is true that many qualified high school students never learn about these scholarships.

They never learn about them because of the bias many high school administrators have against the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) Scholarship Program. This bias is possibly due to the emotional reaction many people experienced during the era of the U.S. Vietnam involvement and which remains with some of them even today.

It is not germane to this article to justify or condemn the reasoning which has generated the actions of certain principals and guidance counselors in this coverup but rather to enlighten students, parents and School Committee members about the scholarship opportunities which do exist in this area.

Although ROTC scholarships will provide most of the costs necessary to obtain a good education, they are not without some strings. The students, male or female, who accept these scholarships must be prepared to serve on active duty, as officers, with the service of their choice (the Army, Navy, Air Force or the Marines) for four years after they have completed their college program.

In general, an application for an NROTC (Navy) or Marine Corps scholarship must be completed by Dec. 1 of the year prior to starting the first fall semester in college.

Thus' for students planning to start college in September 1982, applications must be completed and postmarked on or prior to December 1. It is most important that the process start in the senior year of high school so a good date to call the local recruiting office would be in September or October.

Applicants are required to take either the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT) in order to be considered. Complete details can be obtained from the local military recruiting office but some points of interest are detailed below:

These scholarship programs are also available to college freshmen for their remaining three years and to sophomores for their remaining two years in college. In each case the NROTC Scholarship Program provides tuition, books, uniforms and $100 per month.

In all of the programs, four, three or two years, the students go on summer training cruises and receive Midshipmen pay during that period.

In certain areas of the country colleges having NROTC Units have crosstown enrollment agreements with other area colleges. For example, in the Boston area students at Harvard, Boston University, and Wellesley can attend NROTC at MIT. Tufts may soon join the program.

In Worcester, students at WPI, Clark University, Anna Maria College, Assumption and several junior colleges can attend NROTC at Holy Cross.

Currently' there are 1500 NROTC scholarships available countrywide for September 1982. The other services probably have equivalent amounts except for the Marine Corps, which is a smaller service.

Fifty-five colleges and universities currently offer Naval ROTC. These include Auburn, UCLA, Citadel, Colorado, Cornell, Duke, Florida, Georgia Tech, Holy Cross, Kansas, Maine Maritime Academy, Marquette, MIT, Miami, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Northwestern, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Oregon State, Penn, Penn State, Purdue, RPI, Rice, Rochester, USC, N.Y. Maritime, Tulane, Utah, Vanderbilt, Villanova, Virginia, VMI, Washington (Seattle), Wisconsin and others.

For the 1982 program' minimum college board scores to qualify as a finalist are:

Navy - SAT' verbal 430 and Math 520 or ACT, English 18 and Math 24.

Marine Corps - SAT, composite 1,000 or ACT, Math plus English, 45.

Generally the higher you score, the better your chances will be to win a scholarship.

More NROTC information can be obtained in the Boston area by calling 223-6216.

In conclusion, let me state that if you believe in the volunteer concept instead of a draft, then it is an absolute necessity that the high schools provide information about the options available so that our military services can meet their personnel goals without the need for an involuntary draft. In a democracy, the information should be made available to all and the choice should be left to them.

A photographer looks back over the years

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON - He picks up a Red Sox cap, secures it over his wavy, ashen colored hair with a slight tug of the brim and laughs, "The Red Sox...they gave me a lifetime pass."

The navy blue and red cap is only one of the momentos David Wurzel has from his 41 years as a New England photographer. Most of the memories are intangible; news photos that have helped shape history on the pages of "dailies" nationwide.

His mind is a picture book, rich with photographs from the past four decades. During those years, his deadline decisions as United Press International New England bureau chief meant he chose the photos of the seven-state area that the whole world would see.

Wurzel, 65, seems content a few weeks into retirement but something about the man tells you otherwise. A "beeper" clipped on his right hip and a modest darkroom in the basement of his home quickly reminds a visitor of the photographer's past.

Wurzel has come a long way, as has photography, from the days of his first camera - a 4x5 speed graphic which he received when he was 18-years-old.

New York born, Wurzel moved to Massachusetts in 1946 and settled in Newton in 1950 with his wife Emily. Celebrating their 35th year of marriage, the couple has two sons, Stephen, 33, and Robert, 31.

Just before he was discharged from a seven-year service stint in 1946, he was hired by Robert Dorman, executive editor of ACME News Pictures, to head a Boston picture bureau. He remained as bureau chief, later for UPI which took over ACME, until his retirement at the end of June.

In the early years at ACME, Wurzel was "a one man-band," "covering everything from kidnappings to baseball."

An anecdote comes to mind. "We use to cover the baseball games at Fenway Park on the field but because of me, we were moved off the field," he laughs.

As Wurzel tells it, he was situated on the third base side of the diamond at a Red Sox-Yankee contest when he moved toward the dugout to adjust his camera. As he walked down the dugout steps, he heard some shouting and immediately sprang back up the steps to be hit in the stomach by a errant throw.

The ball rebounded on to the field and the Yankees threw Dom DiMaggio out at second. But because Wurzel's foot was not on the top rung of the dugout stairs, he was technically not on the playing field and DiMaggio was ruled safe.

The play had no effect on the game's outcome as the Yankees won but as Wurzel notes: "It caused such a rubarb that Joe Cronin called all the photographers off the field and from that time on we worked upstairs in the cages."

In his own words, Wurzel "doesn't sit around vegetating," now that the daily rigor of picture editing at UPI has been handed down to his successor Donald Robinson.

He'll poke criticism at some of the day's photos at the breakfast table; tend to his backyard garden; and do some advertising photography during the course of a day -yet something seems to be missing.

Despite being busy, one senses the man yearns for activity -the hussle-bussle of meeting deadlines, of scooping the competition. Competition; he always liked competition.

"You always want to beat someone," says a pensive Wurzel. "There is nothing more gratifying than to see your picture on the front page of a newspaper."

Wurzel, who owns a dialogue of amusing anecdotes, reminds himself of an incident involving Nellie Fox, a former third baseman of the Chicago White Sox.

It was during a rain delay at Fenway during the early fifties when Wurzel was challenged by the visiting Chisox to a tabacco spitting contest.

"They would spit out tobacco juice and see how close they could come to your feet," recalls Wurzel. Taking the cue from Fox, Wurzel stuffed a pack of tobacco in his mouth and hit the third-sacker right on the toe with the juice.

"Where did you learn to chew tobacco?" asked a surprised Fox as he prepared to spit out his juice. Fox, undaunted, won sending the juice just to the front of Wurzel's foot.

Wurzel won the battle of intimidation and with it the ballplayer's respect.

To earn Wurzel's respect in the newsroom, he "expected to have the photos for UPI that counted."

"The most important thing is that you take every assignment as a general alarm fire," he adds. "The day you forget it, it will show. You lose that, you lose everything."

"The photo is suppose to come out and grab you," continues Wurzel, a very straight forward type of editor according to Robinson. "It must be strong enough to hold your attention."

Wurzel makes note of the Pulitzer Prize picture of a naked young girl running from the burning rubble of a Vietnamese village. "It says 10,000 words," he proclaims.

A graduate of James Monroe High School in New York, Wurzel spent one year at New York University before his start with ACME News Pictures in New York in 1933.

The first "important thing" Wurzel was allowed to cover was the Hindenberg disaster in Lakehurst, New Jersey. He admittedly got there a "little late," but was there to photo "them shoveling the ashes into trucks."

"Everything I did on the job was trial and error," recalls Wurzel. "If you asked questions, they (other staff photographers) would say forget it. They would tell you to get out."

"There were some real tough eggs. They never showed you one darn thing about the camera," he continues.

Since the rather harsh initiation, Wurzel has spent all his years covering wars, floods, storms, sensational criminal trials, political campaigns and sporting events. Yet as he is quick to note, as bureau chief of New England, most of his time was spent editing in the dark room.

"We use to kid him (Wurzel) that he did one or two photos a year," says Robinson. "It's very hard when you get in this position (editor). You just don't have the time."

Now Wurzel has the time, but after chatting with him, one leaves with the impression that he longs to get back to the action. "You're covering a thing called news," he reminds his guest. "News...the happening of the world."

White appeals ambulance decision

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

BOSTON — Alderman Mark White has appealed the recent court decision allowing a private firm to take over the city emergency ambulance service.

White, whose attorney filed the suit in Middlesex Superior Court, said he is determined to make a last ditch effort to bring back the Fire Department operated emergency service.

Chaulk Ambulance, a private firm based in Framingham, took over the service on Aug. 3 after Middlesex Court Judge Paul Connolly dismissed a complaint brought by 12 Newton aldermen. The Fire Department had provided the service for the last four years.

Connolly ruled that Mann acted within his power by contracting with a private firm to take over the ambulance service. White, a mayoral candidate, has led a three month campaign to keep the Fire Department service.

Richard Goren, White's attorney, will request that the state Supreme Judicial Court review the decision on the case within 20 days.

White explained: "Nothing I have seen within the last several weeks (from Chaulk) has changed my mind. I think the city is better off with an in-house ambulance service."

White and other aldermen have argued that the Chaulk takeover is public safety risk. However, Police Chief William Quinn, who is in charge of the service, has reported no problems with Chaulk.

Quinn has put two police officers in the Chaulk ambulances around the clock for the last two weeks to assure that Chaulk employees are familiar with city streets.

Mayor Theodore Mann, who made the decision to eliminate the Fire Department service to save taxpayers a "minimum of $320,000," has contended that Chaulk will provide a service "superior or equal" to the Fire Department.

Under the Chaulk service, the city has been provided with three new ambulances to cover the city (the Fire Department only had two ambulances to serve the city).

Mann, who claims the court battle with aldermen has cost the city more than $100,000, has repeatedly criticized White for bringing the suit.

White said he feels the powers of the state statute which aldermen employed to challenge Mann's decision not to fund the Fire Department service must be defined by the state's high court. On June 1, aldermen voted to force the mayor, who had ignored repeated requests from the board, to fund the city operated service by a two thirds majority vote.

The statute, designed as a check on mayoral power, allows aldermen in some cases to force a mayor to fund a service that has been eliminated from the budget.

City Solcitor Daniel Funk, however, has maintained that Mann was acting within his powers by contracting with a private firm. Funk also contends that aldermen can not employ the statute after they have passed the state budget.

In making the bid to bring back the Fire Department service, White said: "If I get elected, the first thing I will do is terminate the contract with Chaulk."

Under the three-year contract with Chaulk, the city can pull out after the first year of service with 30 days notice. Chaulk, however can not terminate the contract.

Pets

By Marvin Snider

Why do pets play such an important place in our culture? It is a common occurrence for a household with children to go through a series of pets—turtles, gold fish, frogs, gerbils, birds and/or cats and dogs' as a child becomes increasingly aware of the larger world around him.

With the onset of starting school, he also becomes aware of his relationship to other people around him particularly parents, teachers, and other adults.

The emerging child also sees the model of adults caring for others, particularly children. He also becomes aware of the difference between relating to living things and those that are inanimate.

It becomes a new, exciting and expansive feeling to relate to another living thing over which he has control. Turtles and goldfish are early examples of this. They move and respond to care given by a child. A sense of satisfaction derives from being able to do what adults do with a feeling and sense of increasing conpetence.

Gerbile and birds are a further step in a child's development. There is greater interaction and response to a child's efforts. Gerbils provide greater opportunity for physical contact with an aninal. They also gain a sense of responsibility and confidence in caring for these pets.

Cats and especially dogs provide a closer approximation to human experience. Dogs in particular are very yet place no demands on responsive' give affection and security' a child. A dog becomes a great antidote for loneliness, boredom and adult world that becomes too demanding.

Few things compete with the warm feelings when greeted by a dog who is happy to see you as evidenced by licks and the enthusiasm of a wagging tail. Great comfort is also gained by the presence of a warm body lying next to a child, especially when the child is tired and lonely.

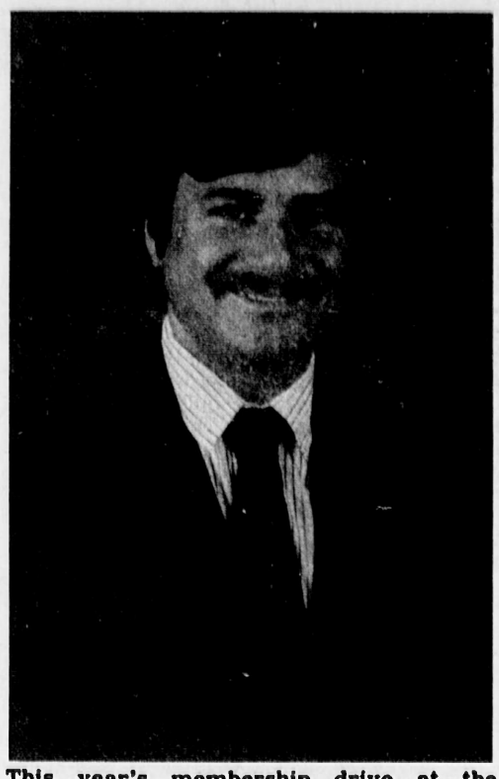

The joys that come from having a pet' particularly a dog, are not limited to children. Adults respond to pets for many of the same reasons.

Life circumstances provide additional interest in pets. The trials, stress and disappointments in human relationships can be expressed in what may feel less complicated relationships with a pet. In other situations pets at least in part help fill the companionship void left by unfulfilled relationships such as marriages that failed' death of loved ones' and difficulty in relating to other people.

Pets also can play an important part in an adult's life even when human relationships are satisfying. Many people experience a loyality and companionship that adds another dimension to their lives. There is also the regard which comes from being able to train a dog to perform to expectations. This is in contrast to the frustration that an adult experiences when their best efforts in raising children are contradicted by various other influences.

We all need to be cared about, to feel important and competent. Many of life's frustrations can be assuaged by having a pet. It is important that the benefit of having a pet does not distract you from gaining and maintaining competence in human relationships.

If you have a question or topic you feel would be of general interest send it to: Dr. Marvin Snider, The Institute 30 Lincoln Street, Newton, Ma 02161. Copyright, 1981 by Dr. Marvin Snider, Director of The Institute at Newton, Newton Highlands.

Chief offers safety tips

NEWTON — Chief William F. Quinn of the Newton Police Department issued his annual advisory regarding summer safety.

"With warm weather here and the school children on summer vacation, particular safety problems are presented to motorists," stated the Chief. "More bicyclists are on the road, particularly young children, and also more joggers and roller skater are seen during the warmer months." The Chief advised parents to check closely on their youngster's bicycle riding habits, reminding them to observe common sense in their riding and also to check their youngster's bikes for reflectors and other equipment that will make them more visible to motorists. This is essential as more youngsters are riding at dusk or after dark' during these summer months.

"Joggers and roller skaters are also reminded to be more alert during the evening hours and also to wear reflective clothing so they will be more visible'" added the Chief.

Chief Quinn feels that Newton has two fine swimming areas in Gath Pool and Crystal Lake, but that the rules and requlations of these particular areas must be followed in order to prevent seridus accidents.

The Chief listed several precautions that should be taken regardless of the swimming area.

Use the "Buddy System," and avoid swimming alone.

Swimming after drinking can lead to fatal consequences.

Avoid swimming immediately after eating.

Avoid swimming in unsupervised areas and especially avoid swimming after dark.

Avoid horseplay in the water as this can lead to injury or worse.

"Summertime should be an enjoyable season and can be kept that way, by following the simple safety procedures previously mentioned," concluded the Chief.

two weeks by parliamentary ploys initiated by Alderman Joseph DePasquale.

The victory for the tenants, however, could be shortlived. The new ordinance faces an inevitable court challenge.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan and Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton), who sponsored the ordinance, said they were confident that the law could stand up to a court test.

"I expect a law suit," Sheehan admitted. "It is my opinion that this is within the police powers of a community."

Cohen said he is "optimistic" that the bill will be upheld the courts.

Despite the inevitable prospect of a court challenge on several fronts, renters that packed the City Hall chamber were all smiles after the vote by aldermen.

"I feel great," said Suzanne Strickland, who was ordered to vacate her 37 - 39 Commonwealth Avenue apartment by Aug. 31. "I don't have to move. I'm ecstatic."

Strickland said that the coalition of more than 200 tenants that has formed to lobby for the ordinance will now press for a state law restricting condominium conversion.

Eileen Simon, who also has an apartment at the Commonwealth Avenue site, agreed. "This is a wonderful thing," she said. "I only moved in five months ago."

State Senator Jack Backman, who is representing tenants fighting the condominium conversion of the Chestnut Hill Gardens, a twin high rise 422-unit complex at 250 Hammond Pond Parkway, called the ordinance a victory for tenants throughout the city.

"I think it is a good ordinance, a legal ordinance and it is one that is required," asserted Backman.

The ordinance requires tenants be provided relocation assistance and the first offer to purchase the rental unit. In addition, landlords are prohibited from sharp increases in rent to drive renters out of an apartment.

Developers or property owners violating the ordinance face a fine of up to $300.

Aldermen voting for the ordinance were: Lisle Baker, Rodney Barker, Wendell Bauckman, Paul Coletti, Cynthia Creem, Ernie Dietz, Robert Gaynor, Elaine Gentile, Robert Katz, Richard McGrath, James Miller, Terry Morris, Susan Schur, Carol Ann Shea, Ethel Sheehan, and Mark White.

Aldermen voting against the ordinance were: Donald Budge, Bruce Carmichael, Joseph DePasquale, Robert Tenant, and Matthew Jefferson. (Tenant, Carmichael and Jefferson, however, voted for the emergency preamble for the ordinance)

Absent were: Paul Daley, Edward Richmond, Dominic Taglienti.

WEST NEWTON—The case of an exchange student from Israel, who was charged with trepassing and disorderly conduct, has been continued without a fine.

Eshagh Natoneli, who lives with a Newton family, appeared before Judge Monte D. Basbas on Monday in Newton District C ourt and pleaded innocent to the charges.

Natoneli tried to remove his car from a Chestn ut Hill site where the vehicle had been towed after police found the car parked on 926 Boylston Street at 11:00p.m. on Aug. 12. The car was not insured.

The defendant tried to remove the car without paying the towing charge, though the owner of the shop told Natoneli that he had to pay the charge before he could remove the vehicle.

Natoneli's attorney argued that the defendant did not understand that he had to pay a towing fee. In addition, Natoneli was angry about some damage that had been done to the car.

Judge Basbas told the defendant that under Chapter 383 of the acts of 1978 and General Law, Chapter 278, Section 29-D, the defendant could be deported and refused a visa if he were convicted of a crime. However, Judge Basbas continued the case and the defendant was told to pay court expenses of $200.

Out on bail

WEST NEWTON—The case of Brian Sobernock,21, of Newton, has been continued until Friday, Sept. 25 at 9:00 a.m., a trial before a jury in Newton District Court.

Sobernock is charged with breaking and entering in the daytime of a Newton residence. Sobernock, who was previously held on $25,000 bail, is now out of custody after the Superior Court reduced the bail to $5000 cash, which Sobernock paid.

Sobernock requested the continuance until September when the attorney he has chosen, June Scipione, returns from unrelated business.

Elvis

The commissioner approved of the project and CETA artist Mary Troyan of Auburndale designed the mural. It shows a bright cameo of Elvis in a white suit. On the sides are lists of his hits and a cadillac–the car Elvis collected.

In the summer of 1978 the mural was finished and Joanne Pellegrini thought up the memorial program. On the first Elvis Day in 1979, Michael Pellegrini, the nephew of Joanne Pellegrini and son of Anthony Pellegrini, chairman of the Nonantum Christmas Party Association, first impersonated Elvis.

Since then, Pellegrini's performances have become more elaborate and practiced. Last year, he had a cadillac entrance, but the back-up singers are new this year.

"I just sort of grew up with the guy," Pellegrini said. "I most admire the impact he had on people and the way he sacrificed his life for his family and all the people."

Pellegrini said he has recordings of all of Elvis' music.

The young performer's mother, Camille Pellegrini, said his devotion to Elvis started when he was about four years old. He heard lots of Elvis music at home, since his mother was a fan.

"I loved him since I first heard this music by a truckdriver on the radio," Camille Pellegrini said. It was while working as a truck driver that Elvis cut his first commercial recording of "That's All Right, Mama" and "Blue Moon of Kentucky" in 1954 in Memphis.

By the end of 1956, with his appearance on the Ed Sullivan Show and his first one-million seller, "Heartbreak Hotel," Elvis Aron Presley, who was born in 1935 in Tupelo, Mississipi the son of a factory worker, didn't have to drive trucks to earn a living anymore.

The man who brought a mixture of "hillbilly" and black dance music to national audiences never lost his love of peanut butter sandwiches, flashy duds and cars, or his public appeal during his career.

In fact, his appeal lives on, strengthened for old fans and brought to new fans by devotees like Michael Pellegrini.

"Sometimes I feel he's not dead when I hear his music," 35-year-old Robert Roman said.

Pellegrini, who does the performances for free, finds keeping the memory of Elvis alive enough reward.

"I keep the king going if I can so these little kids know who he is," Pellegrini explained.

Health Department without a hearing, and people violating the regulations face up to six months in prison and a $100 fine.

Police Chief William Quinn favors banning massage parlors from Newton.

"They are trouble where ever they have been," he said.

He also said there have been no arrests at any of the four existing parlors within the past year, but qualified the statement by adding' "Massage parlors tend to attract undesirable characters."

He noted they are almost impossible to control without the use of undercover officers' a practice of the past three years.

Get high on yourself

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's well established that television can sell soap by the metric ton, but can it unsell drugs in a culture in which some experts claim half the kids are steady users?

NBC intends to find out, and if the noble experiment slated for the week of Sept. 20 fails, it won't be for lack of trying on the part of Hollywood producer Robert Evans and Cathy Lee Crosby of "That's Incredible."

During that week, NBC will saturate prime time programing with a campaign titled "Get High on Yourself" — a celebrity studded drive to break pro-drug peer pressure by providing an alternative with more that 50 "drug-free heroes ... to spread a new spirit."

It all began last year when Evans, producer of such feature classics as "Love Story," "Chinatown," "The Godfather" and "Urban Cowboy" found himself before a federal judge in New York on charges of cocaine possession. The judge gave him probation, but asked that as a condition he use his talents to "look for a breakthrough" in the battle against drug abuse by children.

Evans became obsessed with the assignment, joined forces with Miss Crosby who long has been concerned with the problem, and together they produced a one-hour special on the subject.

They took it to all three networks and CBS and ABC both agreed to schedule it, but NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff was so taken by the project that he upped the ante.

He agreed not only to do the special, which will air at 8 p.m., EDT, Sept. 20, but also to lead every prime time show — news, sports and feature — with a public service spot on the subject.

Certainly the spot, which NBC unveiled for affiliates and the press Wednesday night, is power-packed. Had the roof fallen in when Evans was shooting it in Los Angeles on May 4, Hollywood, the television industry and the world of professional sports all would have been crippled for life.

The top stars of all three arenas were there — Bob Hope, Paul Newman, Carol Burnett, John Davidson, Leif Garrett, Andy Gibb, Cheryl Ladd, John Davidson, Henry Winkler, Muhammad Ali, Tracy Austin, Magic Johnson, Ron Guidry, Dorothy Hamill and a score or so more.

They joined a cross section of youngsters — led by an 8-year-old blonde cherub named Jennifer Copenhaver who will be a star hereafter — in the singing of one of the most pervasive jingles in the litany of Madison Avenue.

Written by Steve Karman, who penned "I Love New York," it throws a challenge to kids Miss Crosby said use drugs because peer pressure is so intense "they have no choice if they want to be cool."

In the week following the special, NBC will steep its audiences in the tune which proclaims, "You can be somebody with a plan of your own ... You can say no and you won't be alone ... You can make yourself get higher than you ever have known ... Doin' things your own way ... Settin' up your own style ... Bein' yourself."

Rabbi appointed temple educator

Temple Israel of Boston announces the appointment of Rabbit David A Katz as temple educator, to succeed Lillian A. Beauvais who is retiring this summer.

David Katz

He assumed his new post August 1.

Rabbi Katz brings a varied background' both educationally and professionally, to the job. Prior to his rabbinic ordination in New York this spring, he earned a master's degree in Hebrew education at Hebrew Union College Institute of Religion in Los Angeles in 1979 and a master's degree in Hebrew Letters in 1978.

He also holds a master's degree in theatre from Northwestern University where he did his undergraduate work.

For the past year' Rabbi Katz has been a contributing editor of Compass Magazine and has been a rabbinic intern in New York. His work there has included participating in the national curriculum project for reform schools, and editing educational books and journals for all ages.

He has worked at Temple Emanu-El of Queens, N.Y., Temple Sinai in Reno, Nev., and Temple Stephen S. Wise in Los Angeles. He performed all rabbinic functions.

Under a grant from the Jewish Federation-Council of Greater Los Angeles' Rabbi Katz, interning at the Bureau of Jewish Education in Los Angeles, was trained as an educational consultant. During his time there, he created and directed "The Jewish Family Theatre," an acting company which performed original shows on topics of Jewish concern for parents and children.

Temple Israel's new temple educator, who has also worked professionally in television and the theatre, has been drama director in a variety of Jewish camp settings, where he has created summer drama programs utilizing his background in mimi and improvisation.

Children should be immunized

BOSTON — Children should be immunized against many contagious diseases before they return to school this fall.

According to Howard Spivak, M.D., clinical director of the Comprehensive Child Health Program at the Children's Hospital Medical Center, most highly contagious diseases — diptheria, measles, mumps, poliomyelitis, rubella, and whooping cough — are not familiar to school children today. Vaccines that prevent these deadly diseases have made epidemics obsolete.

According to Dr. Spivak, however, many people now believe that the threat of these diseases is remote, and have become "complacent about immunizations."

It is estimated that one out of every three preschoolers has not had the recommended immunizations, and 65 percent of children under age 14 are not protected.

In an effort to raise the immunization level of the nation's children, all 50 states now require that parents present proof of certain immunizations before a child may begin school. Dr. Spivak says that every child entering kindergarten should receive the following vaccines: five doses of "DPT" which protects against diptheria, pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus; four doses of "OPV," the oral polio vaccine; and the "MMR" shot, a single injection for measles' mumps, and rubella (German measles).

While tougher laws may help to raise immunization levels, increased parental understanding of immunizations is also necessary. Many illnesses can be contracted only once during a lifetime. After recovery, a person's body has produced a permanent defense against the organism causing that particular illness. Immunization artificially triggers this body response so that a person may become imnune without actually suffering the disease.

Reactions to vaccines vary, but may include mild fever, headache, and redness or soreness at the site of injection. All such reactions are temporary, and are minor compared to the damage that may be caused if one of the diseases is contracted.

Dr. Spivak recommends that parents keep accurate immunization records for their children. "Since we live in such a mobile society," he says, "families may move several times while their children are growing up. Even if they remain in the same area, they may change pediatricians. If medical records are not forwarded to each new pediatrician, immunization records kept by parents can prevent unnecessary vaccines."

Maintaining accurate immunization records for each child is only one responsibility of parents. They should also try to prepare their children psychologically for any shots they may be scheduled to receive. While the diseases they are being protected against are unfamiliar to most children, the fear of a needle that may cause a few moments of pain is immediate and real. "By telling children in advance what is scheduled," says Dr. Spivak, "anxiety caused by the fear of the unknown can be reduced."

With increased parental understanding of the importance of immunization, more of the nation's children will be returning to school this fall fully protected from many serious, but preventable, childhood diseases.

Newton physician James Bassett is honored at the annual house officers' dinner at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. He has completed his first year of surgical training there. Samuel Gargano, director of the Department of Medicine, congratulates him.

Nurses to offer therapy service

NEWTON — Stroke patients and those recovering from surgery will benefit from the expanded physical therapy services available from the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Visiting Nurse Association, 1589 Beacon St., Waban.

According to Mrs. Carolyn Glenn, R.N., executive director, the local home health care agency has doubled its staff of physical therapists. There are now four such therapists serving patients in the three communities.

"Patient progress is often related to adhering to a schedule of exercises," says Mrs. Glenn. "Our physical therapists also teach the patients the exercises and feel that this is the most important part of their program. They also teach patients how to walk again and climb stairs after surgery for a fracture or joint replacement.

Arthritic persons are taught to climb stairs and other activities using methods to improve function, while those with respiratory problems benefit from chest physical therapy.

Along with an extensive physical therapy program' the Visiting Nurse Association offers speech therapy. "Helping a stroke victim with impaired speech learn new ways to communicate is a key to help that person regain health'" states Mrs. Glenn. The therapist teaches patients ways to gesture and use a communication board.

Although most people think of occupational therapy in terms of assisting a person's return to a job, Mrs. Glenn points out that this type of therapy has quite a different focus. "We teach people how to function adequately and take care of themselves. People who are able to be independent recover much faster."

Occupational therapy may involve teaching patients how to cook again or how to shave and dress themselves. Stroke victims are shown how to use "long-handled reachers" to pick up objects from the floor. "With the right assistance, people do not need to be helpless," adds Mrs. Glenn. There are also elastic shoe laces and long-handles shoe horns. "These may seem rather basic, but they can make a major difference in people's lives," Mrs. Glenn adds. Special splinting is used to help a person regain use of a hand after a stroke.

In addition to the four physical therapists, the agency has both a speech and an occupational therapist available.

Working closely with a patient's physician, the nurses and therapists of the association schedule patient visits from 8 a.m. through 9 p.m. "We also have 24-hour coverage for special patient needs," Mrs. Glenn concluded.

Italian home gets grant

JAMAICA PLAIN — The Italian Home for Children has received a one-time grant of $20,000 from the Committee of the Permanent Charity Fund of Boston. The grant will be used towards the enlarging and modernization of the 54-year-old structure which houses abused, neglected, and emotionally-disturbed children.

Just over one-half million dollars has been received thus far by the Building Fund Committee of the Home. Over one million additional dollars are desperately needed in order to complete the construction.

Groundbreaking of a new professional wing is scheduled to commence in the fall with an approximate completion date of 1983. The wing will provide needed space for intensive individual treatment, private conference, and educational classrooms.

"The modernization is necessary for proper treatment of the children to continue," said Carmen Barletta, vice president of the Home.

"The existing facility will be converted into five cottage-style treatment units. Each unit will contain four children's bedrooms, with two children per room. Living and dining rooms, as well as the kitchen, playroom, and bathrooms are among the areas to be included on each floor," an official said.

The Italian Home for Children came into existence because of the influenza epidemic of 1918. The contagious disease ran rampant through Boston's North End, leaving hundreds of orphaned children.

A group of concerned Italo-Americans gathered to address the problem and established a Board of Directors and a corporate body. A mansion and 10 acres of land at 1125 Centre St. was purchased and many of the children were cared for there.

Today, the Home's purpose is directed towards serving children who are emotionally and/or behaviorally disturbed as a result of being abused or neglected. The children are of all races, religions, and nationalities.

Volunteers sought for special needs

NEEDHAM — Volunteers are needed to help with the Needham Adult Education Program's new classes for special needs adults.

Beginning in September, individualized and group instruction will be offered in three different classes: basic academics, physical/recreational activities' and creative arts.

Each class will be staffed by a certified teacher and trained volunteers. The volunteers will work with instructors to provide support and assistance to students. They will be supervised and given training during the 10-week program' which begins Sept. 15.

A commitment of two hours a week is necessary. Volunteers must be freshman in high school; men and women of all ages are urged to apply. High school students who are interested in credit for this experience should contact Mr. Hugh Gallagher at Needham High School.

For further information call the Adult Education Office, 444-4100, ext. 158, between 9 a.m. and noon.

Chinese school will reopen in September

NEWTONVILLE — Classes of the Newton Chinese Language School will start this fall on Sunday, Sept. 13, at Day Junior High School off Walnut Street in Newtonville.

Serving the Greater Boston area since 1959, Newton School is one of the oldest Chinese schools in New England. It offers a kindergarten class (minimum age is 4) and eight upper classes.

An adult language class for people without prior knowledge of Chinese is also planned.

School hours are 2 to 4 p.m. on Sunday afternoons, and the school calendar coincides with that of the Newton schools.

For further information contact Arthur T. Poe, at 861-7818 (evenings) or write P.O. Box 142' Newton Center, Ma. 02159.

Newton Chinese School is a non-political, non-profit organization devoted to the teaching of Chinese language, culture and arts and to enhance the understanding and appreciation of the Chinese heritage.

In addition to the language and culture program, the school participates in community events such as Dragon Boat Festival, Children's Museum Festival' etc.

Last year, Newton School had over 80 students from some 50 families.

Film helpful for teachers

WABAN — Teachers, parents, students and other interested people are invited to view the film, "The Other End of the Corridor," at the Waban Branch Library, 1608 Beacon Street on Wednesday, Aug. 26 at 7:30 p.m.

The 30 minute show, produced by the Boston Women's Teachers' Group, will be followed by a discussion on the effects of teaching on teachers, led by a panel of teachers and academic humanists.

The program will cover such issues as the pressures on teachers that often cause teacher "burn out"; the structure of schools which create these tensions; and teachers' changing perceptions of their work situations.

The Boston Women's Teachers' Group hopes that the program will help to "turn the investigation of schools away from a scapegoating of individual teachers, students, parents and administrators toward a system-wide analysis."

The program is free and all are welcome. For more information call Pat Daley, Waban Branch Librarian, 552-7166.

Film made

NEWTON — David Sutherland, a Newton documentary moviemaker, will begin filming on Sept. 14 in Oxford, Ohio, at a major retrospective exhibition of the American artist Paul Cadmus.

Sutherland is directing an hour long documentary on the life of the 76-year old Cadmus, still actively working in Weston, Conn.

Now a renowned figurative painter, Cadmus was at the center of a major censorship controversy while a young artist with the New Deal's Public Works of Art Project in the 1930's. In subsequent decades, Cadmus' satirical paintings remained controversial and the artist developed influential friendships and collaborations with important cultural figures from the worlds of literature, music, and dance, including E.M. Forster, W.H. Auden, Virgil Thompson, Lincoln Kirstein and Jerome Robbins. In the 1940's Cadmus began working in the ancient egg yolk tempera and he remains one of the very few practitioners of a method employed by Renaissance masters.

Sutherland's movie will record the artist's recollections of his very eventful life, and will include a unique demonstration of the artist's egg yolk painting technique.

Courts could have final say on Chestnut Hill Gardens

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Representatives of the firm converting Chestnut Hill Gardens to condominiums said Monday they may have to reassess their marketing plan for the complex in the wake of a vote by alderman that will regulate conversion.

David Mofenson, attorney for CHR General Inc., has indicated that litigation will be one of the avenues explored by his client to try and counter the impact of the new ordinance on the conversion of the twin-tower complex.

James Marcus of the Boston law firm of Simons and Marcus has already threatened aldermen that he will challenge the legality of the ordinance in court. His client, Commonwealth Realty Trust (CRT), has begun converting the apartments at 37-39 Commonwealth Avenue (17 units) into condominiums.

"We may have to reassess the program that we have developed," said John Reveruzzi, general president of CHR General Inc. "There may not be any change in it or there could be a variation of the program itself."

"It's a question of economics at this point," he continued. Officials of CHR General Inc. have maintained that a month's time, until Sept. 7, would be sufficient for the program to unfold.

However, under the emergency preamble which was passed last night, the most CHR General can hope for is an additional 10 days. This would leave them two weeks short of their goal and the "added time period needed to go through the entire program," acccording to Reveruzzi.

CHR General, a subsidiary of Connecticut Bank and Trust, presented tenants with a revamped marketing plan on July 16 after Chestnut Hill Gardens Associates withdrew as contract purchasers of the complex.

Despite the new program, which offered 75 of the 422 units as rental housing for at least three years; a relocation program entitling tenants from $5,000 to $11,000; and a savings of more than $29,000 from what the former market price demanded for a typical unit, tenants and their allies on the Board of Aldermen have continued to fight the conversion.

Although Alderman Ethel Sheehan has maintained the ordinance is not geared to one special interest group, many aldermen feel the law has been railroaded through the board in order to help the tenants at 250 Hammond Pond Parkway.

Reveruzzi said the firm "will honor everything" up to this point in time but indicated people considering purchasing their units may in the future be subject to a less attractive plan.

He said about 180 tenants have agreed to purchase their units and another 15 to 20 renters have agreed to the terms of the relocation plan.

David Mofenson, attorney for CHR General, said the firm "will have to explore a wide range of possibilities" to counter the impact of the ordinance on Chestnut Hill Gardens.

Mofenson, who contends the the ordinance is illegal without enabling legislation from state lawmakers, said one possibility is litigation.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk has maintained throughout the deliberations that without state legislation the ordinance is "illegal."

Marcus contends that aldermen are "running a real risk of personnel liability under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and under the United States Constitution for knowingly and willfully violating the constitutional rights of property owners..."

CRT has informed tenants they must vacate by Aug. 31 or face legal action.

"Ultimately the courts will render a decision," said Mofenson, emphasizing that the court route was not his client's response at the moment.

State Rep. David Cohen, a co-sponsor of the ordinance with Sheehan, said there was a "potential (court) test in each building where condominium conversion is going on." There are currently conversions going on in at least six apartment complexes, including Chestnut Hill Gardens, in the city and rumors of several more in the aftermath of the ordinance.

Sheehan flatly said: "I expect to be sued."

Reveruzzi said the firm will "see how the ordinance affects the company's present program," and may attempt "to work the program within the confines of the city ordinance."

Mofenson said the possibility of fighting the ordinance in the courts has arisen in conversations with several Newton developers.

Mofenson admitted that with "enabling legislation" he believes the ordinance is legal.

"Everyone now has to re-think their position and then come up with their own response," said Mofenson, noting that Chestnut Hill Gardens was just one of the conversion projects in the city. "Those options are open to everyone. We're not in charge of the issue."

Actor wants to shed Peter Brady image

NEW YORK (UPI) — A lot of kids dream of growing up and making it big in show biz. Christopher Knight, who already is big in show biz, would settle for just growing up, but the script writers aren't cooperating.

Knight is 23, looks 17, and with 16 years in front of the television camera, he's a polished veteran. But he's beginning to think it might be easier to shed his skin than the image of little Peter Brady of television's old "Brady Bunch." He won that role at 10 and played it for five years. Then he played it off camera for two more years as the voice of Peter Brady on Filmation's animated "Brady Kids" series.

He's had more than enough of Peter Brady. He even left the tube entirely upon graduation from high school, enrolling for a year at UCLA in a bid to escape his baby-faced heritage.

To no avail.

"I keep playing confused adolescents," he said ruefully, reviewing the confused adolescent he's presently playing in the NBC daytime soaper "Another World."

"My character is a kid who's tired of being told what to do, so whatever anybody tells him to do, he does just the opposite. He's ambitionless. Motiveless. You know soap operas — everybody's got a motive for everything — and there I am, just sitting there!"

"It becomes a vain game," he said. "I worry about lighting. I worry about camera angle. It's 'keep the eyes mean and end every scene with the big stare.' That's how every scene ends in a soap opera. They could condense the whole show into five minutes of looks!"

Make no mistake — Knight is not ungrateful for the role he is trying to make a transition in his career.

"I'm too young to be picky and grand about it," he said. "I just want to work."

But he does wish someone, somewhere, would write him into a mature role, or at least handle the curse of adolescence as it is.

"Writers are of an older generation," he said. "They're not reflecting the pressure of the times for adolescents. An amateur writer in college could do it better ... writers remember that they were confused and scared, but at the time they were confused and scared, they didn't know it.

"They write a very clear confusion."

Knight's fans don't help.

"No matter how old you get, you've always got parents or an aunt or an uncle who go right on thinking you're a little kid," he said. "Well, I have a whole hell of a lot of public — a lot of aunts and uncles out there — who still think of me as a little kid. But they're going to see me grow up.

"If I give them enough other stuff, I'm not going to be Peter any more. I'm going to be Chris."

He doesn't even have to be Chris-the-actor, though acting is what he most enjoys. Chris-the-producer, with the sort of technology that created "Star Wars," "Alien" and "Dragonslayer" at his fingertips, will do just fine.

"Most acting calls for a suspension of belief," he said. "But in a feature film, with the technology of today, you don't have to ask people to stretch their imaginations. You say, 'don't use your imagination, use mine!' You get to put your imagination up there on the screen and keep it and think, 'God, how did I ever think of that!'

"There's really no such thing as a stretch of the imagination anyway. The imagination is endless."

Knight's target, given a shot at filmmaking with all the new sorcery, would be the classic J.R.R. Tolkien fantasies "The Hobbit" and "Lord of the Rings" in which he's so deeply steeped that he refers to special effects wizard Stephen Spielberg as "a modern-day Gandalf."

But not for television.

"TV doesn't have the time or the money yet," he said. "In any case, 'The Hobbit' would be impossible as a series. It might work as a mini-series, but all that creativity? All those special effects?

"It would be like asking someone to have a baby every week."

Kathy Sharpless of West Newton has been promoted to traffic manager at Hill, Holliday, Connors, Cosmopulos, Inc., Prior to joining the firm she held similar jobs at other companies and worked as an art teacher and calligraphy instructor.

American Indian Council supports Injun Andy

By ANDREA NEAL

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Injun Andy should improve his language but keep his job as promoter of the 1981 Indiana State Fair, an inter-tribal organization representing 5,000 Hoosiers of American Indian descent said.

The State Fair Board last week canceled radio and television commercials in which Injun Andy invited Hoosier "tribes" to the fair in a monotone and broken English, following protests by other Indians who said the character was an insulting stereotype.

"Some Indians in the area feel Indian Andy could be a good thing for the American Indians," Leroy Malaterre, chairman of the American Indian Council, said. "We want him to continue but possibly changing the language that he uses a little bit."

Representatives from the Shawnee, Sioux, Miami, Chippewa and Potawatomi tribes told a news conference they would like to see the Injun Andy emblem remain on state fair promotional material, if the figure can be modified to eliminate stereotyped features.

Lora Siders, spokesperson for the Miami Nation of Indiana, Inc., said her tribe "definitely wants him reinstated. It's a caricature, it draws attention."

"The biggest offense taken was in the language the Indian was using," Malaterre said.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
People are often afraid or suspicious of things that they do not understand. For many years, information on chiropractic was not readily available in the United States, however, this did not stop chiropractors from performing their work. Helped patients have been their best advertisement. However, you may wish more information and that is perfectly reasonable. Any chiropractor will be glad to give you informational material. It always helps to have an understanding of any treatment that you are considering.
Your chiropractor will initiate treatment specifically designed for your problem. When chiropractic works for you, tell a friend about it! Chiropractic is a true health science that deals directly with ill health, health maintenance and the prevention of disease. It adds nothing to the body and takes nothing away. We'll accept you as a patient only if we feel we can help you. Remember that we accept many insurance plans, as well as workmen's compensation cases. DR DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022 by appointment.
CHIRO TIP:
Chiropractic treatment is set up in a program designed specifically for your condition. Don't skip appointments.

Build Your Career Around Bentley
Are you ready to spell out a new career direction—begin the game of entering the job market—or add just the right letters (BS or BA) to help advance your present career? If so, you're ready to choose a course, program, or seminar from the many business offerings at Bentley College's Undergraduate Evening Division and the Center for Continuing Education.
The Evening Division
Most students in this part-time, credit-bearing, undergraduate division are employed full-time and bring maturity and valuable experience to the learning process.
The division offers a broad business focus leading to eleven degrees as well as a Certificate in Accountancy. Classes meet in the late afternoon, evening, or on Saturday on our Waltham campus or through extension programs in Braintree, Marlboro, Newton, and Randolph. And to be sure that you come out ahead of the game, the Evening Division offers workshops on note taking, essay writing and exam preparation, plus free tutorial assistance in the Departments of English, Accountancy, Quantitative Analysis (math) and Computer Information Systems.
For help in planning your part-time undergraduate education, call our Evening Division (617) 891-2901.
Center for Continuing Education
Bentley's Center for Continuing Education can provide you with new skills and fine-tune your business talents through specialized courses and seminars, and certificate-granting programs.
Classes are planned for early evenings or Saturdays to easily fit into already busy schedules and registration can be conveniently handled by mail, phone or in person.
Increase your score in the business world when you choose from Continuing Education programs like Personnel Administration, Paralegal Studies, Accounting, Management, Real Estate, Taxation, Administrative Assistant, and Pension Administration.
Make the right move to build your future by calling Bentley's Center for Continuing Education (617) 891-2135, Monday-Thursday until 7 P.M.

Arcese shutout brings National title

Sports Shop reigns as No.1

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The title is 1981 Newton National Division Champion and it belongs to the Auburndale Sports Shop.

Auburndale behind the shutout pitching of righthander Dave Arcese breezed to a 7-0 victory over C and K Components Thursday night to capture the fourth and deciding game of the best-of-five final series at Albemarle Field.

The Sports Shop captures the series three game to one. It is the first championship ever for the four-year old Auburndale squad. C and K Components has been in the league only two years, but both times it has made it the finals and lost.

This year, C and K was pitted against a quality pitcher and could never get anything started. Arcese was the winner in the series opener on Monday night going seven innings allowing four runs in in the early innings.

It looked like Arcese was headed for some early inning trouble Thursday night. In the first inning he walked Chris Buras, but came back by striking out Mike Buras and after he issued a free pass to Gary Frechette, he struck out Dom Precopio. From then on Arcese was in total command.

"That was one of the most gutsy pitching efforts I've ever seen," said Auburndale coach James "Chub" Ryan. "Dave was going with just two days rest and he had a sore arm, but when I saw the way he was pitching in the first inning, I knew he could go all the way."

Arcese allowed just five hits with five walks and six strike outs. C and K never got a runner to third base. Arcese was also helped out by second baseman Rich Keyes who started three double plays, including one that ended the game.

"Arcese did a heck of a job," said C and K coach Mike Buras. "Last night, Rich Maloney took control, tonight it was Arcese."

The Sports Shop bats, which could manage but two basehits on Wednesday night, blasted out 10 hits and three extra basehits in the winning effort. Auburndale scored the eventual game-winning run in the top of the first inning.

Keyes led off with a single and went to second on Bob Goodfellow's gound out. He went to third on a fielders choice and scored when Arcese stole second. Keyes scampered home as catcher Frechette tried to nail Arcese at second.

The second inning, however, was the frame that the Auburndale bats teed off on C and K starter and loser righthander John Toyias. Don Fox, who went three-for-three, slammed a triple to right-center field. He scored on a sacrifice fly to right by Roger Carmel.

Paul Howley kept it going with a line drive single up the middle. Steve Caliguri then hit a hot drive that was snagged by third baseman Jerry Marcus. Caliguri and Howley were both safe on the play when Marcus thought to throw to second and by the time he threw to first it was too late.

Anthony Venditti made Marcus' mistake a costly one when he belted a double to right-center field to knock in two runs and make it 4-0. Goodfellow drove in Venditti with a line double just inside the third base bag and just out of the reach of a sprawling Marcus.

"With the way Dave was pitching," said Ryan,"and us up by five runs, I became pretty confident. But, C and K is tough team and they don't quit. They proved that on Wednesday when they shut us out, despite trailing in the series by two games. Most teams when they're two games down would think they were out of it, but C and K hung tough till the end."

It was a long bitter struggle for C and K this season. Mired in fifth or sixth place for most of the season, C and K finished strong with four straight wins to beat out St. Bernard's for the fourth and final playoff spot.

In the semi-finals, C and K upset the heavily-favored first-place Boys' Club and did it by coming from seven runs down in the deciding game. In the finals trailing two games to none, they rallied to shut out Auburndale and force a fourth game.

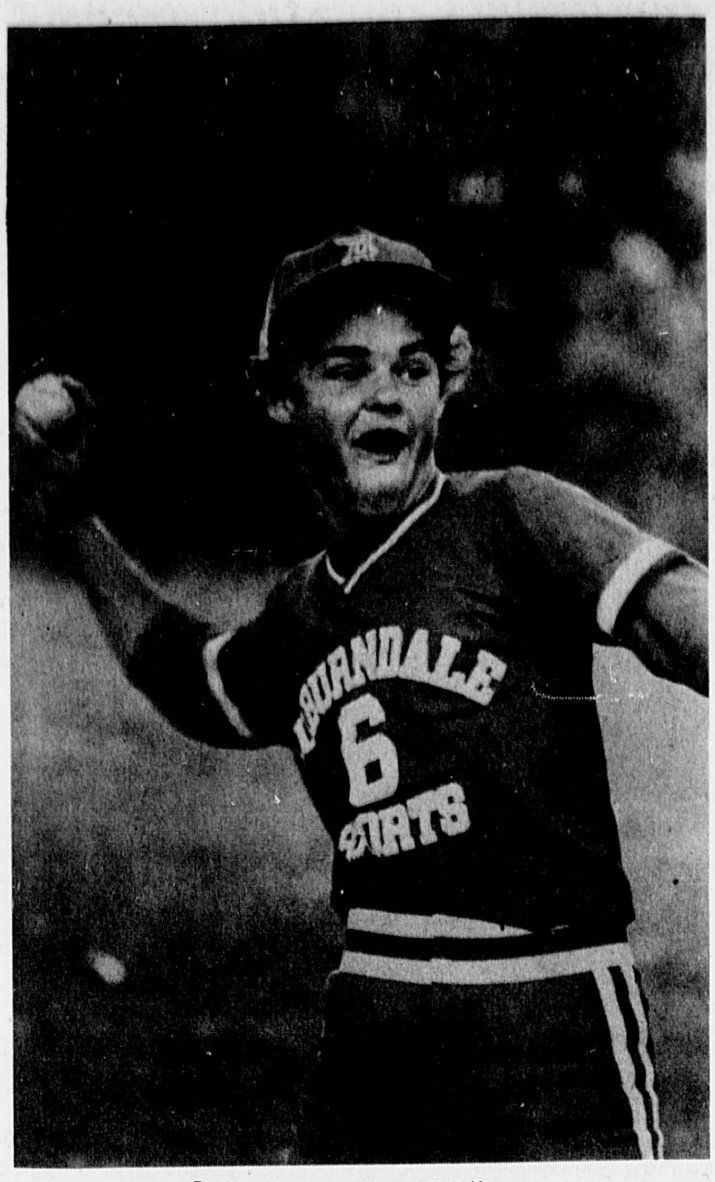

"All in all I was content with the year," said Buras. "We've made the finals two years in a row and the team never quit." The loss Thursday night marked the final game for C and K 19-year olds Frechette, Dom Precopio and Mike Buras.

The Auburdale Sports Shop picked up single insurance runs in the sixth and seventh innings. Caliguri knocked in a run in the sixth with a ground out to second and Arcese singled in the final run with a base hit to right field. The summary:

AUBURNDALE SPORTS SHOP(7)--Keyes 4-1; Goodfellow 3-1; Kelly 3-0; Arcese 3-1; S. Venditti 4-0; Fox 3-3; Carmel 2-1; Howley 3-1; Caliguri 3-0; A. Venditti 3-2; Tot. 31-10.

Cosgrove golf tourney Sept. 13

One of the most durable and most sportsmanlike events in the Newton-Waltham community, the Charles H. Cosgrove Memorial Golf Tournament, will marks its 20th anniversary on Sunday, Sept. 13, at the Wayland Country Club. Awarding of golf prizes and scholarships will be made at a dinner to be held that evening at St. Bernard's Hall, West Newton.

The tournament started in 1962 when 16 golfers played to honor their late alderman and golfing friend. It has grown to the point that the tourney annually attracts about 120 golfers and 135 at the dinner.

By the time the 1965 tournament was held, the committee had been able to save enough money to award a $200 scholarship to a deserving West Newton youth. Last year the scholarship was $1,000, and the total amount awarded to date is $13,700.

Both tournament offerings, a fun day of golf with old friends, and the $1,000 scholarship award,,are the things that Charlie Cosgrove would have truly cherished.

Applicants for the scholarship award must be West Newton residents, either enrolled or accepted at a college or junior college. Scholarship applications are available either by writing the scholarship chairman, Dr. Ben Antonellis, 130 Walnut St., Newtonville, Ma. 02160, and must be returned to him by Sept. 5th.

Co-chairmen of the event are Edmond White and Paul Burke. Francis "Chick" Carvelli is serving as golf chairman, Larry Sprow is ticket chairman and Billy Hannon is prize chairman.

Joe Cosgrove, John Walsh, Ray Demeo, Mickey Demeo, Jim Ryan, Bob Cronin, Jim Picariello, Donald King, Frank Vona and Ed Scarlett are committee members. The cost of ticket is $25.

Persons wishing to donate to the scholarship fund may do so by contacting the treasurer, Ed White, at 70 Rowe St., Auburndale.

Quarterback question looms...

For Pats, cast will be nearly the same

By PETER MAY
UPI Sports Writer

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots, a team with some of the top talent in the NFL, again embark on another season determined to prove to themselves and the many skeptics that they belong in the league's upper crust.

Steve Grogan...No. 1 for now

Already, the Patriots have suffered one setback, the retirement of tight end Russ Francis, one of the stars in the league. Francis was coming off his best season and, as of yet, the Patriots have not signed his backup, Don Hasselbeck, who is a free agent holdout.

But other than the problem at tight end, the Patriots have pretty much the same crew that came within an eyelash of making the playoffs. Their 10-6 mark would have been sufficient to make the playoffs in 1978 or 1979 but it was one win short in 1981.

The big question facing Coach Ron Erhardt, who begins his third year, is the health of his quarterbacks. Both Steve Grogan and Matt Cavanaugh are coming off knee surgery. Grogan, who uses the exhibition season as a tuneup for the regular season, thinks he should be the No. 1 choice.

"The thing that irks me a lot is that I've played six years and started 76 straight games," said Grogan, who before his injury last year was among the top quarterbacks in the AFC. "Matt has played only four games and now they're all wondering who will be No. 1. If Matt wins the job, I can live with that. If he takes the job, more power to him. It'll be good for the club because he'll have to play extremely well to take my job from me."

Erhardt said he felt Grogan should be given the No. 1 shot and added he was concerned about carrying three quarterbacks.

"Our priority at quarterback is not who's going to be where — Steve was No. 1 before he got hurt and he'll be there again. Matt did a helluva job as a backup but we don't know if either one is going to be healthy."

Candidates for the third quarterback slot are Tom Owen, rookie Brian Buckley of Harvard and Dave Rader, a free agent who played for the New York Giants in 1979.

As for the team, Erhardt figures they were one play away from making the playoffs in 1980. The Patriots got off to a fabulous start in 1980, winning six of their first eight games, but injuries to Grogan and Cavanaugh took their toll and New England limped home to a 4-4 mark in the second half.

"In 1979, we were one game out of the playoffs. Last year, we were one play away from making them. This year, we have to guard against the mistakes we made in the past," Erhardt said.

All-Pro guard John Hannah, voted the league's top offensive lineman, said the Patriots had to avoid their mid-season swoon which last year left the team's fate in the hands of others.

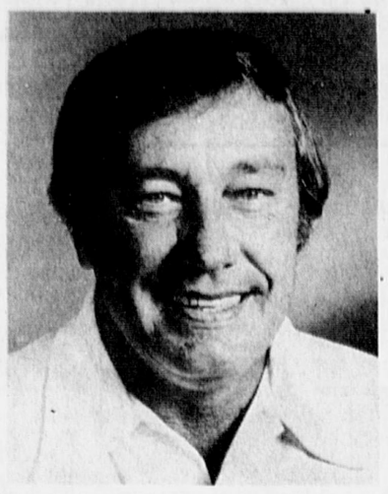

"We have to try to be more consistent in the seventh, eighth and ninth games of the season. That hurt us last year," said Hannah. "I think this year's team has a lot of unity."

On offense, the Patriots will again produce. They scored 441 points last year and kicker John Smith led the NFL in scoring.

Grogan and Cavanaugh will again have a gifted fleet of receivers. Speedster Stanley Morgan and Harold Jackson both averaged better than 20 yards a catch. Should Hasselbeck not sign, veteran Terry Nelson, acquired from Los Angeles, or rookie Lin Dawson will be the tight end.

Hannah anchors the offensive line on the left side with Dwight Wheeler as the tackle. Shelby Jordan will play tackle on the right side while Bill Lenkaitis and Pete Brock will share the center slot. Bob Cryder takes over from Sam Adams as the other guard. Top draft choice Brian Holloway will fight Wheeler for a starting job.

Vagas Ferguson, coming off a fine rookie season in which he gained a team-high 818 yards, is one starting halfback. Reliable Don Calhoun, who rushed for 787 yards, figures to be the fullback.

Ron Erhardt...facing third year

Halfbacks Horace Ivory, the NFL leader in kickoff returns, Andy Johnson and rookie Anthony Collins will see action. Mosi Tatupu will back up Calhoun.

Linebacker Steve Nelson leads a defense which was eighth-best in the league in yards allowed but 18th in points permitted. Rod Shoate and Mike Hawkins figure to join Nelson in the linebacking corps with the fourth spot producing a battle between Bob Golic, John Zamberlin, Bill Matthews and Larry McGrew.

The secondary is as talented as one can find in football. Mike Haynes and Ray Clayborn return to the corners and Erhardt says this year he will flip-flop them depending on the receiver. Rick Sanford will be the strong safety. Talented Roland James may give veteran Tim Fox a shot at the free safety spot.

The defensive line will be without Mel Lunsford, who was traded to Cincinnati, but Pro-Bowler Julius Adams returns as do pass rushers Richard Bishop and Tony McGee. Ray Hamilton will be the noseguard and rookie Steve Clark may help.

Smith, the NFL's most accurate kicker, again will handle the field goals and extra points. The punting job, a sore spot for many years, will be decided in pre-season between returnee Mike Hubach and rookie Ken Naber of Stanford.

Boston Jr. tennis entries available

The 10th annual City of Boston Open Junior Tennis Championships, sponsored by the Gillette Company, Safety Razor Division, will be held Aug. 24-28 at the Franklin Field Tennis Center in Dorchester.

200 teams set for 'COZ softball event

More than 200 teams have already registered to play in the WCOZ Greater Boston Softball Marathon for Easter Seals on Aug. 22 and 23 at fields throughout the Greater Boston area.

Teams who have signed up include: WNTN (Newton), Kielbasie Club from Newton Centre, Kings All-Stars from Newton, C.T.I. Gyrogenics from Waltham, Store 24 in Waltham, Field Premium of Watertown, Watertown Savings Bank, BayBank-Arlington, Electronics Corporation of America from Cambridge, Cambridge Police Department, National Cash Register Company from Needham, Joy of Movement from Cambridge, Untouchables from Brookline, Hooker Park from Allston, Brighton All-Stars, Kentech Corporation from Wellesley, Boston Municipal Court and Charlestown Savings Bank.

Last year's Marathon raised more than $58,000 to benefit Easter Seal Services for physcially disabled people in Massachusetts. Such services are therapeutic swimming and recreation programs, support groups for people who have had a stroke, and residential summer camping are all available to disabled children and adults locally.

There are still spots for teams to sign up. Men's, Women's and Co-ed teams are all needed to play. Beer and T-Shirts are awarded to teams raising varying amounts of money for Easter Seals.

Anyone wishing to register a team or put one together for the WCOZ Marathon should call Easter Seals at 482-3370 or the Softball Hotline at 482-3319.

movies

FRI., AUG. 21

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) FAST FRIENDS. A young divorcee's struggle to make a new life in the backstage jungle of a TV talk show. Edie Adams, Dick Shawn and Carrie Snodgrass. For the love of (a) mike.

SAT., AUG. 22

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) DAY OF THE ANIMALS. Nature lovers enjoy a guided hike through a mountain forest, unaware that the animals of this forest soon become menacing because of a lack of ozone in the air. When the hikers realize their perilous predicament, conflict breaks out as they try to escape their ferocious pursuers. Chris George.

SUN., AUG. 23

REDFORD STREISAND

9-11:18PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) THE WAY WE WERE. A winner with Robert Redford and Barbra Streisand in the bittersweet story of two people who drift into marriage and out of love without ever really understanding why. Enjoy with a mellow toddy.

9-11:20PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) AUDREY ROSE. Marsha Mason, Anthony Hopkins and John Beck in a suspense drama focusing on a girl's reincarnation. Nightmarish.

MON., AUG. 24

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) DEATH PENALTY. Two-time Tony winner Colleen Dewhurst is a determined psychologist waging an all-out campaign to help a teen convicted of double murder. Realistic drama of youth crime and society's response.

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) WHEN SHE WAS BAD. Cheryl Ladd and Robert Urich as young marrieds trying to escape from a secret in their past that threatens everything.

network

8:30-11PM CBS (7:30 Cent./Mt.) NETWORK. The blockbuster is back! The winner of four (4!) Oscars, with Faye Dunaway, William Holden, Peter Finch and Robert Duvall. A funny, yet terrifying account of the power struggle in a failing television network. Neat work Network.

WED., AUG. 26

THUR., AUG. 27

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) BURNT OFFERINGS. This thriller was rescheduled for tonight. Bette Davis with Karen Black and Oliver Reed. All about vacation plans that don't go according to plan.

FRI., AUG. 28

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) 24 HOURS OF THE REBEL. Richard Thomas in a drama about the effect of a teen idol's death on several college students in a small southern town. It was released theatrically under the title September 30, 1955, which happens to be the date that James Dean died.

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) FM. 24 hours in the life of an L.A. radio station, featuring an all almost-star cast and guest performances by Linda Ronstadt and Jimmy Buffett.

SAT., AUG. 29

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) MURDER IN MUSIC CITY. No dead beats in this one, although the murder mystery leads smack into the country music capital of Nashville. Sonny Bono and Lee Purcell star along with well-known C&W performers Charlie Daniels, Larry Gatlin, Barbara Mandrell, Ronnie Milsap and Mel Tillis. Sonny Bono!?!?

SUN., AUG. 30

AIRPORT '77

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) AIRPORT '77 (Part 1). Fasten your seat belts for this action-packed drama about a private jumbo jet that crash-lands in the water, trapping its passengers beneath the sea. Big cast includes Jack Lemmon, Lee Grant, Joseph Cotton, Olivia DeHavilland, Brenda Vaccaro and James Stewart. Flirting with disaster.

9-11:30PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) AN UNMARRIED WOMAN. First class! Jill Clayburgh and Alan Bates.

MON., AUG. 31

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain) AIRPORT '77 (Part 2). Operation rescue and risk as George Kennedy, who never misses an Airport outing, shows up at last.

Annie Hall

9-11PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain) ANNIE HALL. A delicious treat with Diane Keaton and Woody Allen in the movie that brought him two Oscars.

TUES., SEPT. 1

8-11PM NBC (7 Central/Mountain) THE EAGLE HAS LANDED. Neither about bird-watching or moon rockets, but a Nazi plot to kidnap Winston Churchill during World War Two. Michael Caine is the German paratrooper officer leading the raiding party to England. Donald Sutherland, Robert Duvall and Larry Hagman.

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) THE FAMILY MAN. Edward Asner is contented with his loving wife and estatic that his darling daughter has made him a grandfather. All is milk and honey until one day his tranquility is upset by an attractive young woman. Meredith Baxter Birney, Marv-Joan Negro and Anne Jackson.

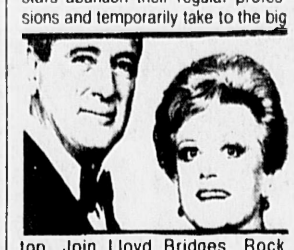

WED., SEPT. 2

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) I NEVER PROMISED YOU A ROSE GARDEN. Powerful, gut-wrenching drama debuting on network TV. A 16-year-old schizophrenic confined in a psychiatric hospital, struggles to free herself from the grip of mental demons. Bibi Andersson and Kathleen Quinlan. Hang on tight!

specials

THUR., AUG. 20

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain) THE FIFTH ANNUAL CIRCUS OF THE STARS. Stage, screen and TV stars abandon their regular professions and temporarily take to the big top. Join Lloyd Bridges, Rock Hudson, Angela Lansbury and Valerie Perrine on the sawdust trail, and watch Marty Allen, Brooke Shields, Gil Gerard, Linda Gray, Joan Rivers and others perform circus stunts of skill and lots of courage. A ringer!

9:30-11PM ABC (8:30 Cent./Mt.) THE MONASTERY. A rare visit inside the walls of St. Joseph's in rural Massachusetts. Until recently, the monks lived under the constraints of a vow of silence. Now they tell us their views of what faith and the monastic life means in these contradictory times of skepticism and renewed curiosity about spiritualism.

FRI., AUG. 21

8-9PM CBS (7 Central/Mountain) GOOD EVENING, CAPTAIN. A good time celebration with the ole captain himself, Bob Keeshan and his guest stars Jean Stapleton, Barbara Mandrell and Mike Farrell. You'll also enjoy the innovative pantomine group The Magic Carpet Band. It's a special and it's a lark.

8:30-9PM NBC (7:30 Cent./Mt.) WHY US? John Lawlor and Joanna Gleason as an intellectual college professor and his wife-of-weeks, an auto mechanic. Give it a go and take this comedy pilot for a spin.

MON., AUG. 24

8-9PM ABC (7 Central/Mountain) MONDAY COMEDY SPECIAL. Nuts & Bolts with Rich Little as a computer engineer who raises his kids with the help of his inventions. In Trouble with Lisa Freeman and Doris Roberts as fun-loving teenage gals who disrupt their high school.

Interns today are without stethoscopes

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Not all interns pack stethoscopes and wear white coats.

Thirteen from across the country scrambling around New York City these days tote reporter's notebooks, tape recorders, and other trappings of broadcast media types.

The "broadcast" interns are shadowing or working at the elbows of pros in the network radio and television industry. That includes association with more than those "airing" news reports and such.

Stephen Labunski, executive director of the International Radio & Television Society, said some interns in summer program funded by the IRT Foundation also learn about network sales and advertising agencies — conduit for television and radio commercials.

The IRTS is a nonprofit membership organization for broadcasting professionals and emphasizes education about the industry as its major role.

The happiest broadcast intern of all in this sixth annual batch — picked from 610 applicants — has got to be David Gibson of Gonzaga University, Spokane, Wash. He goes on the payroll at NBC Radio Network when the intern program program ends Aug. 21.

Some others getting the on-the-job experience will go back to school. Still others, their experience files enriched, will hit the job trail.

"This is a unique opportunity for students to receive on-the-job experience at top communications companies in the center of the broadcastingadvertising industry," said Labunski, a 25-year broadcast vet and once NBC Radio division prexy.

Susan Sigur, from California State University in Fullerton, an intern with Independent Network News and working out of WPIX-TV in Manhattan, said the experience is fantastic.

"There's no way anything in the classroom can compare to this," she said.

"I cannot believe there are so many departments and so many people working together to put out a news show. I'm right in the thick of it. We have everything. The human nature breakdowns when temper flare and technology breakdowns when equipment fails.

"The teamwork required is phenomenal."

The summer internship program is the second of a two-prong IRTS program linking academia and the world of broadcast.

The first part each year is a Faculty-Industry seminar for teachers and 25 students from universities and colleges nationwide. The 13 interns are picked from the 25.

Trisha Curran, a broadcast professor from Fordham University, described the 1981 seminar at Harrison Conference Center, Glen Cove, N.Y., as "an exhilarating education in broadcasting."

"During the seminar, the professional educators were instructed by the creme de la creme of professional broadcasters, brought together in a no-holds-barred atmosphere.

"Panels on legal issues, radio programming, television news, public affairs, sales, promotion, community involvement and research enabled the professors to appreciate practical problems in radio and television programming."

The core of the seminar was a game plan. Participants worked out problems for a hypothetical broadcast station attempting to serve its community with honor and profit.

Curran reported it was found to be possible.

"But it is not automatic, nor is it easy, as the professors discovered in their increasingly-less-cavalier attempts to bring in interesting, intelligent, in-depth news and public affairs programs," she said.

"As the student-professors evaluated themselves as programmers they gained a new security in their knowledge and understanding of the braodcasting world."

And that's as planned. Labunski said the purpose of IRTS Faculty-Industry Seminar is "to bridge the academic and practicality gap between the communications industry and the communications faculty."

Some seminar and intern project activities give participants exposure to powerhouses in the broadcast industry.

Don Hewitt, executive producer of "60 Minutes," for example, was a seminar luncheon speaker.

He told how the program came to be, how correspondents are chosen, and gave views on news-as-entertainment.

During the question-and-answer period, Hewitt said Barbara Walters would be the best woman journalist for the show, "but that she's not available."

One day a week the college interns meet a broadcast industry giant.

They said the time with James G. Rosenfield, president of CBS Television and vice president of the IRTS, a hard act to follow.

Rating the earlier event, the IRTS College Conference in Glen Cove, Virginia Thomas, of John Brown University, Arkansas, said it was "the most valuable and concentrated learning experience I have ever had."

Labunski said in broadcast, as in some other fields, there are more graduates than jobs.

But the sales part is full of opportunities for good candidates.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

All-robot Japanese factory busily produces more robots

By Antonio Kamiya

TOKYO (UPI) — After a visit to a modernistic factory at the foot of Mt. Fuji, Takeo Tamarushima was ecstatic.

What he saw was nothing less than a dream for managers but a nightmare for workers — the world's first fully automatic and robotized factory.

At the sprawling Fujitsu-Fanuc Fuji plant, robots are in fact busily turning out, yes, more robots around the clock.

During the day only 100 workers man the factory, twice the size of a baseball park. By night the plant becomes completely automated with only one worker tending the shop, plus a security guard outside the gates.

"The robot industry is an invention of Japan's advanced technology," enthused Tamarushima, head of the Tokyo-based Research Institute of Finance and Economy, as he wound up his tour.

"It will," the economist said, "unquestionably be an important key to the future economy of the world."

What have become generally known as industrial robots don't walk and don't talk but in their own way they are versatile and smart.

Equipped with a computer brain and arm-like projections and grippers, they already are used in a number of Japanese factories, performing factory work customarily done by humans since the Industrial Revolution.

"The last stage of computerization is robotization," said Tamarushima.

Economists generally agree robots have come to play a significant role in boosting Japan's productivity, notably in the auto industry.

Toyota and Nissan, the leading auto makers in Japan, are known to be operating plants where 90 percent of the work is done by robots.

With the robots toiling to boost company profits, executives are quick to profess their affection for the steel collars.

"They don't ask for tea breaks," said Mahiko Kato, a company executive at Tokiko, one of the manufacturers in Japan which turns out sophisticated robots which can paint nearly anything.

Little more than 10 years after the first functional robot was built, more than 130 firms in Japan have jumped onto the robot band wagon, a market that is growing 50 percent a year.

Matsushita, the maker of Panasonic electronic products, has revealed plans to use the entire staff of its technological division to develop multi-purpose robots capable of handling simple as well as complicated processing jobs.

The ultimate aim, one insider said, is to realize all-out plant automation.

But despite all the hoopla, the art of robotics still appears very much in the formative age.

Because of their limited brain power and manipulative skills, robots now do jobs shunned by humans — loading stamping presses, spraying paint in confined areas and making the welds day in and day out.

And to small factories, a robot is still expensive, priced generally in the range of $40,000 to $50,000 apiece.

Japanese figures indicate nearly 10,000 robots have inched their way into Japanese factories.

At 2 to 3 percent, unemployment is still low in Japan, but the spread of robots has led the Tokyo government to a study on how the robots are affecting the job situation.

Results of the Labor Ministry study aren't known yet but Japanese managers seem optimistic about ultimate worker-robot harmony.

"We have no trouble with the labor union," says Tsuneo Nakayama, head of administration at Nissan's Zama plant, where 90 percent of the welding has been taken over by robots.

"We have retrained all the affected workers and transferred them to other jobs. Unlike foreign countries, we don't fire or lay off displaced workers."

Charles Seasholes

Charles Lyon Seasholes, 84, died Wednesday' Aug. 12' after a long illness. A prominent Baptist clergyman, Dr. Seasholes was pastor for 35 years of the First Regular Baptist Church in Dayton' Ohio.

After graduating from Newton Theological Institution (now Andover Newton) in 1923, he served the Watertown Baptist Church for seven years. Following his retirement from the Dayton church, he was interim minister of First Baptist Church in Newton, First Baptist in Boston and churches in Pittsfield' West Springfield, Medford, Needham, Westwood, and West Hartford, Conn.

Dr. Seasholes was a member of the board of managers of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society and was active on various other committees of the American Baptist Convention.

He was a trustee on Denison University, and received the honorary degree, doctor of humane letters, from the university in 1944.

He also held the degree doctor of divinity from Brown University and Colby College.

He was a long-time member of the Ministers' Club of Boston, and belonged to the American Baptist Theological Circle of the Boston area.

Dr. Seasholes is survived by his wife' Mrs. Elizabeth Seasholes; two daughters, Molly Taylor of Bangalore' India; and Anne Sharyon of Modesto, Calif.; a son, Bradbury' of Newton Centre; and 14 grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held Sept. 8 at 2 p.m. in First Baptist Church, Newton Centre. The family requests that, in lieu of flowers, contributions be sent to the church memorial fund.

I. Milton Sacks

Former Newton resident I. Milton Sacks of Jamaica Plain, died Friday, Aug. 14, at Parker Hill Hospital after a long illness. He was 62.

Mr. Sacks was a leading authority on Vietnam and Southeast Asia and had been a member of the Brandeis University Politics Department since 1955.

At the time of his death he was the Morris Hillquit Professor of Labor and Social Thought at Brandeis.

Professor Sacks was educated at the College of the City of New York and the University of California as a Vietnamese language and far east expert. He received his doctorate at Yale in 1960.

Professor Sacks joined the Brandeis faculty in 1955 as an instructor and later became an assistant and an associate professor.

He was named dean of students in 1962 and dean of undergraduate studies a year later. He was appointed to the Hillquit Chair in 1969.

A former chairman of the Politics Department and the faculty senate, he also served as a faculty representative to the Brandeis board of trustees.

Professor Sacks was also a research assistant at Yale, taught far eastern courses at Boston University and was one of the participating teachers in the Ford Foundation's college program dealing with Southeast Asia.

A veteran of World War II trained in military intelligence, he served from 1946-49 as an intelligence and research analyst in the Far Eastern Division of the Office of Intelligence and Research for the State Department.

Professors Sacks is survived by two children, Judith and Paul Sacks of Newton Highlands; his sister, Beatrice Suskin of Virginia; his mother, Frances Sacks of Florida; and his father ' Abraham Sacks of Virginia.

Burial was private. A memorial service will be held at Brandeis after the opening of the academic year.

John Quinn

John W. Quinn, a 29-year veteran of the Newton Police Department who retired in June, died Sunday' Aug. 16, while vacationing on Cape Cod.

During his career with the Newton Police, he served as president of the Newton branch of the Massachusetts Police Association, the Newton Police Memorial Association and the Newton Police Benefit Association.

He also served as vice president and board member of those organizations.

Officer Quinn was chairman of the collective bargaining committee and one of the founders of the union.

He held several commendations for exceptional police work during his career.

Police Chief William Quinn (no relation) said he was once John Quinn's partner and also faced him across the bargaining table as they progressed in the department.

"John was always fair and firm. He fought for his union, came to the bargaining table fully prepared, won some points and lost some, and always conducted himself as an officer and a gentleman," Quinn recalled.

John Quinn

Officer Quinn is survived by his wife, Marie A., a member of the Traffic Supervisors Association; a daughter, Donna Marie of Newton; three brothers, Michael and Charles of Newton and James of Braintree; and two sisters, Marion Hommel of East Falmouth and Ruth Duffy of Newton. He was also the brother of the late Owen Quinn, a Newton police officer.

Visiting hours will be held Wednesday, Aug. 19, from 2-4 and 7-9 p.m. at the Martin Conroy Funeral Home, 439 Washington St.

A funeral mass will be celebrated Thursday, Aug. 20' at 10 a.m. at Our Lady's Church. Burial will be in Newton Cemetery.

Dorothy Rozefsky

Dorothy Goldberg Rozefsky, 79, of Worcester, died Sunday in Waltham Hospital.

Mrs. Rozefsky was a former Broadway singing star who appeared as the operatic soprano of the 1920's Broadway musical, "George White's Scandals." Her stage name was Victoria Herbert.

She was a pupil of Buzzi Peccia in New York City among whose pupils were Alma Gluck and Sophie Breslau. She was the widow of Allick Rozefsky who died in 1964.

She leaves a son, Harold E. Rozefsky of Newton Centre; a daughter, Ethel Pais of Binghamton, N.Y.; a brother, Louis Goldberg of Hollywood, Fla., two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 11 a.m. at the Perlman Funeral Home, Worcester, with burial in the B'nai B'rith Cemetery in Worcester. Memorial week will be observed through Friday noon at 74 Oak Hill Street.

Pasquale Marrazzo

A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday, Aug. 18' in St. Bernard's Church for Pasquale Marrazzo.

Mr. Marrazzo, 91, of West Newton, died Saturday, Aug. 15, in Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a long illness. Born in Policastro' Italy, he had lived in West Newton for 68 years.

Mr. Marrazzo was a retired city worker and veteran of World War I. He was a member of Italian Veterans of the First World War, American Legion Post No. 48, the Waltham Lodge of Moose No. 1018 and the St. Bernard's Holy Name Society.

Husband of Maria Marrazzo, he is survived by three daughters, Mary Costanzo, Rose Costanzo, both of Maynard, and Marie Diaz of Atlantic City ' N.J.; two sons, Joseph of Marlboro and Salvatore of West Newton; his sister' Catherine Marrazzo of Italy; 17 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Burial is in Newton Cemetery.

Joseph Venuto Jr.

A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday, Aug. 18, in Corpus Christi Church for Joseph Venuto Jr.

Mr. Venuto' 58, of Auburndale, died Friday, Aug. 14, in Faulkner Hospital, Jamaica Plain.

PROBATE COURT
Middlesex, ss.
No. 529107

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Sarah E. Cronin, late of Newton, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R.Civ.P. Rule 72 that the first and final account of John M. Mullen as Executor (the fiduciary) under the will of said deceased has been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge on or before the twenty-fourth day of September, 1981, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account. If you desire to object to any item of said account, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R.Civ.P. Rule 5.

Witness, Sheila E. McGovern, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this seventh day of August, 1981.

Detector may have curtailed damage

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A significant amount of the $2 million in fire damage at the Meadowbrook Junior High School could have been avoided if the building contained smoke detectors rather than antiquated heat detectors, according to Fire Chief Edward Reilly.

Reilly said Monday that the Aug. 15 fire would have been "minor" if the building was equipped with smoke detectors.

Reilly said smoke detectors would have been tripped long before the heat detectors and firefighters probably would have been able to contain the blaze which totally destroyed the library and two science rooms.

"A flame must be directly under a heat detector for it to trip," said Reilly. "A smoke detector catches flames in their incipient stage and keeps damage as small as possible. They are very sensitive and do work."

The veteran fire official, who requested that city buildings be equipped with smoke detectors more than a year ago, stressed that smoke detectors have been the major factor in a 50 percent reduction of the fire related deaths throughout the country.

Three teenagers were arrested in connection with the Meadowbrook fire and charged with arson and breaking and entering. The three teenagers who pleaded innocent to the charges are: Eric Krasignor, 19, of 90 Clearwater Road in Newton; Leslie Alberts, 19, of 96 Levbert Road in Newton and Michael

Despite new law

Condo renters face eviction

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Despite a recently passed ordinance which gives renters a two-year grace period before they can be removed because of condominium conversion, several tenants at 37 - 39 Commonwealth Avenue have received eviction notices.

The owners, Harold Garnick and Richard Cohen, notified tenants several months ago of the conversion of the 17 units. Most of the 13 remaining, tenants were ordered to leave the building before Sept. 1.

However, under a new ordinance regulating condominium conversion, the tenants now have a two-year grace period.

The ordinance, which was approved by the Board of Aldermen last week, goes into effect Thursday.

James Marcus, an attorney for the owners of the building, would not comment on the eviction notices. Marcus also refused to confirm or deny that the law firm was bringing a suit to challenge the condominium ordinance.

"I do not comment on my client's affairs," he said.

Marcus, however, warned aldermen several weeks ago that he would challenge the ordinance in court if it passed.

Suzanne Strickland, a tenant at the apartment complex and spokesman for the group, said tenants are planning on hiring a lawyer to fight the owners of the building in court.

"We are just horrorified," she exclaimed. "This is nothing short of harassment... The law has been passed and they are just doing everything they can to get us out of this place."

"We are digging in now," Strickland continued. "We are getting a lawyer and we will fight this to the very end...People have a responsibility to stand up to this; if we don't they (developers) will get away with it again and again."

She added: "They will stop at nothing. They are absolutely ruthless."

Several aldermen, along with City Solicitor Daniel Funk, have contended that the ordinance is illegal without enabling legislation from Beacon Hill.

Funk advised aldermen they do not have the legal authority to pass the ordinance. However, it will be Funk or a member of his staff that will be forced to defend the ordinance in court if a suit is brought against aldermen.

"It's a tough position to be in," admitted Funk, "because I realize I'm arguing against myself."

Funk pointed out, however, that it is part of his job as an attorney to defend his client even after his advice has not been followed.

When asked if he could make a case for the ordinance, Funk responded: "There are other arguments. It is not cut and dry."

Mayor Theodore Mann, who said he supports the legislation, has apparently decided to follow Funk's advice.

Mann has refused to sign or veto the bill. If the mayor does not sign an ordinance within 10 days, it automatically becomes law.

Mann added that he could not in "good conscience" veto the ordinance.

Mayors pay tossed back to aldermen

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Despite an attempt by aldermen to remove themselves from the political onus surrounding a possible raise in mayoral salary, a citizens advisory group has tossed the issue back to the floor of the chamber.

Reaffirming its original stance, the Citizens Committee to Study Mayoral and Aldermanic Pay failed to recommend a raise for the office of mayor last week.

Many alderman have stated privately that they would sanction the committee's vote on mayoral salary. However, without the advisory grouprecommendation for a raise-which many alderman were surprised didnot surfaceboard members will be forced to make "their own"decision without having the committee report to fall back on.

The seven member advisory group was called together for a "special meeting" last Wednesday night according to Chairman Oscar Wasserman to clear up the committee's stance in respect to the salary for the office of mayor.

Wasserman said there was some confusion expressed by aldermen because the committee did not voice a recommendation on mayoral compensation despite a 4 to 2 vote against a pay hike.

Five votes were were needed for a formal recommendation.

He mentioned there was added confusion because some committee members were unaware of the possibility of an incremental pay boost for the office.

"We could put the issue to rest if we took these into account," Wasserman explained after three hours of deliberations.

Although the committe previously voted 4 to 2 not to change the present mayoral salary of $37,500, the group then voted 3 to 2 with one abstention to raise the salary of the office with 5 percent step raises beginning Jan.1,1983.

However, because the committee again did not have five votes on the prevailing side, it failed to voice a recommendation.

Aldermen delayed vote on mayoral and aldermanic compensation Aug. 10 (the last meeting of the full board), by employing a parlimentary delaying tactic. The "charter" initiated by Alderman Donald Budge,allowed the committee and the board, time to reconsider their respective stances.

Yet several committee members objected to the ploy and said that aldermen "ducked" the issue by tossing the "political football" back into the advisory group's lap.

At the Aug. 10 meeting, aldermen denied a substitution of committee reports which would have allowed for board members to vote on the recommendation of the Finance Committee. As recommended by finance chairman Edward Richmond, the mayoral salary, if approved by alderman, would have been raised to $48,240 by Jan.1,1981.

Candidate Mark White walking campaign trail

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

This article is part of a three-part series The Newton-Graphic will run to familiarize our readers with the candidates for the city's mayoral seat. Campaign stories on Mayor Theodore Mann and Bruce Marquis will appear at later dates.

NEWTON — It was close to midnight on Aug. 10, the last full meeting of the Board when Alderman Paul Coletti referred to the alderman from ward 7 as "Mayor Mark White."

White, who had removed himself from his seat, looked up from his conversation with Alderman Robert Tennant.

"What was that?" asked White of Coletti.

"Should Mayor Mark White decide to clean out the present administration's support staff, I might consider voting for a raise," continued Coletti, speaking against raising the mayoral salary.

White, now in tune with what his fellow alderman was saying, laughed. So did others.

White, an alderman for the past eight years, obviously liked the sound. Mayor Mark White.

It was the end of a long evening, one that included final votes on the Druker proposal for Newton Corner and a condominium conversion ordinance that would protect renters in the city from short-term notice eviction.

For White, it was a successful evening politically. He had been in the forefront of the condo ordinance and had opposed the Druker proposal.

White, for his efforts, had won votes on both items. If can get these people out to the polls in September, it will help.

White...wants it badly

White, 32, wants to unseat the incumbent Mayor Theodore Mann come the November election. And he wants it bad.

But the alderman's first test will be the primary on September 22 when he sqaures off against candidate Bruce Marquis. Mann should be a sure bet as one of the run-off winners.

For White, Marquis has been a nuisance. Without a third mayoral candidate, White figures he could have "shocked" Mann right out of office.

With Marquis, a Waban businessman and self-professed "manager" in the running, White is forced into a primary; an election that will give Mann a barometer to measure his opponent's strength.

Yet White, who confesses he is "running against Mann, not Marquis," is aiming to beat the mayor in the primary or at worst come close.

"I have to be close to the mayor," remarks a confident White. "If the mayor is far ahead (at the primary), the race is all over."

White wants to (and needs to) prove to voters that he is a viable candidate and could give Mann, a three-term mayor, a run for his money.

No one said it was going to be easy.

White, who knows this as well as anyone, has moved his campaign from the floor of the chamber and has taken to the streets. Marching door-to-door every weekday evening he is attempting to rattle the political consciousness of the grassroots electorate.

Ward 6, Precinct 3 is the target tonight. In the 1977 mayoral election, it was the most active precinct in the city in November and second to Ward 8, Precinct 4 (Mann's home turf) in the primary.

Mann, who topped candidate Peter Harrington by more than 3,000 votes, took the precinct by less than 200 votes. White, who came in second to fellow ward Alderman Dominic Taglienti by almost 500 votes, won here by 31.

"It's a tough area," confesses White. "The mayor is relatively liked down here or is known on a personal level."

Keven Smyth

Nonantum fancies Keven

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NONANTUM—It may be a little uncommon for a native Irishman to be entertaining people in an old Italian neighborhood, singing sad Irish ballads and songs of the Irish Republican Army, but Keven Smyth has been very successful in this unusual setting.

In fact, he is now as much a fixture here as the tranquil seascape and sculptured boats that decorate the walls of this cozy Nonantum lounge.

"I've been coming here for years to see Keven," remarks a 45-year-old Boston attorney,"He's a great guy. Everyone likes him."

For seven years now, Smyth, 30, has been performing at J.B.'s Steak House on Watertown Street, wooing his audience with love songs and ballads about beautiful, distant places.It's a job that he describes as challenging, particularly because the lounge attracts a varied audience. But, he says,it's also a pleasure, because Smyth loves to be surrounded by people, young or old."This is a very intimate place. I like personal contact and that's what you get here," says Smyth, who never lets patron comeinto the lounge without giving them a cheerful greeting-or leave without bidding them farewell.

His enthusiasm for music and entertaining began long ago. As a young boy growing up in his uncle's home in Cavan, Ireland, the vivacious young Smyth enjoyed entertaing friends and relatives by imitating popular music groups."I liked the Beatles," he remebers, and still plays several Beatle favorat..s.

But when he was 10 years old, uncle warned him not to dream of a music career, because, the uncle insisted, Smyth would waste his life singig in bam rooms. "They were dead set against it."

But young Smyth persisted. "I'm very stubborn," he says in a melodious Irish accent,"It's in the blood you see!"

Fortunately for his numerous fans, Smyth never did heed his uncle's advice. For every Sunday and Monday night the loyal brood of enthusiastic followers flock to J.B.'s to see the cheerful man on the guitar who sings a variety of songs to please almost everyone, including country and western fans or classical music lovers.

"I'm very proud of my own heritage, but I enjoy other cultures just as well," says Smyth,pointing out Spanish music and Rockabilly as other favorites. "I always liked countrywestern. Irish people like it too."

Smyth epitomizes the words,"Irish charm." No sooner had I introduced myself before a gentle kiss was placed on my hand, and a handsome, green-eyed gentleman grinned widely at me from beneath a head of slightly shaggy golden hair and well trimmed mustache.

His face bears whimsical expressions as he sings about mystical characters in "Puff the Magic Dragon," or the ludicrous folks described in, "What do you do with a drucken sailor."

While the crowd revels in the fast— paced Irish drinking songs or sings along with Smyth as he croons an Irish lullaby, Smyth laughs and smiles, clearly happy with his audiences' participation.

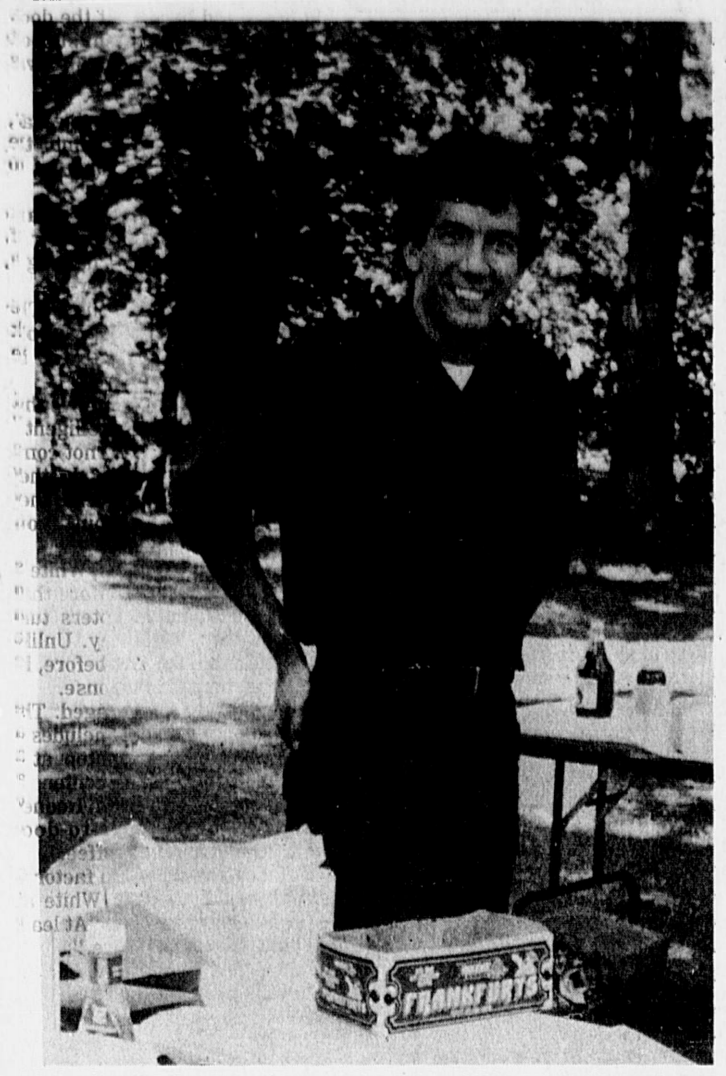

"Everyone loves him," insists Joseph Bianchi, owner of J.B.'s. "He's cheerful and happy and adds life and color here. He attracts all different types of crowds."

"I come for the Irish tunes," says the attorney who has followed Smyth for over four years. "He knows all the Irish songs. I haven't been able to stump him yet!"

Though Smyth is often asked to sing popular Irish tunes such as "Danny Boy" and "Tor a lora lora," his own favorites are those that depict the struggles of Northern Ireland and its people.

"People either sympathize with me-or hate my guts!" However Smyth, who spent a short time pemforming in South Boston, insists that there has never been any trouble at J.B.'s. "You may

Condo ordinance challenged

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The firm converting Chestnut Hill Gardens to condominiums will challenge the city's right to enact a recently passed ordinance regulating condominum conversion.

Newton Attorney David Mofenson said Tuesday his client, CHR General Inc., will file papers this week contesting the city's right to impose a conversion ordinance without enabling legislation from state lawmakers.

"We're embarking on a course of litigation," said Mofenson. "We're petitioning the State Judical Court for an early hearing as to the legality of the ordinance."

CHR General, a subsidiary of The Connecticut Bank and Trust, is converting the 422-unit Chestnut Hill Gardens complex into condominums.

Mofenson, however, stressed that "at this point in time," his client is "going ahead with its present marketing plan."

The ordinance, which is currently on the desk of Mayor Theodore Mann, will become law on Thursday. Under the city charter, if the mayor does not sign or veto a law in 10 days, it automatically becomes law.

Although the mayor is "in favor of regulating condominum conversion," he will not sign an ordinance which he feels is illegal.

The ordinance would allow a tenant a two-year grace period before they can be evicted because of conversion. In addition, if aldermen grant a tenant "hardship status," the renter would be granted an addional three years occupancy.

Funk, who admits he will placed in a "weird situation" when called upon to defend the city, has maintained throughout the deliberations that without state legislation the ordinance is "illegal."

The legislature, which is currently in the middle of a six-week vacation, will reconvene Sept. 8. Mann has sent Gov. Edward J. King a letter requesting calling the legislature back into session to act upon Newton's request. However, even Mann said this possibility is unlikely.

Despite his earlier advice, Funk noted that he "can't leave his clients (the city) hanging."

"Now my job is to make the best argument that I can on my client's behalf and I'll do that," continued Funk. "There is an argument to be made and that is the lawyers' job."

Funk was forced to defend the city, despite advice to the contrary, against the county last year when aldermen voted to withhold county monies as a symbol of protest against unaccountable rising county assessments.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan, who co-sponsored the ordinance with State Rep. David Cohen, said she was "not surprised by the law suit."

"I think it's an issue that needs to be clarified," added Sheehan. "Until it's litigated; that will be the final decision."

Cohen said he "was disappointed by the challenge," noting that CHR General "had indicated they were basically willing to talk and negogiate and now they seem to have abandoned that."

"I think the best interests of the citizens of Newton lie in a vigorous defense of the ordinance," continued Cohen.

CHR General President John Reveruzzi has maintained his firm needs until Sept. 8 to allow its revamped marketing plan to fully unfold.

However, under the emergency preamble which allows the law to go into effect Thursday, the firm will fall 10 days short of its goal.

CHR General presented tenants of the twin-tower complex with a new marketing plan on July 16 after Chestnut Hill Gardens Associates withdrew as contract purchasers.

James Marcus of the Boston law firm of Simons and Marcus has threatened aldermen that he will also challenge the legality of the ordinance in court. His client, Commonwealth Realty Trust (CRT), has begun converting the apartments at 37-39 Commonwealth Avenue (17 units) into condominums.

Marcus contends that aldermen are "running a real risk of personnel liability under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and under the United States Constitution for knowingly and willingly violating the constitutional rights of property owners."

CRT has informed tenants they must vacate by Aug. 31 or face legal action.

Bank merger completed

NEWTON— Suffolk Franklin Savings Bank, Boston, and Mutual Bank for Savings, Newton, have finalized their merger becoming the new Mutual Bank For Savings.

Headquarters for the bank, which will continue to operate under the Suffolk Franklin charter, are located at 45 Franklin St., Boston.

Herbert W. Gray, president, Suffolk Franklin, becomes chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the merged institution. Keith G. Willoughby, president, Mutual Bank for Savings, becomes president of the combined bank.

Gray commented that the decision to adopt the name, Mutual Bank for Savings, was based upon the conviction that it "most appropriately describes what we are; and because it can easily be related to the communities we serve."

Last December, the boards of investment of each bank agreed to seek a merger. In March, an application was filed. The state approved the merger application in May.

The merger will create one of the largest savings banks in Massachusetts with over $1 billion in deposits.

Fire may force students to share three classrooms

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Students and teachers of the Meadowbrook Junior High School, which was gutted by a fire that caused $2 million in damage Aug. 15, may be forced to use classroom and library space at the Oak Hill School.

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink said last week that the School Department is considering using three classrooms at the Oak Hill School which is located directly across the street from Meadowbrook. Furthermore, Fink said the department is considering using library space at either Newton South High School or the Oak Hill Elementary School.

Fink met with school and city officials, including Mayor Theodore Mann and Building Commissioner Allan Fraser, for 60 minutes last Tuesday. The press was barred from the administrative session.

Three teenagers were arraigned Monday in Newton District Court on charges of arson and breaking and entering in connection with the school blaze. The three 19-year olders all pleaded innnocent and were released on $100 bail.

School officials are just beginning to assess the damage from the fire.

School Department personnnel will be taking inventory of the damage in the next several weeks. Fink pointed out that virtually all of the audio visual and television equipment housed at the school was destroyed by the fire and will have to be repurchased for the opening of school. In addition, he said that fire caused extensive damage to the school's library and several science labs which must be torn down.

"One of the big jobs is taking inventory for insurance and replacement," explained Fink, noting school officials must determine what educational materials should be ordered immediately for the start of school.

Fink said the staff is taking steps to assure that the school can accomodate 690 students slated to return in September.

"There will be some movement of classrooms in order to accomodate teachers and students," he said.

As a result of declining enrollment, Fink said the School Committee must decide how much of the fire damaged building should be rebuilt. Enrollment for the next two years at the school is slated to be about 700.

Last year, the junior high housed ninth graders and enrollment was 850. The school will only house seventh and eighth graders beginning in September and will be renamed the Charles Brown Junior High School.

Newton man helped reverse lawmaker's decision to quit

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Julian Solingers has never met State Sen. Alan Sisitsky, nor has he heard from the Springfield democrat since Sisitsky decided Wednesday to finish out his senatorial term.

Solingers, a retired professor living in Newton Highlands, however, was part of the reason the 39-year-old Cornell graduate reneged on his intention to prematurely resign from Beacon Hill.

Sisitsky last month announced his resignation effective Sept. 1 in protest of Senate leadership tactics during the struggle over the state budget.

In Sisitsky's statement released earlier in the week, he cited the "overwhelming and completely surprising response from many people throughout Massachusetts urging him to remain in the State Senate."

At the same time, Sisitsky said he intends to run for statewide office next year.

Solingers, "very much surprised" that the senator reversed his decision, wrote one of many letters expressing disappointment in the senator's resignation.

"We do not write fan letters, but your intent to resign prompts us to request that you reconsider and stay," wrote Solingers. "Oh - we need independent courageous people like you in the legislature and stay on and fight."

"I thought that this man had displayed a great deal of courage in the legislature and he had stood firm for issues that were unpopular," Solingers said in a brief telephone interview Thursday.

Sisitsky continually criticized Senate Ways and Means Chairman Chester Atkins during the budget deliberations for proposed cuts in higher education and mental health.

He also blamed Atkins and Senate President William Bulger (D- South Boston) for stalling two weeks before approving an emergency spending bill - which Sisitsky claims cost taxpayers over one-half a million dollars - to pay state salaries and pensions and welfare benefits.

In returning to the senate, Sisitsky cited several other factors, including the obligation to his home district; to assure that his acheivements in the senate are not eroded; so that he could work to reform the budget process; and the prohibitive cost of a special election to choose a successor.

Sept. 2 is last day for primary registration

NEWTON — Election Commissioner Alan Licarie announced Monday that the last day for residents to register to vote in the Sept. 22 preliminary non-partisan city election is Sept. 2.

Licarie said that election officials will be available for voter registeration on Sept. 2 from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Licarie also said that residents can now apply for absentee ballots for both the preliminary and final non-partisan election on Nov. 3. Licarie said that residents can fill out ballots for the preliminary election immediately.

The chief election official said that 25 to 30 residents have already filled out absentee ballots for the preliminary election.

Mayor Theodore Mann will square off against Waban businessman Bruce Marquis and Alderman Mark White in the preliminary election. Licarie said the "tone" of the mayor's race will determine the turnout for the election.

The preliminary election for the mayor's race will be held along with the alderman at large seats that have more than five candidates in the field and the ward and school committee seats that have at least three candidates.

Arts Council sets deadline

BOSTON — The deadline for the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities's Historic Conservation program is October 2.

This annual funding program provides matching funds for professional conservation of objects with artistic or historic significance. Although funds cannot be provided for architectural restoration, decorative arts, manuscripts, documents and rare books are accepted. Applications for microfilming important historical documents so that the originals may be protected will also be considered.

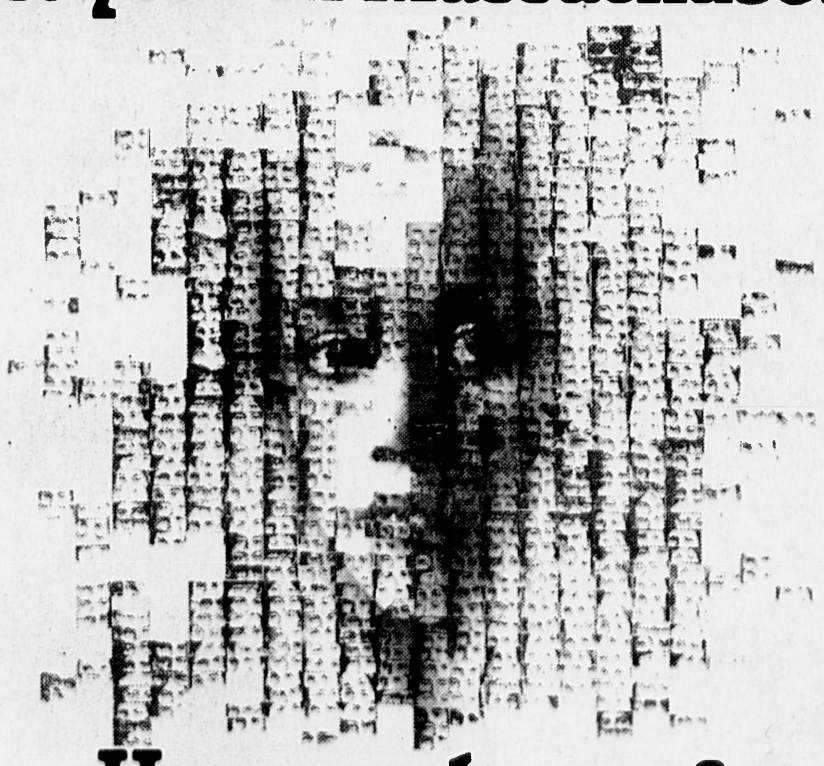

Non-profit organizations incorporated in Massachusetts are eligible to apply.

Funding decisions are based on the artistic or historic merit of the materials to be conserved, the importance of the material to the collection, accessibility of the material to the public, the applicant's ability to preserve the material, and financial need.

After a panel reviews an application, the final funding decision is made by council members, a board of fifteen citizens appointed by the governor. Interested applicants should call the council at (617) 727-3668 for information.

A telephone interview is recommended for applicants unfamiliar with the program. Awards for conservation of materials must be carried out within the period of December 1, 1981 and June 30, 1982.

'Mayor White' sounds good to candidate

White and a campaign worker, Josh Davis, each take a clipboard and take a hand full of leaflets. Davis, a politically active Newton South senior who has campaigned door-to-door for several candidates,will alternate homes with White.

Several houses into the walk, White encounters three maried women with young children. They are all willing to listen for a chance to tell White their complaints.

"How about the maintenance at the Countryside School," asks one resident,"It's certainly ridiculous."

"The condition of the playgrounds are ridiculous in this city," White responds.

"The mayor has put no money into recreational facilities," spouts White. "There is no sense of planning here."

"It's a crisis mentality," he continues.

The attack on Mann's "lack of planning" is one of White's major campaign issues along with the "lack of management" now at City Hall and the administration's "lack of courage."

White informs his audiences that the Mann administration has failed on each count. He blames the mayor for delaying revaluation for the past five years; the lack of a Capital Improvement Program; the string of city assessors during Mann's tenure; and the failure to face up to increasing county and MBTA costs.

"I figure it to be a low turn-out election," says White. "The more people I talk to the better off I'll be."

In the 1977 mayoral primary, approximately 16,000 people voted or just about 32 percent of the city's registered electorate. In the November election, about 50 percent of the voters in the city turned out at the polls.

White anticipates a 20 percent turnout for the September run-off.

At the next home, a middle-aged man asks the candidate "Why he wants to be mayor?"

"The problem is that I really think the city needs a change," answers White. "I just don't think the city is getting better. Something needs to be shaken up."

WHITE ON MAYOR TED MANN: "I have to be close to the mayor (in the primary). If the mayor is far ahead, the race is over."

Without hesitation, White rattles off some of his accomplishments on the Board: "I initiated the process to withhold monies from the county; I was active in the ambulance issue and the recently passed condominium ordinance."

At another home, White pauses to leave a note on one of his brochures. "After September it's a lot easier, they're more people home," he adds. "But at least they know I was here." White has left a personalized leaflet at each home where a resident was out.

White circles the entire precinct finishing up at 7:30. The night, which had started off "mediocre," turns out well. Of the 120 homes that were hit, 86 residents were in.

"The key to this thing is knowing when to leave," says White, "when they don't want to talk and you know you're not going to convince them."

"It's all volumn. You want to hit as many homes as possible," he adds. Tommorrow he will be out again.

He heads into the Oak Hill section of the city, the heart of the mayor's strength, for the night's "coffee."

At 8:10 p.m. White arrives at the home of Steve and Ingrid Kannel to find just seven people in attendence.

"He sounded very energetic and sincere,"notes Ingrid of her house guest. "He's avery hard worker and he impresses us. He's up on the issues."

Mayor Ted Mann

Bruce Marquis

Her husband agrees. "It sounds as though Mark has been around."

After giving his own backround, White attacks Mann's "crisis management mentality," noting that "revaluation should be the biggest issue of the campaign."

He runs through the history of revaluation from 1973 and makes note of this year's second tax bill (which will show the effect of revaluation) that will be mailed after the November election.

On cue, he attacks Mann's "lack of planning;" and his "lack of courage and initiative" in dealing with spiriling county and MBTA costs."

Unlike his outspoken and at times raspy style on the board, White chooses a subdued tone of voice and maintains it throughout the talk. He comes off well, appearing comfortable and confident.

WHITE ON BRUCE MARQUIS: "I'm running against Mann (in the primary), not Marquis."

One guest asks White what his weaknesses are. "I haven't been a mayor of a city and I lack management experience," admits White. "But Ted Mann had none before he was mayor."

"I've been around long enough and have dealt with department heads," he continues. "I know where the bones are buried. I don't think the issue is management as one candidate says, but of knowledge."

"Newton is anice place to live. It has a large tax base and pretty much runs along well by itself," says White. "I just don't think that Teddy Mann has kept up with the times. Fourteen years will be too much."

The "coffee" ends after 10:30. White, admittedly tired, thanks his hosts and heads out the door. The crowd, two of whom support Mann and a third Marquis, was disappointing.

At 7:40 a.m. the following day, White, with Davis, zips into the Riverside MBTA parking lot 10 minutes behind schedule.

"Good-morning, I'm Mark White. I'm running for mayor of Newton," says White, holding a deck of leaflets to a passer-by.

Most, carrying either The Boston Globe or The New York Times, do not want to be bothered.

"The thing about Newton is that the voters are more intelligent," says White. "They may not come out to vote but if they do they won't vote for you unless they know something about you. Visibility is not enough."

After about 50 minutes, White is willing to call it quits. More than half the prospective voters turn out to be from Wellesley. Unlike Newton Centre the day before, he does not get a good response.

Yet he is not discouraged. The remainder of the day includes a visit to Nonantum; a stop at a senior citizen drop-in center; a meeting with Alderman Rodney Barker; more door-to-door soliciting and another coffee.

"I find my recognition factor is gaining rapidly," says White as he turns toward his car. "At least we'll establish a presence."

Sheehan tells tenants to fight their eviction notices

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Alderman Ethel Sheehan, who co-sponsored an ordinance regulating condominium conversions in the city that was recently approved by aldermen, says local developers are "needlessly frightening" tenants.

Despite the passage of the ordinance, which goes into effect Aug. 27, a number of tenants throughout the city have received eviction notices ordering them to leave their apartments by Sept. 1.

Under the ordinance, city renters have a two-year grace period before they can be removed for a conversion. Sheehan stressed that the ordinance regulates all condominium conversions in the city.

The Ward 6 aldermen criticized local developers for pressuring tenants in the wake of the new ordinance. Sheehan said some developers are "frightening and upsetting people."

"These people don't have to move," she asserted. "This ordinance protects these people. I think they (tenants) should fight this thing."

Several tenants at 37-39 Commonwealth Ave. (17 rental units) have been served with eviction notices despite the new law. The renters have formed a tenants association and plan on fighting the developer in court.

An attorney for the owners of the building, James Marcus, has refused to comment on the eviction notices. However, Marcus warned aldermen that he would challenge the ordinance in court if it was approved.

Several aldermen, along with City Solicitor Daniel Funk, have contended that the ordinance is illegal without enabling legislation from state lawmkers.

Alderman Jospeph DePasquale, who led the battle against the ordinance, criticized Sheehan and others for "giving tenants a false sense of security" by voting for the ordinance. DePasquale claims the ordinance will be declared in violation of the state constitution.

Only cities and towns with rent control currently have the authority to regulate conversions. In the past year, condominium conversion ordinances in Framingham, Acton and Amherst have been declared illegal.

The Newton condominium ordinance, which was also sponsored by state Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton), requires developers obtain a permit before converting rental units to condominiums.

The ordinance provides tenants with personal "hardships" a five-year grace period before they can be removed for a conversion. Developers violating the new ordinance face a fine of up to $300.

MBTA closes plant

SOUTH BOSTON — In a move expected to save the MBTA over $700,000 this year and up to $10 million over the next two years, the MBTA closed the last remaining transit power plant in the nation today, MBTA General Manager James F. O'Leary announced.

"It is no longer economically feasible for the MBTA to generate its own power," said O'Leary, who noted that other transit authorities got out of the business of generating their own power years ago.

Radios can't be used in mutual aid

NEWTON — The Fire Department's present radios, tagged by Fire Chief Edward Reilly as "absolutely worhtless," cannot be used in mutual aid fire emergencies.

Reilly, who is head of the area's Metro Fire District, has requested funds to replace the antiquated radios.

The Metro-Fire District – composed of virtually all the 32 cities and towns within the Rte. 128 semicircle, provides mutual assistance to area communities during fire emergencies.

Mutual aid fire companies from a number of communities stood by in Newton fire stations while local firefighter battled the Aug. 15 blaze at the Meadowbrook Junior High School which resulted in $2 million in damage.

The present fire department radios have absolutely no mutual aid capability, according to a report by Ackerman Communications of Waltham.

Unlike Newton's older model radios, the areawide Mutual Fire system uses a more sophisticated U.H.F. system.

Because of the poor receiver system, which would also be solved by the U.H.F. system, there are many places in the city where the radios are completely incapable of reaching headquarters.The report says this could prevent an assistant chief from requesting more apparatus at a fire scene.

The report also noted that because the fire department radios operate on an old low band frequency they are subject to "atmospheric skip" which results in interfering radio messages from out of state departments including the Los Angeles Fire Department.

If Newton were to switch to the U.H.F. channel used by the Metro Fire District, the interference would be eliminated, according to the short report.

The low frequency of the radios also prevents them from being used inside buildings because they can not project signals through the structural steel of modern buildings.

In addition, often parts can not be obtained to repair the 25-year-old radios.

According to the report, the Newton radios, which are primarily vacum tube type units, have been obsolete since 1964 when the communications industry generally switched to transistorized equipment.

Opportunity lost

When the Newton Board of Aldermen voted down a $38 million revitalization of Newton Corner, they may have turned their backs on the last, best hope of salvaging an area of the city that has been deterioriating steadily.

They said "no" to 300 units of much needed rental housing, "no" to much-needed parking space, "no" to revamping commercial offerings in the area, and "no" to an office building with the ancilliary benefit of adding shopping patrons.

They let minor matters, financing of the parking garage and whether or not it could be put entirely underground, derail an innovative and bold revamping of an area that is a blot on the landscape of the city.

The Newton Corner developer, Ronald Druker, spent more than a year in consultation with various area interest groups, working on a plan that would be satisfactory to all. That residential tenants paying abnormally low rents in the Gorin-Leeder building would never be satisfied is understandable, but that Aldermen would base votes on their sentiments is hard to fathom.

It is even more perplexing when one considers that the residential tenants would have been relocated in the apartments the Druker development provided!

Now there will be no apartments, not even those presently in the Gorin-Leeder Building. Yes, the tenants maintain that they will "fight" Ronald Druker's alternate proposal to build office buildings, one on the Gorin-Leeder site and one across the street, but he can construct them by right under the existing zoning.

That means he can construct them without consultation with tenants, neighborhood groups or a vote of the Board of Aldermen. He can evict the tenants and raze the Gorin-Leeder Building.

They can fight him, but on what basis? That it is depriving them of housing? He can answer that he intended to house them, but they, and the Board of Aldermen, said "no" to his plan.

There has been talk in the aftermath of this project's defeat that Ronald Druker will come back to the Board of Aldermen with a scaled down version of his original plan and seek aldermanic approval. Some, we understand, even voted on this basis.

Ronald Druker does not strike us as the type of man who would do this. He made an effort in good faith that consumed more than a year in time and several hundred thousand dollars in planning. We think, and he says, he will go ahead with his plan to tear down the building and build office space.

And if we are correct, then the City of Newton has lost a great deal. Yes, Mr. Druker would have made a substantial amount of money and was not acting out of the kindness of his heart; but at least his plan offered the many opportunities and services that area so sorely needs.

Only time will tell whether this lost chance on the part of our elected Aldermen has done more harm than they apparently hoped to avoid.

Perspectives

My Turn

Where are our statesmen?

By Cynthia Black

This is the summer of my discontent with the Newton Board of Aldermen.

The aldermanic response to Ronald Druker's Newton Corner project, condominium conversion and mayoral pay are cause for genuine concern.

Ald. Robert Gaynor said it best when commenting on the defeat of the Newton Corner project: "The tenants won the battle and lost the war."

Newton Corner is an eyesore, and the Gorin-Leeder building has been described in the past by this city's newspapers as a "tenement," marble sinks and wrought-iron bannisters notwithstanding.

I can't find fault with the tenants for wishing to maintain the status quo of extremely low rents in a city where rental units are costly and scarce.

But I do find fault with aldermen basing decisions on the cries of a few over the general good of us all.

The scenario is the same for any development in Newton. The developer makes his proposal, the neighbors rise in righteous wrath and vow to fight to the death to stop it, the aldermen chip away at it bit by bit, and it ultimately passes or fails.

It takes a patient developer to do business in Newton.

Granted, the Druker proposal was big. Newton Corner is the only place in this city that could accommodate something on that scale because it is literally the corner of the city and its character as a village was destroyed long ago by the turnpike.

Druker had all the bases covered. He was offering a mixture of housing, office space, stores, open space and parking.

I don't know about the office space, but this city certainly is in dire need of mixed housing, parking and some earthly reason to ever go to Newton Corner in the first place.

His request that the city help foot the bill for part of the cost of the parking was reasonable. It was, after all, a small price to pay for the benefits accruing.

His last minute change in plans probably did him more harm than good.

The 80,000 of us that don't live in the Gorin-Leeder building are the real losers, but, as always, we don't make as much noise as the people directly affected by any proposed development when we really should.

We have 16 aldermen elected at-large and eight ward aldermen. The system is based on the idea that the ward aldermen, by nature, take a more parochial view of issues directly affecting the wards. The aldermen-at-large, on the other hand, are the ones who are supposed to provide the balance of working for the general good of the city.

The Druker proposal would have benefitted the city as a whole, and we were abandoned by the following aldermen-at-large: Wendell Bauckman, Paul Coletti, Richard McGrath, James Miller, Terry Morris and Dominic Taglienti and Mark White.

While on the one hand the city fathers are denying us more than 300 units of rental housing, on the other they are squabbling over a condominium conversion ordinance.

There's nothing like consistency.

Before they take too many bows over the condominium restrictions, I have a question: "Where were you five years ago?"

The fact is, when it comes to conversion, the damage has already been done. With the exception of developments on Commonwealth Avenue in Auburndale, Farwell Street in Newtonville and Lexington Street in Auburndale, where are there rental units in apartment complexes left in Newton?

Rental housing stock has dwindled to the point of nonexistence. And the aldermen sat by and allowed virtually every apartment development to be converted to condominiums without ever proposing any restrictions.

Coupled with the denial of the Druker plan for rental housing, the condominium ordinance may indeed be too little too late.

Finally, the discussions over raises for the aldermen and mayor are about to degenerate into the laughable.

Again, we have the Board of Aldermen stampeded into a corner by a small group of people; this time for purely political reasons.

An anti-Mann faction does not want the mayor to have a pay raise. It is busy lobbying furiously to see that the mayoral salary is not increased.

There's only one problem with this. The salary increase is for the mayor, not for Ted Mann.

If the people of this city don't want Ted Mann as their mayor anymore, they will express that sentiment on Sept. 22 in the preliminary election and Nov. 3 in the general election. This is our right and the proper context in which to express it.

The question of raising the mayoral salary is a separate issue entirely. The salary, by charter, can only be reviewed every four years and applies only to a new term.

Viewed purely in that context, isn't it ludicrous to expect that anyone overseeing a job would countenance eight years without a raise in salary?

The issue of salary was deliberately structured to keep it from being the political football it has become. And while the "blue ribbon committee" maunders on about Proposition 2 ½ and symbols, practicality dictates the salary issue be considered in its proper context where inflation and common sense should be prominent in the discussion.

So where are our statesmen? Where are our aldermen with courage to serve the general good of the city over the petty interests of small pressure groups?

Is it any wonder there is so little interest on the part of citizens seeking election to this Board of Aldermen? Disturbing, yes; surprising, no.

Where are the aldermen with the grace under pressure of an Eliot Cohen? Where are the aldermen with the financial acumen and savvy of a Sid Small? Where are the aldermen with the gentleness and patience of a Michael Antonellis, the wit of an Alan Barkin, the determination of a Lois Pines or the vision of a Joe McL nnell?

We're beginning to need them desperately.

Right spot for waste cart

By Loring Swaim

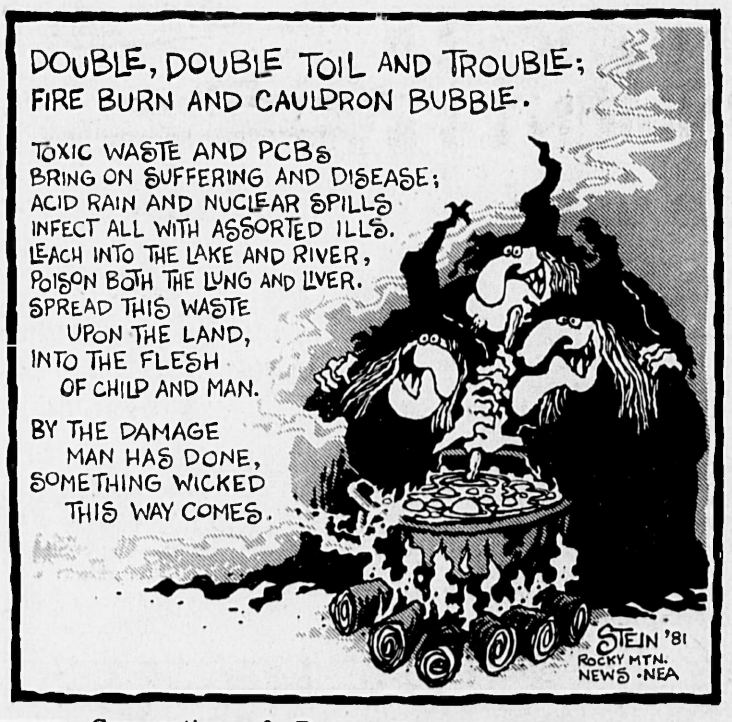

BOSTON — Two new out-of-state companies interested in cleaning up hazardous waste in Massachusetts passed their initial tests last week in the Commonwealth's lengthy new approval process, regarded as one of the toughest and most innovative in the nation.

The multi-million-dollar proposals of the two firms received a preliminary screening by the Hazardous Waste Facility Site Safety Council. Then they were stamped "feasible and deserving." That gives them the green light to proceed to Step Two — allowing communities to bid for their services.

A whole new checklist of procedures has been developed by the Safety Council to try to put the waste cart in the right spot behind the horse. At long last the Council is encouraging communities to come forward and seek help with their waste, rather than, as in the past, having the state grab the ball and impose its will and proposals on reluctant and resistant cities and towns.

IT Corporation of California is the latest to enter the Massachusetts scene. It is offering a $100 million project to deal with at least some of the Commonwealth's 300,000 tons of hazardous waste annually. Likewise, Liqwacon Corporation of Pennsylvania has come forward with a more modest $5 million proposal. Both, significantly, are non site-specific. They are general proposals for use wherever in the state they might be wanted, to be screened by the Safety Council, then laid before interested communities. IT claims that just since making its intentions known, 12 towns have put out feelers, plus one landowner.

A third firm, Solvent Recovery Services, Inc. (SRS) of New Jersey is taking a different tack. It has already purchased land in Haverhill's Ward Hill industrial park off Route 495 with plans for a $5 million plant to recover and recycle solvents. It, however, is meeting resistance. The site happens to be within 100 feet of the Merrimack River and on low-lying land which half a century ago was flooded by a freak but possibly cyclical flood. Wells, water systems and shellfish industries downstream could be endangered, say skeptics, and SRS has admittedly had problems with a project in Connecticut.

Automotive and industrial oils, solvents, chemicals, acids, plastics, resins, etc. that constitute hazardous wastes represent a serious problem in Massachusetts — and a 1.5 million ton problem for New England. This is not to mention more troublesome wastes like spent nuclear fuel and low-level radioactive waste from the region's hospitals and factories. And mountains of solid waste, garbage and trash are accumulating while landfill sites shrink.

The difficulties inherent in dealing with these seemingly intractable problems are epitomized by Haverhill's experience. Three Bay State governors have eyed this city as the location for grandiose plans for a regional waste disposal facility that would feature technological breakthroughs. A company called UOP from Illinois has long been prepared to build a disposal and incineration plant that would also provide steam or electricity to neighboring towns or industries. Its difficulty was that the state preempted the project and pushed so hard Haverhill citizens got their backs u. A referendum showed voters opposed to a 3000-tons-a-day plant to cater to the entire Merrimack Valley and take advantage of economies of scale. Thus spurned in Haverhill, UOP was invited to North Andover where it enjoys a warmer welcome and is proceeding with a scaled-down, 900-ton project, with discreet state backing. (Haverhill subsequently reversed itself in a referendum, but UOP could not be lured back.)

Have a Coke... and a smile for blacks

By Julian Bond

Jesse Jackson has done black America a real favor.

The president of Operation PUSH has negotiated what he calls "a moral covenant" with the giant of the U.S. soft-drink industry, the Coca-Cola Co.

The company — after nine months of secret meetings and the threat of a black boycott of its products — agreed to do the following:

— Establish a $1.8 million venture capital fund for loans to blacks in businesses associated with the soft-drink industry.

— Appoint 32 black fountain wholesalers and wine distributors by August 1982. They will be provided with special training and lists of prospective customers worth an estimated $1.3 million.

— Double its advertising in black-owned newspapers and magazines and increase to $2 million its advertising on black-owned radio stations.

— Award an $8 million account for one of its product lines to a black-owned advertising agency.

— Boost its deposits in black-owned banks from $250,000 to an estimated $2 million.

— Increase its contributions to black organizations and institutions, including endowing scholarships at black colleges and universities.

— Increase to $14 million its minority purchasing program.

— Hire blacks to fill 100 blue-collar openings over the next year and increase its percentage of black managers from 5 percent to 12 percent (or about 200 people). Jackson estimated the value of these jobs at $5.2 million.

The workers who will fill these jobs, the colleges that will receive scholarships and the businesses that will profit from the agreement owe Jackson a vote of thanks.

But many others ought to be grateful, too.

Jackson has revived a potent weapon and made it available to every black man and women in the United States. He has breathed new life into the boycott.

It was 26 years ago that another boycott propelled Martin Luther King Jr. into history and won integrated seating on city buses in Montgomery, Ala.

It was 20 years ago that the Rev. Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia organized 400 black ministers in his city. They used their pulpits to withdraw patronage from businesses that were heavily dependent on black dollars.

Donald Keough, the president of Coca-Cola, said that the boycott threat had no effect on his company. In fact, he said that it was Ronald Reagan, not Jesse Jackson, who inspired the "moral convenant."

"The pause that refreshes" — Coca-Cola's old slogan — can become the pause that reinvigorates a movement that badly needs victories and badly needs to learn how to win them.

I'll drink a Coke to that.

Opinions

To the Editor:

Ward 8 residents and citizens of Newton deserve an alderman who will take a stand on important and sometimes difficult local issues such as the revitalization of Newton Corner.

Whether one supports the Druker plan or opposes it, surely Ward 8 residents deserve to be represented on such an important vote. Shame on Robert Katz for abandoning his civic responsibilities and taking a walk when the vote came up.

Notes from Nick

To the Editor:

I see the aldermen want a $400 raise. I don't think they need it, but when the School Committee can give all the raises it wants to anytime it wants to and the mayor can do the same thing with the department heads, I don't blame them for asking.

I see the Newton free paper says the mayor is a tiger at the office and a pussycatat home. I would like to get some of this Jekyll and Hyde medicine because I am a tiger in both places. As far as I'm concerned, you can't change your stripes.

I enjoy the farmer's market at City Hall on Tuesdays. It reminds me of Salem Street in the North End. All it needs now is a rug stall and a few barkers.

Now is a good time to get some of these women off the School Committee. They have been under Aaron Fink's thumb for long enough.

There is one thing that the Newton Health Department can't regulate, and that's health clubs.

Try more regulations on lice in the schools. You'll earn your week's pay.

Nick's Notes receives criticism quoting Shakespeare and the late Ambassador Morrow. I've got a criticism: Use common sense and stop thinking you're the only one with ideas. Shakespeare and Morrow, etc., are dead. Use your own mind. I do.

The Druker deal is a typical land deal. He said it would do so much for the city, but wanted $2.5 million. He knew that if he got what he wanted for free, we would give him all he needed because he would have the taxpayers in the palm of his hand.

Up at bat

To the Editor:

What a thrill, to get up at bat, hit the softball hard and far enough to be safe at first.

"So what" you say. For a guy that never got to play ball as a kid, it's a big deal for me. Oh, I played football for Newton High back in '42, but I just wasn't any good at hardball or softball.

So when the young Newton Fire Department softball team lets this 57 year old get in on some of the action, why it's a whole new ball game for me. Thanks guys.

Futile maneuvers

To the Editor:

On Monday, Aug. 17, the Board of Aldermen passed a much needed ordinance which will protect tenants in the City of Newton from being evicted on short notice by condominium developers.

The ordinance requires condominium developers to obtain a permit from the Board of Aldermen before they can proceed to convert apartments into condominiums. It also gives tenants two years notice before they can be evicted from their apartments. If there are unusual circumstances, the Board of Aldermen can grant "hardship status," which would provide qualified tenants an extra three years before they canbe evicted.

A special preamble, which declared a public emergency due to the amount of condominium conversions taking place in the city, was also passed to allow the ordinance to take effect in 10 days, rather than the usual 30 day wait. The ordinance is basically a good piece of compromise legislation that protects tenants from abrupt evictions due to condominium conversions.

I think it was very unfortunate that the present Ward 1 alderman, Joe DePasquale, not only voted against the ordinance and the preamble, but was also the major instigator of a series of parliamentary procedurcs which helped to drag out the entire process for another week.

Since the ordinance always had the necessary votes to pass, these maneuvers by Ald. DePasquale proved futile and served only to buy time for the developers, while needlessly worrying many people who were fighting for their homes.

Ald. DePasquale maintains that he voted against the ordinance because the City Solicitor advised the aldermen that they did not have the power to pass it without state approval, the result being an inevitable court battle over the ordinance.

If Ald. DePasquale was so concerned about going to court over the constitutionality of the ordinance, why then, in another instance, did he ignore the advice of the City Solicitor and proceed to go to court to fund the in-house ambulance service?

To me, the issues brought out in both instances warranted action by the Board of Aldermen. It was necessary, in my opinion, for the board to fight for the maintenance of the in-house ambulance service as well as the regulation of condominium conversions.

It is unfortunate however that when items of such importance come before the Board of Aldermen, they often get lost in the whirlpool of politics and egos. I feel that when the lives and safety of people in this city are involved, politics and egos should be pushed aside so that the people will be the ones who benefit.

CDC names Tilkin as director

NEWTON — The Newton Upper Falls Community Development Corporation has recently hired. David Tilkin as the director of this locally based, community run, non-profit organization.

Tilkin is a recent graduate of the Florence Heller Graduate School at Brandeis University. David's most recent professional experience includes the organizing and directing of the West Peabody Community Center, a non-profit community organization that provides educational and recreational programming for the Peabody, Lynnfield, and Danvers communities on the North Shore.

The Community Development Corporation currently operates by funding recieved from Community Development Block Grant, administered through Newton's Department of Planning and Development.

The CDC is unique by the nature of the opportunity the organization provides to local residents to become involved in the planning and provision of programs in their neighborhod. The restoration, management, and programming for the Upper Falls Depot, which houses the CDC office, is only the beginning of a community program that can impact many aspects of community living.

The greatest resource availabe to the Upper Falls neighborhood is the interest and concern of the local residents. Residents interested in becoming involved in the Upper Falls Community Development Corporation may contact David Tilkin during the week by phoning 332-9075. A board of Directors meeting will also be held on Thursday, August 27th in the Depot at 7:30 p.m. All meetings are open to the public.

Backman warns against hasty college merger

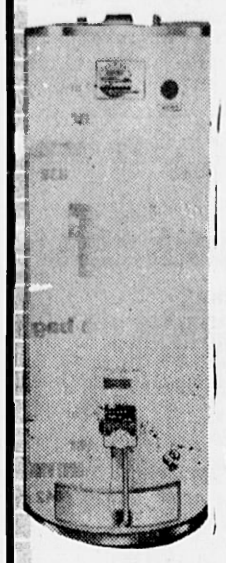

BOSTON — In response to the recently announced plan to merge UMass Boston and Boston State College within the next three weeks, Senator Jack Backman (D-Brookline) has urged Chancellor John B. Duff and the Board of Regents of Higher Education "to go slow in breaking into pieces. . .the educational system of our young people."

Backman asked that they ". . .perfect (their) proposals into a written form (and) that the proposals be distributed to the public at large." He asked for public hearings n the matter and offered his full support.

In his letter to Chancellor Duff and the Board of Regents, Senator Backman indicated that this situation has been brought about by last year's "precipitious reorganization of higher education" and this year's "thougtless budget cuts."

Police news

NEWTON — Two men were arrested for the alleged attempted burglary of the Turnpike Mobil Service Station early Saturday after police stopped their car at Langley and Beacon street, police said.

The two men are scheduled for arraignment today in District Court on charges of attempted burglary.

Police began searching for the two suspects after an employee of the service station at 362 Boylston St. phoned at 3:10 a.m. to say two men attempting to break into the building while he was inside had been scared off.

Five minutes later, police stopped the car of two suspects and returned them to the station where they were identified by a witness as the alleged attempted burglars.

One suspect is from Newton and the other is a Westwood resident, police said.

The men were charged with attempted burglary rather than attempted breaking and entering because the building was occupied.

A robber escaped with $50 cash and $900 in valuables from a Phillips Lane home sometime Sunday, according to police.

The thief entered the home by forcing a front window open, police said, and escaped with a color television and several pieces of stereo equipment.

A 1980 Mazda RX -7 was stolen on Commonwealth Avenue on Monday morning, according to police.

A robber broke into the Shell gas station on 1099 Beacon Street on Sunday night, police reported. Police said that officials at the station reported that it is unknown what valuables are missing.

Entrance was apparently gained by forcing a window open, according to police.

Bonsall named chairman

WELLESLEY — Governor Edward J. King recently appointed Commissioner Jon N. Bonsall of Wellesley as chairman of the Commission of the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities.

The new chairman was sworn in during ceremonies performed by Governor King Aug. 19 at the D.P.U. offices in the Saltonstall Building. The D.P.U. chairmanship pays an annual salary of $33,000. He succeeds Doris R. Pote of Brookline who resigned as chairman Aug. 14. Among those in attendance at the ceremony were D.P.U. Commissioner George R. Sprague and Eileen Schell, Secretary of Consumer Affairs.

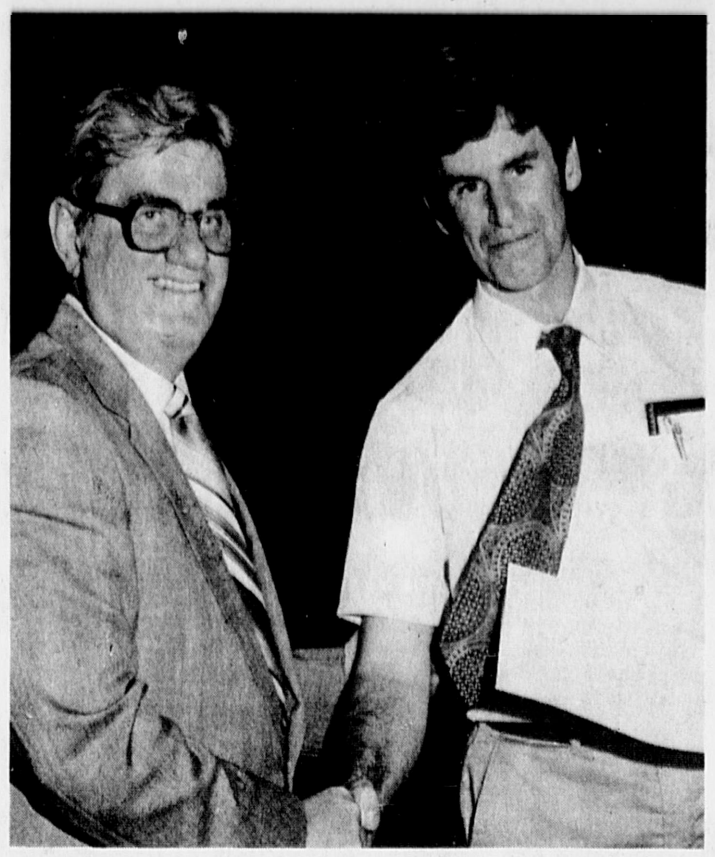

"This is an important position since the Department of Public Utilities makes numerous decisions that affect the pocketbooks of virtually every resident of the Commonwealth," Governor King said in administering the oath of office. "Jon Bonsall has demonstrated in his 31 months at the Department that he is concerned that the decisions rendered by the Commission are fair and equitable to all. I have confidence he will continue this spirit of fairness and concern for the public interest in his new position as chairman."

Chairman Bonsall, 33, was first appointed commissioner to the Department by Governor King in 1979. Prior to his appointment he was counsel to the Massachusetts House Majority Leader. Bonsall has also served in state government as counsel to the Massachusetts Energy Facilities Siting Commission. He has participated on numerous legislative task forces and study commissions, including the initial Reorganization Study of the Department of Public Utilities.

The new D.P.U. chairman is a graduate of Holy Cross College (1970) and Boston College Law School. He is a member of the Massachusetts Bar and was admitted to the United States District Court for Massachusetts in 1974.

Bonsall is a member of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners; New England Conference of Public Utilities Commissioners, Inc.; a director of the Holy Cross Club of Greater Boston and director of the New England Museum of Sports, Inc.

He is married to the former Kathleen M. Martineau of Revere and they have two sons, Matthew and Daniel.

Newton resident, Richard Bowie, M.D., (right) was honored recently at the annual house officer's dinner held by St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Dr. Bowie, who completed four years of surgical residency training, is shown accepting congratulations from Samuel R. Gargano, M.D., director of the department of surgery.

Singer

disagree with their tactics, but not with their objectives. I don't believe in bombing buildings."

His favorite song, one that he inevitably sings each night, is title "Four Green Fields," which explains that one of these is in bondage, "in enemy hands." It's a case of human rights," says Smyth flatly.

And lately, he tries to grasp the audiences' attention as he prepares to tell the story of Bobby Sands, fervently jerking a fist as he bellows,"And the only words from Margaret Thatcher were,'No sympathy have I.

Smyth is a shy person though, one who usually does not like to talk about himself too much, and would rather entertain than show-off. But it's not unusual for him make zanny faces at his audience, or dance a few steps of a jig as he strums his guitar that bears two tiny four-leaf clovers.

Though he keeps in touch with some family and friends in Ireland, Smyth has not returned since he began performing at J.B.'s. Because he works 52 weeks of the year, it's difficult for him to make trips back to Cavan. "I even worked during the Blizzard of '78!" However , Smyth admits that he has thought about returning for a visit sometime in the future. "I'll let tomorrow take care of itself."

For now, he is happy with the friends he has made in Nonantum.Once again, he jumps from a table and hurries to greet some familiar faces, expressing a special Gaelic saying,"Cead mile faile."

One hundred thousand welcomes.

Masterson, 19, of 209 Clark Street in West Roxbury.

The three teenagers were released on $100 bail and will stand trial on Sept. 23.

Reilly said that the heat detectors, which are in most municipal and school buildings, are outdated. The 25-year old heat detectors in Meadowbrook did not go off until nearly 10 minutes after firefighters arrived on the scene at 1:20 a.m. Reilly said the blaze started at least 30 minutes before firefighters were alerted.

The fire department arrived at the school after an anonymous phone call that both police and fire officials believe came from one of the three persons who allegedly set the blaze.

The Board of Aldermen is presently considering spending $300,000 to put smoke detectors in the school system's 25 buildings. The School Committee has also requested that aldermen approve the funds.

Meadowbrook was the third serious school fire in Newton in the last two years. Smoke alarms have already been installed in the Hyde Elementary School and Warren Junior High School where fires were caused by faulty electrical wiring.

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Van Stevens

Constance McCarthy and Van Stevens are married

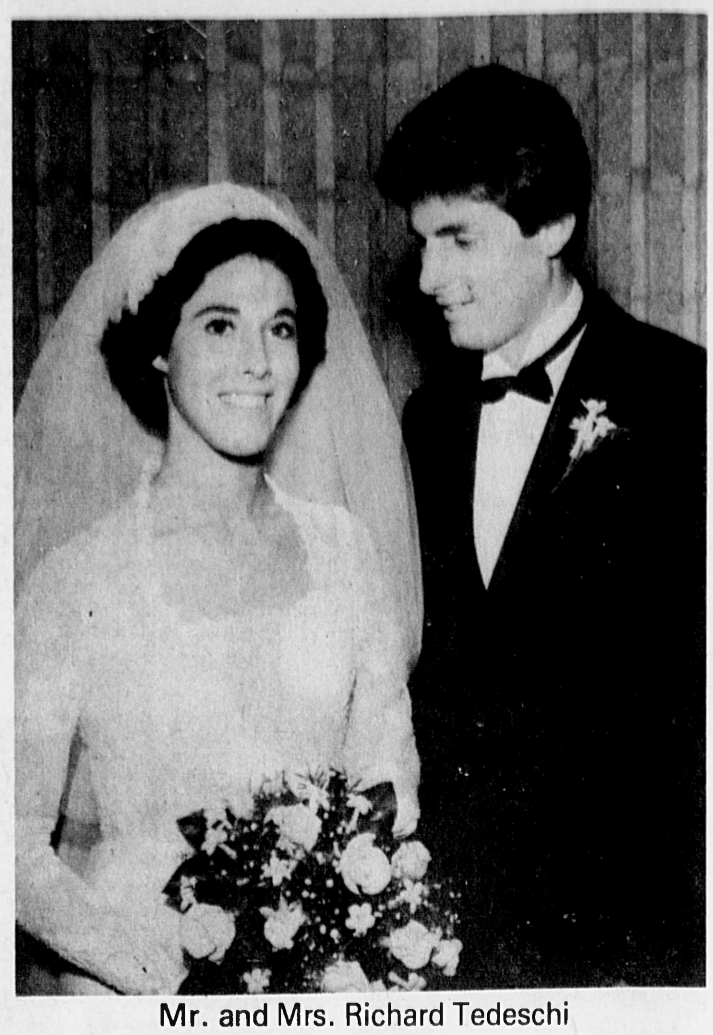

Constance Marie McCarthy, daughter of Mr.and Mrs. William E. McCarthy of West Newton, became the bride of Van Mitchell Stevens, 3rd, on July 25. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Van M. Stevens, Jr., of Sherborn.

Rev. Anthony Moore and Rev. Kenneth Powell conducted the . eleven o'clock mass at St Bernard's Church, West Newton, and a reception was held at the Woodland Golf Club.

Jane Marie McCarthy of West Newton was maid of honor for her sister. Charles C. Stevens of Sherborn was best man, and ushers were William Whittemore of Medway and Daniel Skerry of Everett.

The bride is a graduate of the School for Fashion Design in Boston. The groom graduated from Northeastern University.

After a wedding trip to Ogunquit, Me., and New rk City, they are living in Newton.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tedeschi

Goodwill given high grades by trustees

BOSTON — The Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF) has re-accredited Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries' facility at 95 Berkley Street, Boston, for another three years, giving the agency exceptionally high grade in many of CARF's 2,000 accreditation standards.

CARF's Board of Trustees stated in their report to Morgan Memorial this summer that our facility "has successfully met high standards of performance" and has been given a three-year accreditation for our programs of: Personal and Social Development, Vocational Development, Sheltered Employment, and Work Activity.

Work activity and personal and social developmnt were additional areas in which Morgan Memorial had sought accreditation.

"This important achievement on your part is a further indication of your dedication and commitment to improve the quality of the lives of the handicapped and disabled individuals," said Alan Toppel, CARF's Executive Director in his accreditation letter to Morgan Memorial.

Hunter Tynes, an Associate of the Rehabilitation Workshop Administration Training Center at Seattle (Washington) University, and Larry Gammon, Deputy Executive Director of th e Easter Seal Society-Goodwill Industries of New Hampshire, Inc., surveyed the Boston facility.

During their visit, Morgan Memorial's programs were reviewed through extensive review of documentation of services and of program administration.

Surveyed were: the pruposes of the agency, its organization and administration, services offered, personnel, program staff, administration and clinical records, financial aspects of the program, physical facilities, program evaluation and community relations.

"The facility has experienced a commendable growth in its services and has expanded its program emphases to meet changing needs of the community," Toppel state. "The Board and staff are applauded for their willingness to change from traditional programs to meet the needs of the community's disabled persons."

CARF surveyed Morgan Memorials's workshops in Lynn and Beverly last fall, giving both a three-year accreditation in vocational development, sheltered employment and work activity.

Established in 1966, CARF is a national accrediting organization.

Guild Fashion Show for Opera Company

BOSTON—A champagne reception and showing of Mary McFadden's Fall collection will be sponsored by the Guild of the Opera Company of Boston and Sara Fredericks at Bonwit Teller on Wednesday, Sept. 30, from 7 to 9 p.m. to benefit the Opera Company of Boston.

Sponsors for the benefit include Dr. and Mrs. Hans Henning Bode, Mrs. Alfred Ajami, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Allen, Miss Katherine Coffee, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Condit, Jr., Mrs. E. G. Fischer, Marie H. Fox, Mrs. Tudor Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert H. Gross, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Gustin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Haffenreffer, Mr. Joseph Hill, Dr. and Mrs. Delbert L. Jackson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Kaneb, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nyquist, Mrs. Ruth C. Peakes, Jean C. Randazzo, Mrs. Robert W. Selle and Mrs. Frederic Alan Sharf.

Also, Dennis P. Sheahan, Mrs. Donald R. Sohn, Mrs. Robert M. Soule, Mrs. Thomas G. Stemberg, Dr. and Mrs. Juan M. Taveras, Mrs. Roger M. Westcott, Mrs. Alfred W. Willman and Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Yens.

Joanne Silverstein weds Richard John Tedeschi

Joanne Silverstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Silverstein of Waban, was married to Richard John Tedeschi of Newton on June 28. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Tedeschi of Newton Highlands.

Cantor Alex Zimmer performed the ceremony at the Hilton Inn, Natick, where a reception was held.

Ruth Audrey Silverstein was maid of honor for her sister, and bridesmaids were Darcie Faye Lubart and Janet Tedeschi of Newton. Robert Tedeschi of Newton was best man and ushers were James Caruso of Newton, Paul Kelly of Michigan, John Tedeschi of Holliston and Mark Forant of Sharon.

The bride received a BS degree from Boston University and is a teacher of children with special needs in the Wakefield Public Schools. Mr. Tedeschi is an account executive with CDI Corporation in Needham, continuing education at Bentley College.

The couple is living in Watertown following a trip to the West Indies.

Birth

A daughter and first child, Marla Beth, was born to Ellen and Ted Kaplan of Newton Centre at Brigham & Women's Hospital, Boston on August 1. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Herman Pinkus of Olyphant, Pa., and Mrs. Celia Kaplan of Chestnut Hill.

Babysitting course at hospital

LOWER FALLS—The Newton-Wellesley Hospital School of Nursing will offer a babysitting course this fall for boys and girls who are at least 11 years old.

The six week course will begin on Sept. 17 and will meet on Thursdays from 4 to 6 p.m. Participants who attend all classes will receive a certificate of completion.

The curriculum will include child behavior, diapering, feeding, accident prevention, safety and first aid, and entertainment for young children. It will also offer suggestions on how to get a babysitting job, how to establish fees and "babysitting etiquette."

The program is limited to 25 and early registration is encouraged. Fee for the course is $20 to cover cost of supplies and refreshments. Checks should be made payable to the Newton-Wellesley Hospital School of Nursing, and sent to Lori J. Pelletier, R.N., Chairman of Parent and Child Nursing, Newton-Wellesley Hospital, 2014 Washington St., Newton Lower Falls, 02162. For further information call 964-2800, ext. 2535.

Pioneer women select delegates to convention

NEWTON— The Golda Meir Chapter of Pioneer Women of Brookline, Brighton and Newton has named four women to attend the 27th National Biennial Convention at the Concord Resort Hotel, Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., Sept.13-16.

Dorothy Alpert and Frances Finkel are delegates and alternates are Zelda Andler and Anna Rosen.

A highlight of the convention will be the presentation of the Golda Meir Human Relations Award to an outstanding American personality. Friends of Pioneer Women, the men's affiliate organization, will have a special convention session. There will also be a Pioneer Women-Na'amat fashion show premiere of clothes designed and created by students in Pioneer Women sponsored vocational classes in Israel.

Since 1925, Pioneer Women has responded to the changing needs of Jewish women all over the world. In the United States, members actively participate in community, civic and Zionist affairs, and in programs for enlightened legislation. Through Na'amat, its sister organization in Israel, Pioneer Women has developed a growing network of vocational, educational and social services for Israeli women, youth and children.

Curry College to give course on "Women in Management"

MILTON—A course designed to study problems of women managers will begin at Curry College on Wednesday, Sept. 9. The three-credit course, "Women in Management," will consider the development of a managerial perspective, delegations of responsiblity, dealing with chauvinism, leadership roles, time and stress management and conflicts in home and career commitments.

Louise Bonar, instructor for the course, said the program aims to enhance and develop the participants' potential as effective managers, by increasing self awareness and developing behavioral skills.

The course will meet on Wednesday evenings from 7-9:45. Registration for this and other fall courses begins on Monday, Aug. 24 at the Center for Lifelong Learning on the m Curry campus, 1071 Blue Hill Ave., Milton. For further information, call the center, 333-0500, ext. 129/134.

Salary

The raise, which called for a 6.5 percent yearly step raise effective Jan.1,1982, was proposed by Richmond as a "cost-of-living increase."

If pay hikes for the office of mayor and aldermen are rejected by the board on Sept. 8, both offices will not be allowed, under city charter, to recieve pay boosts until the next election.

Committee member Howard Haywood was confused as to why the committee was called together again.

"When I left here on July 29, it was very clear on what we voted on,"he said. "I feel we're being used."

Haywood said some aldermen that had testified in front of the committee and then supported pay hikes, swayed when the actual vote was on the floor of the board.

"A large majority of them were assured this committee would vote a pay raise for the mayor to take it out of thier hands," continued Haywood. "This thing has become political when you look at who is opposed in the upcoming election; they swayed from what they said in front of us."

Pricsilla Leith, who was in favor of a raise, said she "sat in amazement" as "six aldermen flip flopped from what they said in front of this committee and what they said on the floor of the board."

Joseph Alexander, president of the Newton Taxpayers Association uestioned the group's credibility. "If this committee wants any credibility at all we should stick by our decision," he said.

Former alderman Harry Crosby, who has publically supported Mayor Theodore Mann in the upcoming election, thought aldermen had a tough public decision to make. "They're not very brave," said Crosby of the board. "But I understand it."

Wasserman, another in favor of a raise, said aldermen are "in the hot seat" and "we(the committee)can get them out of the hot seat."

"In my opinion, every board member would vote for a small incremental increase," said Wasserman. "We could get them off the hook. I really don't think the public would complain."

The committee failed to change its recommendation for a $400 raise for aldermen. If approved by the board, the pay boost would bring the yearly aldermanic salary to $2,200.

Several citizens last Monday threatened they would obtain enough signatures (2,400) to have the issue on the November ballot if the committee voiced a recommendation which called for an increase in mayoral salary.

Citizens urged to buckle-up

BOSTON — The National Safety Council's Women's Division, The Massachusetts Medical Society Auxiliary and The Massachusetts Department of Public Health's Division of Preventive Medicine are asking the public to make a special effort to wear their seat belts while traveling during the Labor Day weekend.

Every year hundreds of thousands of children and adults are killed or injured in motor vehicle collisions. Labor Day weekend is an especially grim time. Last year, according to the Safety Council, there were 710 deaths and 21,300 injuries nationwide during the Labor Day weekend.

Safety Council data shows that motor vehicle collision costs drain $35.8 billion yearly from our economy. The Safety Council estimates that the use of seat belt s could save 2,000 lives each year.

"Make it Click — Buckle Up" is a national campaign to encourage people to use their seat belts, especially during the Labor Day weekend. In Massachusetts, the health department and The Medical Society Auxiliary will be asking people to sign "Make It Click" pledge cards promising to buckle their seat belts and put their children in safety seats.

By getting people, especially "first timers," to use their seat belts during this dangerous period, the health department and The Medical Society Auxiliary hope to help people realize that seat belts are easy to use and take only six seconds to click on.

Hanging on

By Marvin Snider

Divorce is one of the major traumatic events in the lives of all concerned — husband, wife, children, relatives and close friends. Frequently, people feel trapped in a marriage when it is not going well. A couple who have not been getting along for some time commonly feel helpless and frustrated in not being able to improve the relationship.

To leave the marriage presents many problems. It is expensive to maintain two households, and leaving may mean having to admit failure and face the questions, challenges and advice of friends and family. For at least one spouse, it means a major change in lifestyle, away from a family environment.

When children are involved, it means greater responsibility for one parent and a deprivation in contact with the children for the other parent. For the person who leaves, it is parenting by appointment.

For both parents, it can mean loneliness and the pain of starting over to find new relationships. This includes having to brush up on social skills that have become rusty with disuse. Even more difficult, especially for women, is how to meet other suitable people.

There is also the pain in witnessing the struggle of children making the adjustment to a divorce — the instability and insecurity that it stirs up and the often-felt pressure to chose sides.

In view of these varied pressures that go with staying together or divorcing, it is not hard to understand why many people gravitate to staying in limbo and do not face the problem of divorce when all other avenues are exhausted.

One alternative often does not get enough attention. What are the consequences of just letting an unpleasant situation drag on and on? A couple contemplating divorce has to assess the benefits and problems of staying together relative to benefits and problems of divorcing.

Is the frustration that comes from living with the loss of an emotional marriage worth keeping the family together? At which point is it more harmful for children to be living with the tension of parents who no longer have a good marriage than learning to make the adjustment of living with only one parent in a presumably more pleasant emotional environment?

There are no simple formulas or easy answers. Each situation needs to be evaluated on its own merits. When emotions blur one's ability to do this, the perspective of outside professional help should be sought. Years of experience in working with such situatins have clearly taught the message that the worst thing to do is nothing, pretend the problem away.

Best results come by facing up to a problem. There may be more difficulty initially, but far better results in the long run.

The first step is to try to make the marriage work. When it is clear that this is not likely to happen with or without help, then face the options in an open and constructive way. To not do so only postpones and intensifies the pain that ultimately has to be faced.

Healthy marriages and constructive divorces are not accidental. They are the product of people who are willing to take the risk of facing problems with the committment to find constructive, mutually satisfying solutions.

Tours given at new river dam

BOSTON — The Visitors' Information Center at the Metropolitan District Commissions's new Charles River Dam is now open to the public on a seven-day-a-week basis from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., MDC Commissioner Terrence J. Geoghegan announced today.

The MDC will provide guides for visitors to make tours of the new structure during those hours, Commissioner Geoghegan noted. The dam is situated just off City Square in Charles town at the end of Warren Avenue. For those walking the extended Freedom Trail to Charlestown, a gate and stairway leads from the Charlestown bridge down to the Paul Revere Landing Park and then to the dam.

A specially planned multi-media presentation lasts 12 minutes and explains the workings of the entire Charles River Dam operation, including boat locks, a fish ladder and flood control mechanisms.

Warren Junior High registration September 8

NEWTON — In preparation for the new school year, the Warren Junior High School office will be open for registration on Tuesday, Sept. 8, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Pupils who are new to Warren Junior High School, except for those entering the 7th grade from Newton public elementary schools in the Warren district, should report for placement to the office any time during the hours mentioned above, bringing transfer cards and records of final marks.

School opens on Wednesday, Sept. 9. Seventh grade pupils should report at 9 a.m. and will be dismissed at noon this first day; the cafeteria will not be open on Wednesday. Sessions for the 8th and 9th grade pupils on Sept. 9 begin at 1 p.m. and end at 2:30 p.m. Bus service will be available.

Museum offers fall courses

LINCOLN — The Decordova Museum School is making every effort to offer children's classes which will continue to keep art a vital part of their lives.

Classes scheduled for the fall term are offered to children from two years through the teens in a vast variety of media including: drawing, painting, jewelry, and silkscreen. One of the most popular classes is that for 2's and 3's taught by Barbara Gagel for children accompanied by their parents.

New on the roster is "Art for Special Populations," a course for people who wish to work with adults in nursing homes, senior citizen centers, and homes for the mildly handicapped.

Other additions to the fall term for adults are: "Calligraphy with Color," "Drawing Plants of New England," an art history course entitled "Painter's Heritage," "Batik," and "Traditional Quilting Techniques."

Bringing a fresh outlook to the fall programs are a host of new faculty members. Life-drawing instructor Lou Gippetti comes to the DeCordova with an MFA from the Yale School of Art where he has also taught.

Clare Walker Leslie has long been a contributing artist for Massachusetts Audubon's monthly newsletter and has recently published a book entitled, "Nature Drawing: A Tool for Learning."

Ralph Scott comes to the DeCordova with a wealth of experience in scientific illustration. He is currently director of Massachusetts Audubon's Ipswich River Wildlife Sanctuary.

The newest member in the printmaking department is Vivian Berman who received a BFA from the Cooper Union of New York City. She was president of the Boston Printmakers for five years.

The jewelry department will be enhanced by Janis Nathan-Markman who is currently represented in a nationwide traveling show entitled, "Tradition in the Making."

Courses are available on all levels and previous experience is not always a prerequisite. Registration for non-members begins Sept. 8. Museum members are encouraged to register by Sept. 4., and it is possible to join the museum before classes fill. For further information or to register call the Museum School, 259-0505.

Eastern College football preview

Penn State ready to regain supremacy

By RICHARD ROSENBLATT
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — This will be the "Year of the Nittany Lion" as far as Penn State is concerned.

Penn State, which for the past two years has fallen to rival Pittsburgh in the battle for supremacy in the East, is ready to regain its stature as the No. 1 team in the region. However, because of the most difficult schedule in the school's history, the Nittany Lions face the prospect of being left out when it comes to national championship consideration.

Among their opponents are Nebraska, Alabama, Notre Dame and Pittsburgh, all in the top 10 in UPI's 1980 final ratings.

"We have an awfully fine football squad," says Joe Paterno, entering his 16th year as Penn State's head coach. "But we must stay healthy to give us the depth that we will need against our schedule. We already have good morale and leadership."

Last year, Penn State got better as the season progressed, capping a 10-2 record with a 31-19 victory over Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl to finish No. 8 in the nation.

For a change, the quarterback situation seems stabile, with sophomore Todd Blackledge in charge. As a freshman, he guided Penn State to an 8-1 mark in games he started and completed 47.8 per cent of his passes. In addition, junior running back Curt Warner returns after gaining 922 yards as does wide receiver Kenny Jackson (21 catches, 386 yards). Guard Sean Farrell anchors the line.

On defense, Penn State has one of its speediest teams, including secondary men Paul Lankford, Giuseppe Harris and Matt Bradley. Defensive tackle Leo Wisniewski and linebacker Chet Parlavecchio will be the central figures on defense.

But don't expect Pittsburgh to fall over and play dead. The Panthers, rankedsecond in the nation behind unbeaten Georgia last year, lost a herd of top players to graduation, including All-Americas Hugh Green and Mark May. Although15 starters have to be replaced, Coach Jackie Sherrill is optimistic.

"We're a long way from having the football team we had last year," says Sherrill. "But unless we have some bad injuries, I don't think we'll dip too far."

Pitt is counting on quarterback Dan Marino to take charge. Marino started the first six games before suffering a knee injury and finished with 1,609 yards and 15 touchdowns. Dwight Collins should be his favorite target after catching 30 passes for 827 yards and 10 TDs.

The defense will have to be completely rebuilt. The lone starters from last year are linebacker Sal Sunseri and safety Tom Flynn. The key to the defense may lie with tackle John Hendrick, who is coming off knee surgery.

Once again, the rest of the East remains a notch below Penn State and Pitt. Syracuse may show the biggest improvement.

The Orangemen, 5-6 in 1980, hired Dick MacPherson as head coach to replace Frank Maloney. Syracuse has 16 returning starters and will be led by running back Joe Morris, who sat out a large part of 1980 because of injuries. However, he is the school's all-time leading rusher and if he's healthy, Syracuse may find itself in a bowl. Other top players include quarterback Dave Warner, tackle John Lally and linebackers Mike Zunic and Craig Bingham.

Boston College has a new coach and bowl aspirations after a 7-4 season. Jack Bicknell inherits 38 lettermen and the Eagles pin their hopes on running back Shelby Gamble. Linebacker Jim Budness leads the defense.

Navy will be hard-pressed to duplicate last year's 8-4 season, which ended on a sour 35-0 loss to Houston in the Garden State Bowl. Coach George Welsh will be counting on his defense to hold up the club while he rebuilds the offense. Running back Eddie Meyers (204-957) will carry the bulk of the offense and Tom Tarquinio will start at quarterback.

Rutgers opened up quite a few eyes last year before losing 17-13 to Alabama. Coach Frank Burns hopes his team can better its 7-4 record last year and he'll get some early indication when Rutgers meets Syracuse Sept. 5. Ralph Leek, who threw just 19 passes last year as a backup, inherits the quarterback spot.

Colgate Coach Fred Dunlap is installing a wing-T offense as quarterback Brian Plunkett returns after sitting out last season. Colgate will have a hard time improving last year's 5-4-1 record.

West Virginia Coach Don Nehlen returns for his second year after guiding the Mountaineers to a 6-6 mark, their first non-losing season in five years. Quarterback Oliver Luck is the top offensive performer.

Army, 3-7-1 last year, has a toned-down schedule with Ivy League teams Brown and Princeton replacing Notre Dame and Penn State. However, Missouri and Pitt remain and the Cadets, under Coach Ed Cavanaugh, will call it a successful season if they can beat Navy.

Temple faces Georgia, Pittsburgh and Penn State and Coach Wayne Hardin says his team needs consistency if it hopes to finish near the .500 mark after a 4-7 record in 1980. Senior Tink Murphy is listed as the No. 1 quarterback but six others are in the running.

Rick Carter leaves Division III and takes over at Holy Cross. He has installed a multiple offense which will be directed by quarterback Dave Boisture (133-of-262 for 1,659 yards).

New Syracuse football coach Dick MacPherson prepares the Orangemen for the upcoming 1981 gridiron season during summer drills.

Youngblood out at least 3 weeks

CINCINNATI (UPI) — New York Mets outfielder Joel Youngblood will not return to the active list for at least three weeks, a club spokesman said Monday night.

Youngblood was leading the National League in hitting with a .350 average when he was placed on the disabled list Aug. 12. Dr. Lonny Johnson performed an arthroscopic examination on his left knee Monday.

"Dr. Johnson confirmed the earlier diagnosis that nothing is structally wrong with the knee and there is no tear of any kind," said the Mets spokesman. "It was an irritation in knee and the knee was drained."

PRO CHARTS

NEW ENGLAND PATS

COACH RON ERHARDT: "Our big question is at quarterback, since both Matt Cavanaugh and Steve Grogan had surgery on the left knee. We've been the second leading scoring team in the NFL for the last two seasons. They say we're supposed to walk into the Super Bowl, but there are other good teams."

OFFENSE

PASSING Assuming both Grogan and Cavanaugh are healthy, whom do you play? Probably Grogan because of seniority. But it's nice problem to have since both are fine leaders. And receiving corps of Stanley Morgan, Harold Jackson and Russ Francis rates in same class as San Diego's fabulous threesome, with competent reserves available in such as Don Hasselback. VERY GOOD

RUNNING They still could use fullback type such as departed Sam Cunningham for blocking, tough yardage, though there's nothing wrong with Vagas Ferguson and Don Calhoun as starting combo. Rookie Tony Collins will be able to spell hard-working Vagas. Andy Johnson is handyman. FAIR TO GOOD

BLOCKING Two big changes in store. Pete Brock moves ahead of dentist Bill Lenkaitis as starting center. Bob Cryder fills guard vacancy left by traded Sam Adams. Could be third change if rookie Brian Holloway develops fast at tackle, threatening Shelby Jordan or Dwight Wheeler. Meanwhile, John Hannah remains most imposing blocker in game. VERY GOOD

DEFENSE

LINE The people are all familiar: Sugar Bear Hamilton at nose tackle, Julius Adams and Tony McGee at ends, Richard Bishop wherever needed. They should be — all are over 30, which is the rub. They've got to start working in younger guys and developing greater pass rush. FAIR

LINEBACKING Solid corps, led by Steve Nelson, finally getting some All-Pro recognition. He plays strong inside post, with Bob Golic likely to be his inside mate. Rod Shoate has developed into outside terror, but Mike Hawkins might be ousted by second-year man Larry McGrew. John Zamberlin and rookie Don Blackmon figure in the picture, too. GOOD

SECONDARY Talentwise, this is an incomparable crew. No fewer than five No. 1 draft picks to man the four spots, plus extra back on pass downs. They're Mike Haynes, Raymond Clayborn, Rick Sanford, Tim Fox and Roland James. And all potentially are All-Pros, too. Haynes and Fox have already made it. All they have to do is play up to capability. EXCELLENT

SPECIAL TEAMS

KICKING Although his miss against Miami knocked Pats out of playoffs, John Smith led NFL in scoring and stays as placekicker. But Ken Nabor could oust Mike Hubach as punter. FAIR

RETURNS There are no better return men than Haynes and James on punts, Horace Ivory and rookie Collins on kickoffs. And that's not even counting Clayborn. Special teams a Pat forte. VERY GOOD

PROSPECTUS

This is a team of undeniable talent that somehow manages to lose the big game — it hasn't won a playoff since 1969. I'm not sure it can get its act together one more time, especially with the QB physical questions.

PREDICTION Third in AFC East, missing by whisker.

West Newton's Bishop cops 2 medals in N.E. swimming

Four swimmers from Newton captured 27 medals in leading Bernal's Gator Swim Club to the New England Long Course Swimming Championship. More than 500 swimmers competed in the three-day meet held at Brown University recently.

Swimming in the new 15-16 age group, Rick Bishop of 102 Lennox St., West Newton, was the top first place medal winner, taking top prize in the 400 and 1500 meter freestyle events. He also gathered three fourth place medals in the 100 and 200 buterfly and the 200 freestyle. The Gator freestylerelay team of Bishop, Drew Lane of 43 Otis St., Newtonville; John Doran of Cambridge, and Jon Luby of Bedford, New Hampshire, also finished first.

Lane, aa student at Boston College High School, took top honors in the 200 meter freestyle and was third in the 100 and 400 meter freestyle races.

Kattie King, 17, of 157 Fuller St. West Newton, won the women's 400 meter freestyle and was second in the 200 meter individual medley. In other events King took medals for a sixth place finish in the 100 meter butterfly, seventh in the 100 meter breaststroke, and eighth in the 200 backstroke and 200 freestyle.

According to Gator head coach Joe Bernal, "We decided to swim Kattie in events she wouldn't normally swim in this championship. We intended to allow her to take it easy before the Junior National and National championships." If King was taking it easy, it wasn't readily apparent to the other swimmers.

Following the New England championship, King joined several other Gators in flying to Milwaukee for the Junior National championships where she will compete in the 200 meter butterfly and the 400 meter individual medley.

Overall top medal winner for the Gators was 13-year-old Rhonda Applebaum of 62 Wiswall Rd. Applebaum won the 200 meter freestyle, was second in the 400 freestyle and 200 breaststroke, and third in the 100 meter breaststroke and 400 meter individual medley.

In addition, she placed fourth in the 200 meter butterfly and the 100 freestyle and fifth in the 100 freestyle and 200 Individual medley. The 400 meter freestyle and medley relay teams, on which Applebaum swam both, captured first place.

Although the 1981 swimming season has ended, Bernal's Gators will be holding tryouts at Harvard University's Blodgett Swimming Center on Sept. 21. Interested swimmers should contact Coach Bernal at 643-6771 for additional information.

Chinaglia wins 4th NASL scoring title

NEW YORK (UPI) — Giorgio Chinaglia of the New York Cosmos has won the North American Soccer League scoring championship for the fourth time in his six years in the league.

No other player in the 15-year history of the league has won the scoring title more than twice.

In the final legue statistics, released Monday, the Cosmos 34-year-old striker had 29 goals and 16 assists for 74 points. Karl-Heinz Granitza of Chicago was second with 55 points — the league's largest margin of victory for the scoring title.

'Sweet Lou' placed on 15-day injury list

NEW YORK (UPI) — Outfielder Lou Piniella was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the New York Yankees Monday night and outfielder Bobby Brown was recalled from Columbus of the International League for the third time this season.

Austin's back at 100 percent, prepared for Open challenge

By David Tucker
UPI Sports Writer

TORONTO (UPI) — Tracy Austin, the prim princess of tennis, announced her recuperation period has ended right on schedule for the U.S. Open and left Chris Evert Lloyd little room to argue the point.

Austin, continuing in her role as the one and only nemesis to the world's No. 1 player, routed Evert in straight sets Sunday to capture the $200,000 Canadian Open tennis championships, 6-1, 6-4.

The style of her victory erased any worry that she'll be troubled by a lingering back injury at Flushing Meadows, where she and Evert have shared the last three U.S. Open titles.

"I feel I am totally back," said the 18-year-old Austin, who has climbed back to top form after ending a four-month layoff with a back injury in mid-May. "I have played so well in this tournament.

It was Austin's eighth triumph over Evert in 14 matches stretching back to 1977. But six of those victories have come in their last seven meetings at a time when Evert has been virtually unbeatable by anyone else.

Evert offered an analysis of Austin's victory, but it was not exactly welcomed by her opponent.

Chris Evert's face tells it all.

"She is playing really tremendous and one thing that separates her from the other top players now is that she has had an injury and she's coming back fresh and tough.

"I'm glad I had a chance to play her this week. Now I know what to expect."

Austin took issue with Evert's suggestion her play had been helped by the enforced holiday. "I don't think that makes any sense at all because I was fresh and eager before the injuries too," she said.

"When Chrissie Evert took a three-month layoff last spring, she did it because she wanted to. I was forced to lay off, and I was unsure of myself at the beginning.

"The injury was not like a rest."

Austin, the only player who holds a career edge over the two-time Wimbledon champion, prevailed with surprising ease, using superior speed and a relentless string of unforced errors by Evert to claim the $34,000 winner's purse.

Austin chased down Evert's baseline rallies in the first set, ceding only 10 points.

Evert, changing the pace in the second set, resorted to drop shots while mounting a challenge that led to several vicious volleys at the net, broke back in a second game and held in the third to take a 2-1 edge.

But Austin then managed two consecutive breaks before Evert rallied to pull within 4-5 after fighting off a match point in the ninth game.

Evert, who will be seeking her sixth U.S. Open title next week, put down two match points against Austin's serve in the 10th game before bowing out with a return hit long.

The resident of Rolling Hills, Calif., became only the second player this year to defeat Evert in consecutive sets. Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia won a two-setter from Evert in the French Open.

International League

Offensive explosions give Warriors crown

The Auburndale Warriors, behind the three hits of Rob LeConti and the two apiece of Steve MacKay, Eddie Cohen and Dan Nardone, clinched their second consecutive International League championship Tuesday night with an 11-9 victory over Boys' Club at Albemarle Field.

The win gave Auburndale the best of three series in two straight games.

Befitting the offensive power the Warriors have displayed all season, Manager Charlie Bell's crew blasted out 12 hits and, as became their custom in the playoffs, continued to come up with that one Big Inning to seal the contest. Monday night they were trailing, 7-6, before scoring 13 times in the sixth inning. Tuesday, they were behind by a run, but exploded for five in the fourth and never looked back.

"Those big innings just killed us both nights," said Boys' Club manager Manny Connerney. "We were right in both games but we let it get away. They (Auburndale) are a good hitting club. There's no doubt about that. But we played very poorly. It was probably our two worst performances defensively all season."

It was a wild series from the start. The two teams scored 49 runs in two games with the Warriors crossing home plate 30 times for an average of 15 runs per game. But this championship still wasn't Auburndale's until the very last out. Boys' Club took it right to the end, scoring two runs in the bottom of the seventh and loading the bases off starter Jamie Rice with one out. Rice, only 13-years old but a star for Auburndale all season, responded to the pressure by retiring the final two outs without allowing another run.

"He's only 13, but he pitched a heck-of-a game," said Connerney. "He wasn't that fast, but he kept us off balance just enough. We popped up seven times, which is quite a bit. And we left tons of men (11, to be exact) on base."

The Warriors jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the game with a pair of runs in the first inning, but Boys' Club rallied with two each in the second and third to take a 4-3 edge. Joe King, playing for the first time in a month after a broken arm, and Bobby Connerney singled in runs in the second while King got two more home when his ground ball to second slipped on past and into the outfield.

Errors actually played a major role in the outcome, especially in the fourth when Auburndale scored five runs. After Nardone singled, consecutive errors by the third baseman loaded the bases. LeConti singled for one run, with a second one scoring when his hit to center was mishandled for another error. Cohen then singled to center and the exact same thing happened again, allowing two more runs to cross the plate.

"We've been a strong defensive club all year. One that usually held teams to two or three runs," said Connerney. "This was unusual for us to play this way."

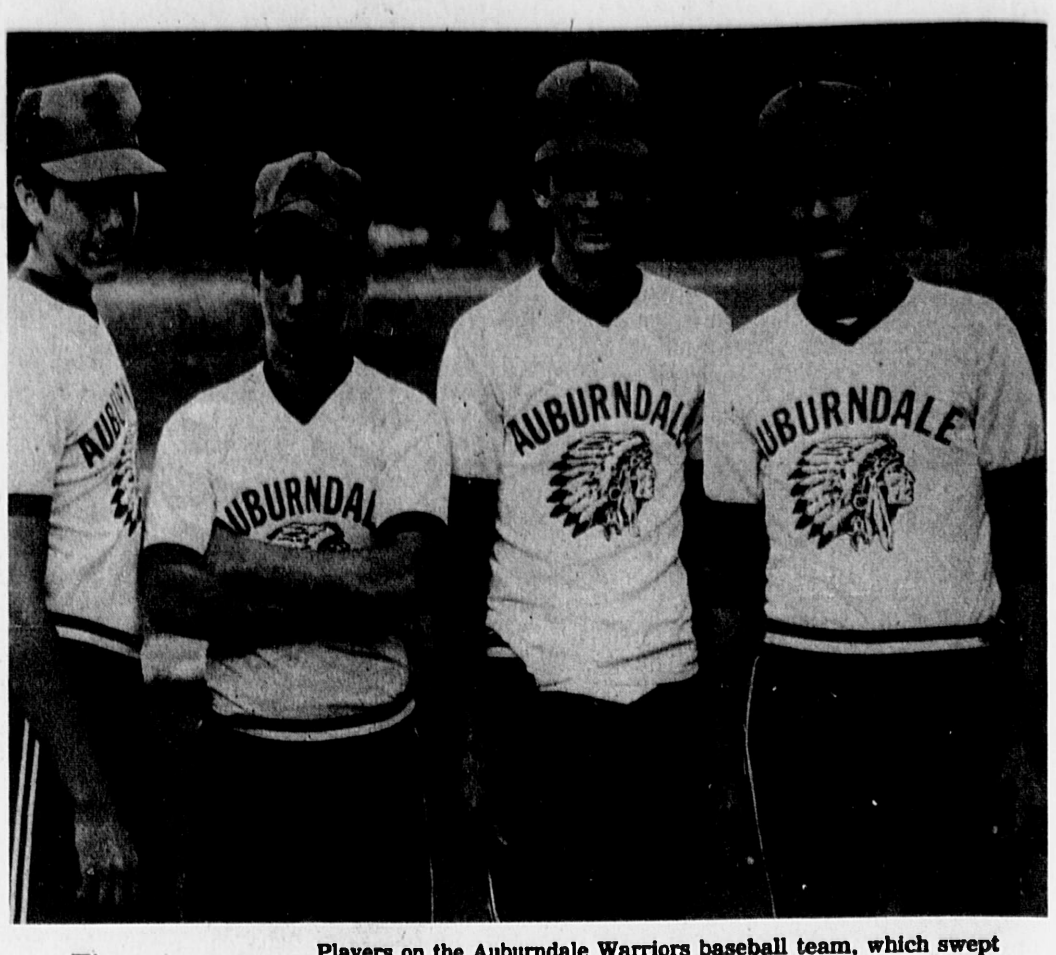

With the impressive two-game sweep, Auburndale finished the year with a 24-3-1 overall record, including six wins and only one loss in the playoffs.

The summary:

AUBURNDALE WARRIORS(11)--S. MacKay 4-2; R. LeConti 5-3; Cohen 5-2; Buckley 5-1; Rice 5-1; Nardone 4-2; Solomon 2-0; Dalicandro 4-1; Healey 4-0; Totals 38-12.

BOYS' CLUB(9)--B. Connerney 5-3; J. Proia 4-0; Deverix 5-2; Leone 4-1; Nash 5-2; Greeley 3-0; Ryan 2-1; Arsenault 4-1; King 4-2; DeNucci 1-0; Totals 37-12.

International meddling causes

Hassles for NYC dream mile

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) -- America's track and field rulers told international track officials Wednesday not to meddle in U.S. events, specifically the Fifth Avenue Mile scheduled Sept. 26 in New York City.

The brouhaha started Wednesday when President Adriaan Paulen of the International Amateur Athletics Federation in London told The Athletics Congress, the IAAF member which is the U.S. governing body for amateur track and field, to cancel plans for an international straight-away mile on Fifth Avenue.

TAC Executive Director Ollan Cassell fired back a Telex message which said TAC has sanctioned the event and has specific guarantees that all IAAF eligibility rules will be followed.

"Please explain how IAAF president can be above IAAF constitution and supervise events around the world. Suggest you leave this to IAAF member in U.S.," the message ended.

Cassell said many top athletes around the world have accepted TAC's invitation to take part. He said ABC, which will televise the event, has written into its contract that all TAC and IAAF rules must be observed. And he said four TAC representatives are members of the Fifth Avenue Mile organizing committee.

TAC officials made a point of telling reporters that Paulen's term as president ends next month, prior to the Sept. 26 race.

The IAAF said in London it ordered the race canceled because it was informed the proposed course for the road race is predominantly downhill, with a net drop of 10 yards between the start and the finish.

More than 100,000 spectators are expected to line the route in midtown Manhattan.

The IAAF said it considered the event was being staged for propaganda purposes. It said the race, brainchild of Fred Lebow, New York City marathon organizer, constituted an international meeting outside IAAF rules. The IAAF said the race represented an undesirable development in international track and field.

Paulen told Cassell no foreign athletes should be invited to take part in the race.

Internationally known runners such as Britain's Steve Ovett, the former world record holder in the outdoor mile and the 1,500 meters, Ireland's Eamonn Coghlan and American indoor and outdoor mile champ Steve Scott have been invited to compete.

The Fifth Avenue Mile will include races for men and women. Promoters said it is unique because it will be the first major mile event run on a straight course instead of an oval track.

Porter is reactivated by St. Louis Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Catcher Darrell Porter, who has been on the disabled list since May 18, Wednesday was reactivated by the St. Louis Cardinals.

A team spokesman said Porter was scheduled to be in the starting lineup for Wednesday night's game against the San Diego Padres.

Porter, who signed a 5-year, $3.5 million contract with the Cardinals last winter after becoming a free agent, has not played since May 7 because of a tear in the rotator cuff in his right (throwing) shoulder.

Examinations determined surgery was not necessary and total rest was prescribed. Porter did play as a designated hitter in the Cardinals' exhibition series against his former team, the Kansas City Royals, Aug. 7 and 8.

At the time he was placed on the disabled list, Porter was batting .173 with two homers and eight RBI.

To make room for Porter on the 25-man roster, the Cardinals optioned pitcher Andy Rincon to their Double A farm team, the Arkansas Travelers, in the Texas League. Rincon, who had a 3-1 record and 1.75 ERA, has been bothered by a sore arm.

Ali exclaims: I'm still the greatest of all time

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Vowing "I'm not a quitter," Muhammad Ali predicted Thursday he'll take an unprecedented fourth world heavyweight boxing title from slugger Gerry Cooney in a year.

Ali, who turns 40 Feb. 17, said his comeback will begin Nov. 1 in South Carolina against an opponent yet to be chosen.

"This shall be the greatest evening of all time," he said.

At a crowded news conference in the basement of Carolina Coliseum, site of his proposed return to the ring, Ali opened his wallet, handed Richland County boxing commissioner Chris Hitopoulos a $5 bill and received a license to fight in Columbia.

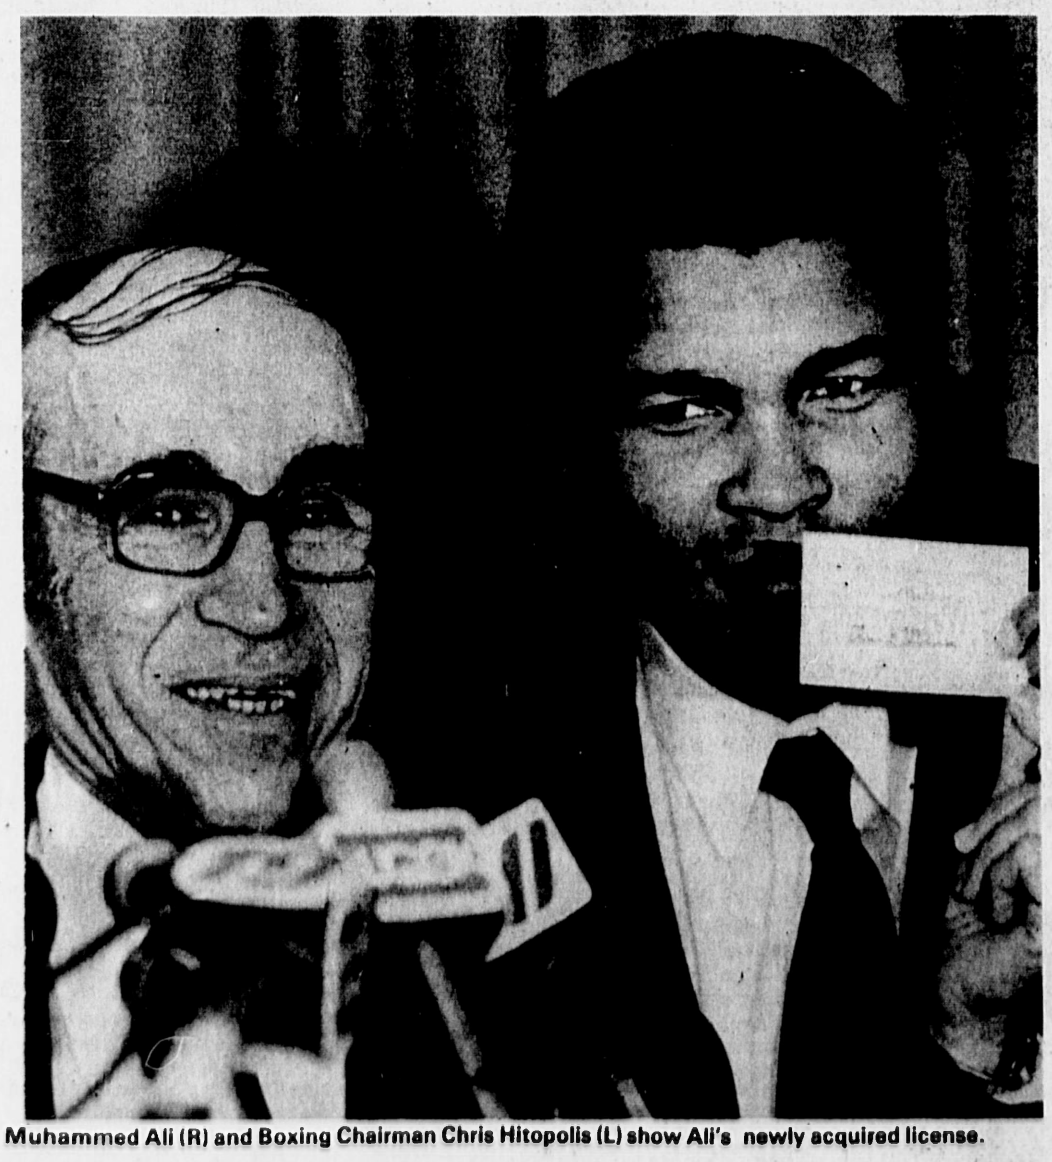

"Now that I've got the right to fight here, they'll knock the doors down," Ali said. "Whoever meets me will be honored."

Clad in a black suit, white shirt and black tie, the three-time heavyweight champion with graying hair predicted the currently top-rated Cooney soon will win the crown by knocking out World Boxing Council champion Larry Holmes, who pummeled Ali like a rag doll through 10 rounds last October. Ali's corner stopped the fight before the 11th round.

He predicted he will fight "probably the No. 8 contender and then maybe the No. 4 contender and then Cooney."

"It'll be Ali and Cooney at $20 million apiece," he told an audience of about 75 reporters and spectators.

He said the fight will be in Columbia "because this is the place where they let me make my comeback."

Muhammed Ali (R) and Boxing Chairman Chris Hitopolis (L) show Ali's newly acquired license.

Only two American cities — Columbia and Atlanta — offered him licenses to box after Holmes defeated him, Ali said.

"That shows how hypocritical all those Northern cities are," Ali said. "I couldn't get a license to box from the good white folks in the liberal North."

Ali planned to leave Columbia for Los Angeles Thursday to begin training for his comeback.

A team of four physicians put Ali through a four-hour examination Wednesday and announced at the news conference that the former champ "is in good shape."

Dr. Chris Biser, a physician for the Richland County Boxing Commission, said Ali's electrocardiogram was "possibly not perfect but near perfect.

"He was at about 88 percent," Biser said. "That's excellent considering he's not in full training. We expected his weight to be a little more than his fighting weight, but it's not as bad as in the past."

Ali, who ballooned to 260 pounds before his bout with Holmes — and then took large doses of thyroid medicine to lose weight quickly, weighed in at 244 pounds for his physical Wednesday. He said his fighting weight will be 230 pounds in November.

Ali said he can regain the world title "because of my attitude."

"Don't let people tell you what you can't do," he said.

The former champion said he will train "one month here in Columbia where people can come in and see me live and in living color."

Ali said he can make a successful comeback because "whoever puts the behinds in the seats has the power. I can still put the behinds in the seats.

"I'm taking on this impossible task because it is there," he said. "Why did those four blind men — or three or whatever it was — climb that mountain when everybody told them they couldn't do it? Because it was there.

"Why did we go to the moon? Was it to spend $4 billion to collect rocks? No, because it was there.

"No man has ever had a chance to be the four-time champion of the world. For the last 100 years, people have said boxers never come back. I came along and proved them wrong.

"America went to the moon because it was there and now they're planning to go to Mars. The moon is three-time champion. I've been to the moon; now I'm going to Mars. Mars is four-time champion.

"I'm not a quitter."

Ali also said Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev told him he can fight in Russia if he makes a successful comeback.

"And Deng-Xiao Ping — I know him personally — said he would let me come to China," Ali said.

"I'm back and I want to be an inspiration to everybody ... not to quit," he said. "All of you have a Larry Holmes in your life."

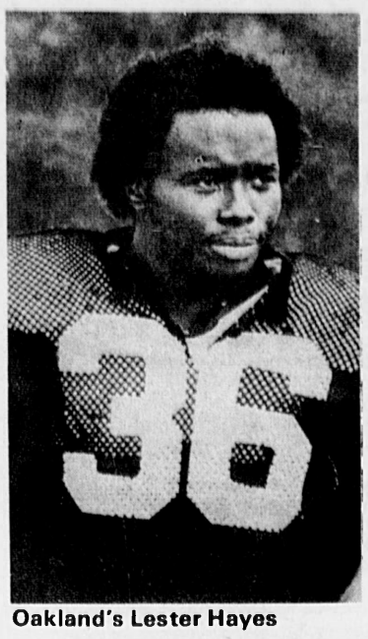

And, he said, "I'm still pretty — look at me.

"I'm still the greatest of all time."

Raiders' Hayes takes on, beats toughest opponent

By Charlie Green
Staff Writer

FOXBORO — In the waning weeks of last year's NFL season and through the 1980 playoffs, Oakland Raiders' Lester Hayes was the outstanding cornerback in the league. He used more "stickum" (a sticky substance to help receivers and interceptors to grip the football) than anyone in prior NFL history while collecting a league-high 18 pickoffs. It got so that during the previous off-season a rule was passed outlawing its use.

Oakland's Lester Hayes

Whatever the aids, Hayes was a prime interceptor when it counted most, and it's fair to say the Raiders would not have made it to Super Bowl XV without him. His performance in 1980 was outstanding, but hardly unforgettable.

Lester's most embarrassing moment came after the Raiders' Super Bowl win, when NBC-TV's Bryant Gumbel attempted to interview him in the dressing room. Hayes was unable to answer a single question. His rapid-fire attempts to speak resulted in a stammer so dominant that not a single word was understandable. The national hero was revealed to the nation as a man who couldn't even talk.

With Super Bowl success came opportunities for endorsements, and a prominant soft drink organization invited Hayes to appear in a TV commercial. It paid excellent fees and Lester had to speak just one short phrase. But he couldn't say it and he lost the commercial.

Never before had his handicap caused him so much humiliation. In his desparation, Hayes signed up for a stutterer's clinic at Hollins College in Roanoke, Virginia.

Miracles do happen. They come through medical people and they come direct. And they can happen at a place like a stutterer's clinic.

Within a month at Hollins, Hayes had found the key.

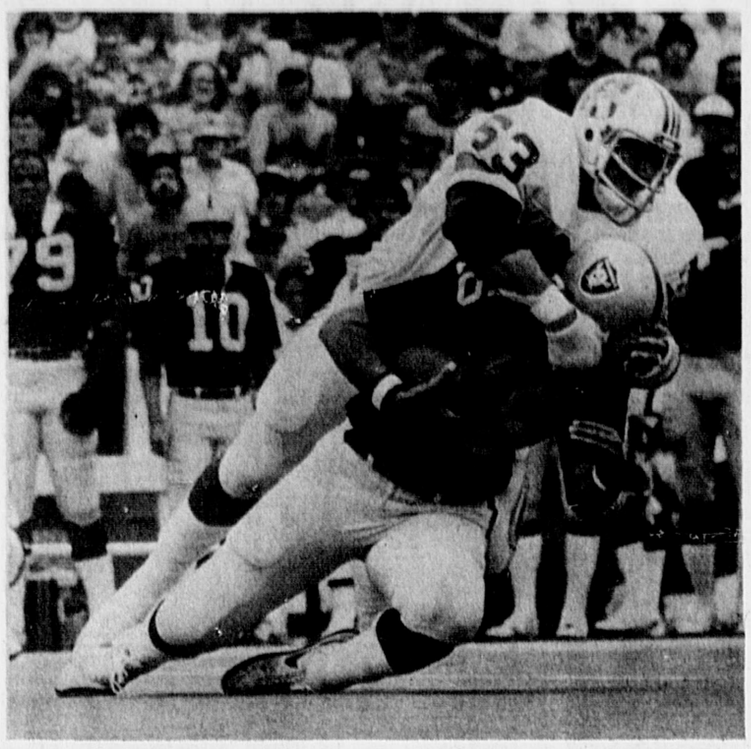

"They just told me to slow down," Hayes explained. "I'd never been able to say what I wanted to say, and the more I couldn't say the harder I tried to force it out. That was wrong. Now I'm slowing down and it comes out nice."

Nice, indeed. You should see the new smile on the face of Lester Hayes.

It's unforgettable.

Even though the games may not count right now, the New England Patriots are finding out there is no substitute for victory.

"I know pre-season games aren't supposed to mean that much, but it's important to us because we want to go into the regular season on a winning note," Patriots' defensive end Mark Buben said Saturday after New England won its third straight NFL pre-season game, a 23-21 verdict over the champion Oakland Raiders.

Mark Buben, seen sacking Jim Plunkett, played well Saturday.

Despite beating the Super Bowl champions, New England coach Ron Erhardt was more concerned with the way his team nearly let the game slip away in the fourth quarter, despite holding a 20-7 lead at halftime.

"We played three quarters of good football, then we got a little sloppy," noted Erhardt. "Some of the things we tried on offense worked, but we still need a lot of improvement on the defensive line."

The next major cut for the Patriots takes place on Tuesday. With the roster now at 60, the Pats will have to cut down to a 50-man squad in order to reach league standards.

Erhardt also said Sunday that there were no significant injuries to report from Saturday's game, other than normal bumps and bruises. He said that the ballclub was predominantly healthy as the Patriots enter the final weeks of training.

The Patriots conclude the pre-season portion of their schedule on Sunday when they host the Washington Redskins. The game was originally set to start at 12:30 p.m., but has been moved to 2 p.m. at the request of ABC-TV.

REBATES
FACTORY AUTHORIZED CLEARANCE
Dodge and participating Dodge dealers fight high interest rates by contributing $300 to $700 back in cash. Direct from Dodge.
You can keep the cash or apply it to your down payment when you buy or lease a new '81 in stock. Get $300 back on Dodge Omni and 024 (except Misers); $500 back on Aries K; $300 back on all Mitsubishi Imports; $500 to $700 back on Ram Tough Dodge trucks, (except vans.)
Plus your qualifying dealer has factory incentives that can save you hundreds more on many models.
See how Dodge beat the competition in price even before clearance and The Interest Fighter Program.

Tips on traffic safety when schools reopen

NEWTON — "Schools in Newton reopen Sept. 9 and motorists, parents, school children, and others should recognize an overnight change in traffic patterns," stated Chief William F. Quinn of the Newton Police Department.

After a summer of vacationing thousands of children will be walking to neighborhood schools, and bus stops. They will be crossing many side streets and major intersections. Streets and crossings with a heavy volume of traffic will be supervised by Newton Police Traffic Supervisors and police officers, as well as crossings in the vicinity of schools.

Parents of young children should walk the routes to school with their children to familiarize the child with crosswalks, driveways, pedestrian lights, (red and yellow, or Walk, Don't Walk) importance of using sidewalks properly, behavior while waiting for school buses and conduct while riding.

It is also wise to time the trip to school and insist that the young student maintain such a time to avoid playing or lingering which could possibly result in an accident.

When a parent does accompany a child over a route, the child should use crosswalks and corners and should cross only when gaps in traffic exist. The child should be instructed to do his or her own looking in all directions before stepping off the curb.

Chief Quinn stated, "we shall be supervising over 80 crossings and it would be wise for the parent to introduce the child to the traffic supervisor or the police officer."

Standard crossing hours are: Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays: 8:15 a.m. - 8:45 a.m., 11:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m., 3:00 p.m. - 3:30 p.m.; Tuesdays and Thursdays: 8:15 a.m. - 8:45 a.m., 11:30 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

One of the most common problems treated by chiropractic is that of a slipped disk. A slipped disk generally occurs when unnatural pressure is placed on nerves because of a dislocation of certebrae in the back. This usually causes swelling or pressure on the disks that separate and cushion vertebrae in the spinal column. Such dislocations are often caused by sudden falls, extreme lifting or twisting, automobile accidents or a blow on the back or neck. Even an odd positioning of the back while lifting a light weight can cause a slipped disk.

Your chiropractor will give special attention to your back when seeking the cause of your problem. Ask about our spinal check-up and postural analysis for early detection of back problems. The modern doctor of chiropractic works both directly and indirectly with the nerves and other systems. Health comes naturally when all such systems are naturally balanced. Call for an appointment today at 323-5022. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale. We are open three evenings a week for the convenience of those who work during the day.

CHIRO TIP:

Lifting position is more important than actual body strength when lifting a heavy object. Lift with legs and your entire body, not ust your back.

School time anxieties are not unusual

BOSTON — Pains and mood changes are apt to accompany the back-to-school blues. Among the symptoms brought on by school anxiety are headaches, crankiness, and a host of other aches and pains.

The back-to-school blues is a common emotional malady affecting children and other family members. It usually settles in during September and, according to psychotherapist John Zrebiec of Family Counseling and Guidance Centers, the syndrome usually passes in a few weeks.

"The back-to-school situation does not have to be traumatic," says Zrebiec. "What actually intensifies problems is an attempt to ignore the reality of the adjustment necessary, or denying that back-to-school time brings problems for both parents and children," he explains.

He notes that anxiety levels in children are increased when a child is entering a new school, facing a teacher he does not care for, or going into classroom settings with unfamiliar faces.

"Children leaving home for the first time to attend school are particularly vulnerable as they go from the security of the family to confront a sea of strange faces," says Zrebiec. He adds, "When a parent displays a lot of concern, this can add to the adjustment difficulty."

Zrebiec advises parents to provide understanding, an explanation, and reassurance. Children need to know that negative feelings are usual at such times. They should be told that those feelings will probably go away soon, and they should be reassured that everthing will be okay.

For parents who want to gain some additional insight into the psychology of children, Family Counseling and Guidance Centers is offering a free brochure, About Your Child's Emotional Health. For copies please call the Boston clinic (542-0903).

Family Counseling and Guidance Centers, Inc. is a nonprofit, nonsectarian, private network of outpatient, mental health facilities, with services available to all, regardless of ability to pay.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Mental health facility to be used as prison

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Illinois is considering turning unused space at mental health facilities into prison space to ease a projected prison bed shortage, state Corrections Director Michael Lane said. Lane said the state cannot build prisons fast enough to meet the need and by 1984, there could be a 2,000 bed shortage.

"We need additional institutions," Lane said. "Our efforts will be to look at underutilized mental health facilities. We've already looked at a number of other state-owned facilities."

The prison population has swelled 87 percent in the past six years while the number of mental patients has dropped by more than 50 percent in the past decade.

The corrections department already uses two former mental health facilities in East Moline and Lincoln.

There's more to lettuce than iceberg

Most people automatically think of iceberg when they think of lettuce.

Though iceberg adds a definite crunch to a green salad, it is only the tip of the lettuce field.

Maryanne Guender of the New Jersey State Department of Agriculture thinks that she knows at least one reason for the emphasis on iceberg lettuce.

"People get used to this sort of salad when they eat out and get into the habit of serving it at home," she suggests. "It seems a pity to ignore the other kinds of lettuce, not to mention a variety of non-lettuce greens found in many markets."

There are five general types of lettuce; iceberg, Boston bibb, romaine, leaf and stem. They are all tender, flavorful and easy to keep fresh and moist in the refrigerator.

Stem lettuce, called celtuce, is especially interesting. Its large stem combines the flavor of lettuce with the tang of celery. It arrives at the market during the winter months to give a lift to cold-weather meals.

Other attractive greens are endive, escarole and chicory.

Curly endive grows in a bunchy head with narrow ragged-edged leaves that curl at the edges. The outer leaves have a strong flavor that verges on the bitter, while the paler inner leaves of yellowish white are gentler in taste.

There is another variety of endive with broad leaves that do not curl at the tips. This is usually marketed as escarole.

Chicory, which grows upright in a thin elongated stalk, is tightly folded, not bushy or flat like endive or escarole. Its satiny leaves are of such a pale green that they appear almost white. They have a marked and interesting flavor.

All of this sounds much more confusing that it is. The salad fancier has only to browse among the greens in the produce department to harvest the ingredients for a mixed green salad that is truly mixed and delightful to eat.

When buying any sort of green, look for freshness, crispness and outer leaves of a healthy green color. Avoid heads with brownish or yellowish bruises and discolorations.

Unless they are damaged, the outer or "wrapper" leaves should be trimmed rather than thrown away because they contain the most nutrients.

Core crisp head lettuce before washing. Other greens should be separated and washed, then drained and dried

Adult class in Chinese to be offered

NEWTON — An adult Chinese language course will be offered this fall by the Newton Chinese Language School.

Intended for persons having no experience in Chinese, the course will be given on Sunday afternoons from 2 p.m. - 4 p.m. at the Day Jr. High School off Walnut Street in Newton.

The course will be taught by Dr. Ching-Yun Keiser of Newton who is a senior staff at Raytheon Corporation. Her 10-year experience in teaching Chinese includes summer intensive course at Middlebury College (Vt), and beginners, intermediate, and literary chinese courses at Wellesley College.

The PIN-YIN phonetical system which serves to annotate the pronounciation of Chinese characters alphabetically will be used. Both written and oral drills (listening to tapes) will be assigned after each class session. The students, after taking the course, should know the sentential structure very well and be able to carry on simple. conversation. According to Dr. Keiser, they should also recognize a minimum of 300 Chinese characters and write at least 100 characters.

This course is limited to 12 students. Registration will be held on Sunday, Sept. 13th form 2 p.m. to 2:45 p.m. at the Day Jr. High School in Newton. Class will start at 3 p.m. the same day.

For further information and details, contact either Dr. Arthur T. Poe (861-7618) current principle or Dr. Ching-yun Keiser (965-9747) after 6:00 p.m.

Serving the community since 1959, Newton Chinese Language School is a non-profit organization devoted to the teaching of Chinese language, culture and arts and to enhancing the understanding and appreciation of Chinese heritage. Aside from the adult class, the school also offers a kindergarten class and 8 upper classes. The communities served by the school include Brookline, Wellesley, Weston, Needham, Sudbury, Natick, Framingham, Dedham, and Lexington.

Build Your Career Around Bentley

Are you ready to spell out a new career direction—begin the game of entering the job market—or add just the right letters (BS or BA) to help advance your present career? If so, you're ready to choose a course, program, or seminar from the many business offerings at Bentley College's Undergraduate Evening Division and the Center for Continuing Education.

The Evening Division

Most students in this part-time, credit-bearing, undergraduate division are employed full-time and bring maturity and valuable experience to the learning process.

The division offers a broad business focus leading to eleven degrees as well as a Certificate in Accountancy. Classes meet in the late afternoon, evening, or on Saturday on our Waltham campus or through extension programs in Braintree, Marlboro, Newton, and Randolph. And to be sure that you come out ahead of the game, the Evening Division offers workshops on note taking, essay writing, and exam preparation, plus free tutorial assistance in the Departments of English, Accountancy, Quantitative Analysis (math) and Computer Information Systems.

For help in planning your part-time undergraduate education, call our Evening Division (617) 891-2901.

Center for Continuing Education

Bentley's Center for Continuing Education can provide you with new skills and fine-tune your business talents through specialized courses and seminars, and certificate-granting programs.

Classes are planned for early evenings or Saturdays to easily fit into already busy schedules and registration can be conveniently handled by mail, phone or in person.

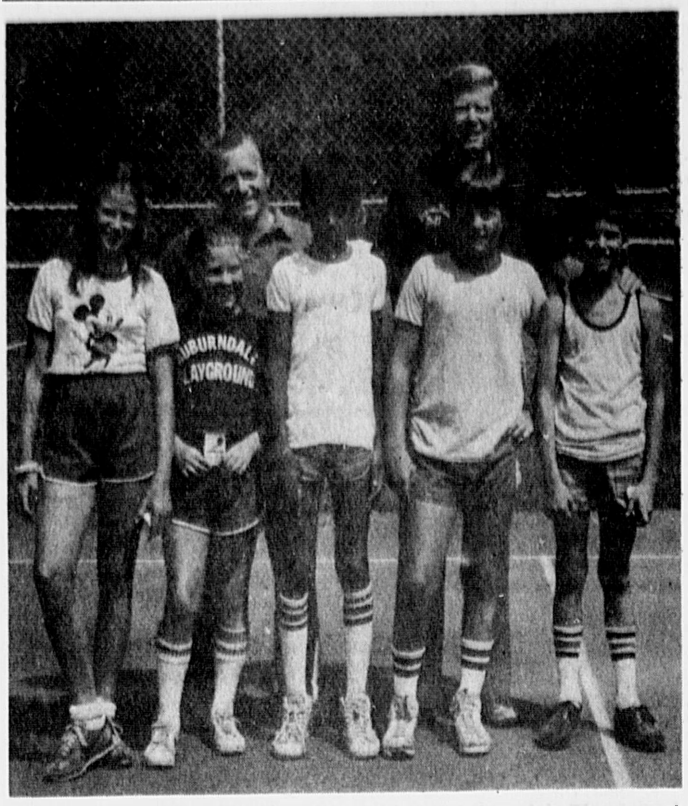

Increase your score in the business world when you choose from Continuing Education programs like Personnel Administration, Paralegal Studies, Accounting, Management, Real Estate, Taxation, Administrative Assistant, and Pension Administration.

Make the right move to build your future by calling Bentley's Center for Continuing Education (617) 891-2135, Monday-Thursday until 7 P.M.

Mini Bike Tracks to Open

The Newton Recreation Department's three track mini bike facility in Newton Highlands will reopen for the fall season on Saturday, Sept. 12. It is located on the site of the old infirmary on Winchester Street. The tracks will be open each Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. throughout the fall.

The facility will be directed by Steve Mazzola and Al Mazzola of the Recreation Department. This is the only legal public area in Newton where mini bikes may be operated. Bikes must be transported to the area in a legally registered vehicle. They may not be ridden or pushed on the public ways. Each rider must wear a helmet and hard-toed shoes.

Each mini bike must be equipped with a spark arrester, muffler, brakes in good condition, and safe tires. There is a $5 registration fee for each mini bike and a $1 fee for each additional rider of that bike.

Art Mural Underway

"Of the people, by the people and for the people" epitomizes muralist Lilli Ann Rosenberg's feelings about a beautiful mosaic community mural for Newton Centre in which she is currently deeply involved. Sponsored by the Newton Centre Improvement and Business Associations, George Levy of Chandler-Levy Hardware and the Arts in the Parks Program of the Newton Recreation Department, Lilli Ann spent a good part of the summer working with various community groups, with the students of the Summer Creative Arts program under the auspices of the public schools, and with many Newton residents helping them to make clay forms of flowers, cars, ice cream cones, bagels, building facades, fruit bowls, and all varieties of symbols that represent the business and recreational richness of life in Newton.

Funded in part by a seed grant from the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, the mosaic and clay pieces, inbedded in durable colored cement will be mounted on the brick wall of the building that is currently occupied by Brigham's in Newton Centre. This Newton Centre mural will join many others that exist in Cambridge, Boston, New York City, Indiana, and Columbia, South America completed by Mrs. Rosenberg over the past 25 years.

A Newton resident origially from California where she helped found the mural movement, Mrs. Rosenberg was the artist commissioned by the MBTA and the Department of Transportation to compose the 90 foot mural composed of mosaic, clay pieces and found objects, installed to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Parks Street Station two years ago.

Senior Adult Trip

Senior Adult Director Judy Dore, announces that the September trip will be to the Gingerbread Inn in Yarmouthport on Cape Cod. The choice of entree: Fish of the day or chicken. The date is Tuesday, Sept. 15 and Wednesday, Sept. 23. Cost of the trip is $9.50. Make checks payable to the Newton Senior Adult Association and mail to the Newton Recreation Department, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, 02166.

Senior Bowling League

The Newton Senior Bowling League opens the season at the Riverside Lanes in Watertown on Tuesday, Sept. 15. Participants bowl between 9 and 11 a.m. Cost is 75 cents a string, and bowling shoes are free. Those who wish to bowl in the league should go to the alleys on that date. All are welcome.

Senior Secrets

The Senior Secrets Cookbook will be ready for sale at the Octoberfest. Everyone is welcome to stop by the senior booth and taste one of the desserts and pick up a copy of the cookbook. The Jackson Apartments will host the senior booth.

CPR Course

Seniors interested in taking the CPR Course starting in the fall should call 552-7120 to register. Pat Savage will instruct in the lifesaving techniques of cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Participants will also be taught the techniques for helping a choking victim.

Newtones Open Season

The NewTones, a group of seniors who love to sing, will begin a new season beginning on Wednesday, September 9, from 11 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. There will be a user fee this year. Anyone interested in joining should call Judy Dore at 552-7120. Barbara Brilliant and Diana Levine will continue to direct the group. Meetings are held at the Recreation Center of the Horace Mann Apartments in Newtonville.

National League Finals

The Auburndale Sports Shop defeated C & K in a two-out-of-three series to win the 1981 season championship of the Newton National Baseball League. Following the final game, Ward 3 Recreation Commissioner Member Paul J. Burke presented the Buck Donahue Award, symbolic of the league championship to Coach Chub Ryan. Assistant coach of the Auburndale Sports Team were Warren Hays and Don Fox.

Commissioner Burke presented the Dell Ryan Trophy to C & K Coach Mike Buras. Assistant coach for the runner-ups was John Toomey. Present for the award ceremony were recreation supervisor, Robert E. Doherty and league coordinator, Frank Moore.

Women's Basketball League

Murphy's Fliptops defeated the Hare Sports 47 to 39 to win the Women's Summer Basketball League title. The Fliptops were coached by Sue Blinstrub and the Hare Sports by Laurie Barron. High scorer for the Murphy's was Judy Blinstrub with 13, while the top scorer for the Hare Sports were Lynn Levin with 14 and Amy Campbell with 12.

Newton Women's Twilight League

The 12th Annual Banquet of the Newton Women's Twilight League will be held at Post 440 on Thursday, Sept. 17. To obtain tickets, contact Jean Cole or Judy Dore at 552-7120. Tickets are $10.

Farmer's Market

Record crowds attended the Farmer's Market at the War Memorial Circle behind City Hall in Newton last Tuesday and Market Mistress, Sue King, expects more and more people to take advantage of this opportunity to purchase fresh fruits, vegetables, plants, flowers, eggs, and maple syrup.

The Farmer's Market is held from 3:30 to 7 p.m. each Tuesday. Each week there is a free raffle for a market basket of fresh produce contributed by the farmers. All are welcome to enter (one entry per person.) Last week's winner was Jeffrey Mendel of Otis Street, West Newton.

Youth programs at local YMCA to include sports, dance and crafts

NEWTON— The West Suburban YMCA in Newton launches its new youth program schedule this fall.

The youth soprts development program for boys and girls 6-12 will kick off with youth soccer at the "Y" and The Chickami Recreation Center in Wayland, beginning Sept. 12. Registration is now underway.

Youth sports development places major emphasis on participation, values, fun and fitness. Family involvement is welcome and encouraged. Other program offerings will include youth basketball, flag football, and more.

There will also be instruction in Judo, gymnastics, ballet, arts & crafts, woodworking, pottery and more.

The after school activities program will be back for youngsters in grades 1-6. It is a three part program featuring physical education, swim instruction, and a creative arts session. Children of all ages, beginning at six months will be able to take advantage of the Y's swim instruction.

Registration for classes other than Youth Sports offerings begins Sept. 8th, with courses beginning Sept. 21st.

For more info on class times and dates contact the West Suburban YMCA, 276 Church St., Newton, at 244-6050. Enrollment is limited.

Suburban "Y" has expanded adult courses

NEWTON — The West Suburban YMCA in Newton starts its fall course schedule in Sept. Many new courses have been added to the present curriculum.

Classes will begin the week of September 21st and run for eight weeks. General open registration begins Sept. 8th, and enrollment is limited.

Adult education and creative arts programs include instruction in:

Assertiveness for women, real estate, interior home decoration, a Wednesday evening lecture series involving topics of pertinent interest, basic computer programming, contract bridge, yoga, modern dance with jazz, dancercize, adult ballet, ballroom dance.

Also, sewing, drawing, sculpture, calligraphy, stained glass, pottery, photography, chinese cooking, and cooking beyond the ordinary.

In the area of aquatics, swimming instruction will be given to youth, beginning at 6 months, as well as adults. Senior lifesaving, and swimnastics classes will also be held.

The physical department will conduct courses that are not only fun but will keep you in shape.

Aerobics in motion will be offered at sites throughout Newton, Weston, Wellesley, and Brookline. These classes meet two or three times a week for twelve weeks.

Other physical department offerings will be:

She was the wife of the late Michael, and is survived by two sons, Joseph of Auburndale, and Michael J. of Brighton; three daughters, Annette O'Hare and Bridget Miola of Brighton, and Marietta Staples of Natick. She is also survived by 11 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

She was also the mother of the late Anthony, Domenic and Nicholas Totaro.

Funeral services were held Monday morning from the Andrew Magni Funeral Home, Newton, followed by a mass in St. Columbkille Church, Brighton. Burial was in Newton Cemetery.

TV's Flamingo Road back for fall lineup

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cristina Raines and the Rev. Donald Wildmon have one thing in common. They both were surprised — though for different reasons — to find "Flamingo Road" in NBC's fall lineup.

The torrid prime-time soap opera is a dream showcase for Miss Raines who plays Lane Ballou, the story's sultry, beautiful "other woman," but it stands at or near the top of Wildmon's Coalition for Better Television hit list.

The coalition surprised everyone last month by deferring the threatened boycott with which it had terrified the industry. Wildmon said advertisers suddenly had become "cooperative" about matters of sex and violence to which the coalition objects.

He was not worried Wednesday about "Flamingo Road."

"Distressed merchandise," he said in a telephone interview from his Tupelo, Miss., headquarters. "NBC can't afford to be selling distressed merchandise. I imagine there will be a substitute before the season ends."

Miss Raines, whose career has been climbing like a shuttle-shot in recent years, was more worried about Nielsen numbers than the boycott battalions.

"I was really surprised when it got picked up because the ratings were not steady at all," she said. "They fluctuated. They went from a 20 to a 36 to a 19 — it was up and down and up and down. Nobody really knew where we stood so I thought, well, they'll probably drop us like a hotcake."

If Wildmon isn't worried about "Flamingo Road," Miss Raines isn't worried about Wildmon and his followers.

"It doesn't surprise me that this has come up," she said. "I think it's a reaction to the past two decades. I think people are trying to gather a grounding ... There'll be a balance. There's always an overreaction, then it comes back to a balance."

Even if Wildmon is right and "Flamingo Road" doesn't survive the season, Miss Raines isn't likely to stay out of work. Her recent role as the beautiful, compassionate Lucinda in James A. Michener's "Centennial" was just the sort of thing Wildmon and his coalition would like to see all over the tube, and she wouldn't object to another shot at the genre — especially if it took her back to Colorado. She was raised in Florida, where "Flamingo" takes place, but she said "Centennial" left her "homesick" for Colorado."

"I would love it if Westerns came back," she said. "I love to go horseback riding and wear long dresses. I love doing period films and 'Centennial' was my favorite. I made so many friends on the set and in the location towns. I made friends with people in Greeley who took me home to dinner."

Certainly she doesn't rank "Flamingo Road" among things calculated to scandalize the folks in Greeley, or anywhere else in the grassroots of America.

"I think these kinds of shows are fun and I think people watch them so they can get to watch other people's problems and get a chance not to think about their own for an hour," she said.

Wildmon is not entertained by "Flamingo Road," "Knott's Landing" and a number of other targeted survivors of the past season, and he made it clear he is perfectly willing to unholster the boycott again if the next season doesn't meet his group's standards of decency.

"We're keeping a low profile intentionally," he said. "We have a lot of paperwork to do, but we're not asleep. We're just sort of in semi-hibernation. We'll be back."

So, says Miss Raines, will "Flamingo Road."

The "balance" remains to be seen.

Can you see straight?

Elderly people are gathered at a meeting.

The secretary reads the minutes of their last session. Then he passes around some printed material for consideration.

The members stir. One pulls his reading glasses from his pocket. A second simply closes one eye and squints at the document.

A third holds the reading matter at arm's length. A fourth pulls out a magnifying glass and peers through it.

Since age 40, most of us have been losing our ability to see. Ophthalmologists say that 98 percent of us will have some vision impairment by the time we're 80.

But don't worry. The majority of us won't go totally blind.

For clarity we note that the government uses the term "legally blind." A legally blind person may still have some vision.

The National Association for the Visually Handicapped prefers to skip the word "blind" altogether. Its emphasis is on "low vision." This is not the same as total blindness.

Low vision can be diagnosed and treated by specially trained doctors using special equipment.

This is a relatively new field of medical practice. Not all eye doctors understand the optical problems of patients with limited sight.

Can a low-vision expert help you?

You won't know until one of them gives you a comprehensive examination, advises the National Association for the Visually Handicapped.

The organization adds that your chances for success also depend upon you as a low-vision patient. You cannot be helped — no matter how good your doctor is — unless you put forth the necessary effort.

Moreover, you determine what constitutes success or failure. Success to one person may be failure to another. You must listen carefully to what the doctor says can be done for you and then set your goals accordingly.

FURNISHED MODELS ALMOST READY
Last chance to purchase at pre-opening prices!
At $250,000 to $350,000 the new homes at The Gables are an extraordinary value. There are many reasons.
LOCATION–The Gables, on Dedham Street at Murley Lane in Newton, directly adjoins the Charles River Country Club. The single family attached homes are clustered in small groups among the trees to take full advantage of the natural beauty of the site.
SPACE–The distinctive two and three bedroom homes are extravagant by contemporary standards. For example, the three bedroom unit offers 3100 square feet of living space, the smallest two bedroom, 1900 feet–unusual, when you consider that most new two bedroom houses contain less than 1200 square feet.
AMENITIES–Every home has its own attached two-car garage. There are large decks and/or terraces. Each home has a full basement, many with large windows and/or sliders. The private clubhouse looks out on an expansive sunning area, swimming pool and tennis courts. Combined electronic/guardhouse security protects you.
Pre-opening prices will be available only until the furnished models are ready. Astute buyers have already purchased 20 of the 29 currently available units. For complete information visit the sales office on the site–Dedham Street at Murley Lane in Newton. Open 9 to 5 daily, or phone (617) 969-0200.
